The Ironton and Piedmont clubs played an interesting game of ball here Sunday. Ironton was victorious in a score of 10 to 9. The Piedmont team, it is said, was picked from three or four towns, and they put up a very good game, but Ironton won. As usual, there was a large attendance.

Aug. Rieke leaves to-day on a trip to Germany. This is Mr. Rieke's first visit to Germany in twenty-four years. His mother, eighty-five years of age, is not in good health, and Mr. R. makes the journey more particularly to see her. He will be absent about three months. We wish him a pleasant voyage and safe return.

His honor, W. H. Buford, presiding judge of the county court, suspended court proceedings for a sufficient length of time Tuesday afternoon to perform the marriage ceremony for Thomas L. Sydnor, of St. Louis, and Florence Arnet, of Ironton. Sydnor is the coachman of R. A. Lewis, and his bride is the daughter of a well-known colored citizen.

The old gentleman that said there would not be any locusts in these parts this year has proved his prediction true. We have no locusts and our authority tells us that he still stays with his first assertion. We believe he knows what he is talking about. This again proves that one who has observed as he has passed through life comes nearer knowing the condition of affairs than those who have only book learning.—Jackson Herald.

The county court Tuesday afternoon refused to grant dramshop licenses to Wm. Steffens and J. A. Kerwin, Grantville, and Jehu Jones, Middlebrook. The petitions failed to state the lot and block in which the saloons were to be conducted, and on this technicality license was refused. They cannot file another petition and make application for license again until the November term of the county court. In the meantime Grantville and Middlebrook will have the lid on.

Says an exchange: "Microbes in everything you eat and drink, and if you eat and drink microbes you will surely die, and if you don't eat and drink you will surely die in any event, you had better pay no more attention to microbes than your granddaddies did. They ate and drank everything they wanted and they lived long and prospered. What did Methuselah know about microbes in his time? Eat and drink everything you want, microbes and all, and you will live until you die, and that is what old Methuselah did, he lived until he died."

County court devoted most of Monday and Tuesday to considering the saloon petition of Grandhomme & Holland. Mr. Edgar was present as attorney for the petitioners, and E. R. Lentz, of Poplar Bluff, appeared for the remonstrators. After going over the petition and the city tax book, the court announced, Tuesday evening, that the petition lacked one name of having a majority of the tax-paying citizens of the town. As Grandhomme & Holland's license expired the 6th their saloon is now closed, and Geo. Schultz has the only licensed saloon in town. His license does not expire until next November.

Ed. Delona, who lives at Elvins, Mo., went down to Annapolis about the 4th of July and made considerable noise. A warrant charging disturbance of the peace was sworn out against him, and last week he was arrested at Farmington and Constable Marshall went over for him Wednesday. On being arraigned before Justice

Rasche, Delona declared he was not guilty and said he would have a trial. The trial was set for Monday of this week. Witnesses were subpoenaed and a jury summoned. But when Delona walked into court that day he had changed his mind and entered a plea of guilty. Squire Rasche fixed his punishment at $10 and costs, amounting in all to $55, which Delona's brother says he will pay to-day.

The following interesting way in which a rattlesnake was the cause of revealing what the residents of the neighborhood just south of Acasta, Mo., have successfully kept in the background for so long, these many years, is vouched for by the best authority. It has often been remarked that in this particular neighborhood a search warrant wouldn't bring to light a single spoonful of intoxicating liquor, in fact they rather prided themselves on this fact. The other day Clarence Weller had the misfortune to be bitten by a rattlesnake, and when the news of the accident had spread about the community the telephone wires commenced to sing with "I'm coming with whiskey," or "come to my house and get all the whiskey you want." The fact developed that nine out of every ten residents in that prohibition section could "produce the goods" when the occasion warranted it. This is no snake story but an actual fact, for Martin Hanlon is our authority, and everybody knows Martin.—Ex.

MARRIED—On Thursday, August 1, 1907, Miss Julia Harding and William H. R. Brown were married at the residence of the bride, 4159 Botanical avenue, St. Louis, Mo. This is the culmination of a romance which had its beginning during the World's Fair. The bride wore a handsome blue silk traveling gown, with imported hat in blue and white. Only the immediate relatives of the bride and groom were present, and after due congratulations and good wishes, the newly wedded couple slipped out from the wedding party and took their train for a short bridal tour. The escape was so cleverly planned that the rice and other tokens, to be showered at the bridal party were left in the hands of Mr. Brown and his bride. A rush to the station was useless, and quantities of rice await their return. A large circle of friends wish for Mr. and Mrs. Brown a life-long happiness and a generous share of the good things of life. To these I beg to add my good wishes. Mr. Brown in his earlier years was for a long time an attaché of this office. I parted from him with regret, and have followed his career in the broader field he then adopted. If integrity and deserving may command success and happiness, they must indeed be his.

Why sell your butter for 15c to 20c per pound, when you can get 30c for your butter-fat at the creamery? Cash the 5th of each month.

From Mr. Hawkins. If the ringsters will continue to send such men as Damron and Hawkins to Jefferson City to ask the Governor to not commute the Spaug sentence, it is quite likely that he will pardon them outright.—Enterprise.

A friend pointed out the above paragraph to me. The paper containing it had been handed to him by a person who, though respectable, is on speaking terms with the editor of the sheet—which has about as much circulation as an oyster and as much influence as the braying of a burro. You may always know that it is not so if you see it in the Enterprise. Should a man bring a copy of the lying sheet into my home, it would be a signal for me to do a few stunts with the toe of my shoe. Its editor is lacking in intelligence if he thinks he can fool the people as to his position in matters attending the murder of Sheriff Polk. He would, if he could, have the people believe that he, deploring the fact of that crime, would have brought its perpetrators to the severest punishment under the law. He is editorially said as much; but it is patent to all close observers that his utterances on the subject have been predicated on a policy that will not denounce a wrong or defend a right in any case until dictated by two or three persons, of whom he is a mere puppet. He has criticized those who sought to bring the foul murderers of our sheriff to justice. Prosecuting Attorney Damron and myself have been the subject of unjust criticism and lying insinuation, because, in my opinion, he thought by attacking us he might in some way help the murderers. As natural for them to go to him for counsel and comfort as for water to seek its level. No wonder the Spaughs made his office their rendezvous! No wonder they enumerated him as their warm personal friend when talking to strangers. The editor of the Enterprise differs from the set only in courage. They will murder. He will besmirch the character of better men than himself, and rejoice when a murderer escapes the punishment he so richly deserves.

If I have brought condemnation upon my head because I have tried to be true to my friend, a fellow officer and his family, so be it. I have sympathized with the widow and the fatherless children; my small means and little influence have been for them. Benny has used his efforts to save the murderer from the gallows, and why? He says the "ring" must be fought! He has taken advantage of a stranger, unfamiliar with the circumstances, and tried to influence him to plead for the murderer, but never a word of sympathy for the widow or children. What think you of such a man—so called?

In conclusion, I have tried to do my duty as a fellow-officer and friend of John Polk. In doing so

I have done no more than 99 per cent of the citizens of Iron county have done. For doing that, the Enterprise has seen fit to criticize me. I will not express my opinion further of the editor of the Enterprise. If I ever talk to him personally I may find words that will suit my purpose, but I will not waste adjectives upon one known as he is known to this community: a liar by instinct and impervious to veracity and manhood. J. M. HAWKINS.

Mrs. T. E. Barnhouse Dies.

Sarah A. Higgins was born June 7, 1830, near the western boundary of West Virginia, died at her home near Rainier, Washington, July 11, 1907, aged 77 years, 1 month and 4 days.

Sarah Higgins was married to Thomas E. Barnhouse on May 2, 1850. Seven children were born to them, all dying in infancy save two, Francis Marion and A. L.

Barnhouse. The former lost his life in the early seventies in a Nebraska blizzard, while the latter is now a resident of Buckley.

Deceased leaves a husband, three sisters and two brothers to mourn her death. The subject of this sketch united with the Methodist Episcopal Church in her girlhood and for more than fifty years was an active worker in the Master's vineyard, but she had not been strong enough for some years to continue her labors in this way, though when her health permitted she was found at her place in church. She was a woman of much individuality, great energy and determination; a lover of all that was beautiful, good and dainty, for which characteristic her mother called her "Lady Sarah," a name she loved and clung to in her last years. She has many friends who will remember her with kindly regret.

The remains were buried near Rainier, Wash., Rev. Pearson, of Bucoda, conducted the funeral services.—Buckley (Wash.) Banner.
