reply was, "What's the use advising you? You will marry him, anyhow!" And that is what farmers are going to do if their heads are set for town, and if they dream of getting rich quick and easy. I note that none of them get a job of weighing out sugar for the government.

With my own experience and observation of others, and with the help of farm and horticultural papers, of which I take seven, I am working along on the farm; and, as the man said of his wife,
"I'm going to stick to Catherine."

John Westley Stevenson.

Died—At his residence, near Des Arc, Mo., Thursday, January 20, 1910, at 8:45 o'clock P.
M., Mr. John Westley Stevenson, aged 67 years, 2 months and 20 days, after a complicated illness of several months.

The deceased was born and reared near Des Arc, Mo., and was a resident of Des Arc community all his life. In 1864 he was united in marriage to Miss Ellen Shaver, and to them were born twelve children—ten boys and two girls. One of the girls died April 16, 1896, aged 21 years; the other daughter is Mrs.
Zell Lewis, of Hiram, Arkansas.
The ten boys are all living and married except one. Two of them live in Des Arc and two live at College Hill (Bethlehem.) Some of the boys live in Wayne county. They are all merchants, farmers and sawmill men.

The deceased was a successful farmer and several years ago had teams on lumber and log roads for T. P. Fitz, and had successful dealings with J. M.
Morris in the pioneer days of Des Arc. He was a very careful man. He never gave his note for a dollar in his life, never gave a mortgage, never sued any one and never was sued. The deceased was a man who lived a moral life and had the respect of the entire community.

Mr. Stevenson was a hard-working farmer, industrious and thoughtful, and faithful to his family and neighbors. I have known the deceased for many years. His children are of that kind that make friends wherever they go and are making a success in the business life, and as of their father—their name is as good as gold.

I became intimately acquainted with Mr. Stevenson and visited him quite often this winter.
I shall never forget the beautiful afternoon he and I sat on his front porch and I approached him in regards to his soul and reminded him of the fact of eternity and the destiny of the soul, the grave and the judgment, and heaven and hell. He thanked me for my interest in his welfare and asked me to come again. I went several times and talked and prayed with him, and three weeks before he died he was gloriously saved. He arrived at the place when his moral life did not satisfy his longing soul and was glad to seek Jesus.
While he had reared a family that was the pride of his life he often said, "if I had not left God out of my life how much happier it would have been."
He left evidence beyond a doubt that he had peace with God. I visited him and prayed with him and read the bible to him the day before he died, and his countenance shone with heavenly love and spiritual life. I shook hands and told him "good by," and that if we did not meet again here I would look for him in heaven. His answer was, "I am ready when God calls." Many good things can be said about the deceased but the best is he died a triumphphant death and had saving faith in Jesus' blood.

The funeral services were held in the Music Hall at the College. The writer conducted the services and read the 8th chapter of Psalms. Text, 4th verse: "What is man that thou art mindful of him?" It was one of the most touching funerals I ever witnessed and the largest attendance I ever saw at Des Arc. All were deeply touched as they looked into the face of the wife and saw her furrowed cheeks as the tears trickled down, and heard her sob and cry. Then the ten boys, heartbroken and lonely; and the daughter in Arkansas was too sick to be notified of her father's death. Wm. Stevenson, the oldest son of the deceased, is 45 years old. The mother and family weep. Forty-six years of family ties and love separated! Home can never be for this family the same again on earth. But, thank God, there can be a reunion in heaven, where sickness and disease and death are never known. Where sorrow shall flee away! I am over a friend to the family and an humble servant of Jesus.

Osteopathic Treatment.
(From Osteopathic Health.)
[Published by direction of Dr. W. J.
SMITH, Arcadia Valley Sanitarium, to whom application for further information may be made.]

THE OSTEOPATHIC PRIMER.
Would you like to have the A.
B. C.'s of osteopathy so briefly and simply put that you will be sure to understand them?

I will undertake that in this little Primer—to set forth the basic facts and principles of this science of natural, drugless healing so that you will comprehend the subject and likewise be able to explain it to others.

I fully realize the difficulty of explaining in a concise way a science which requires years of application to learn, and yet it is possible for you to understand clearly the fundamental principles which form the basic ideas of osteopathy. A little thought and study in this field will reward you a hundred-fold.

It is important for you to know and realize, without having to take your opinions second-hand from another, just what protection this rational system of treatment offers you and your loved ones in such a crisis as impending pneumonia or typhoid fever.

Osteopathy has come to stay.
It is no longer new. It has taken its place among the world's accepted methods of treatment.
Within two decades it has been accorded equal recognition with the older drug schools of practice.
To know what osteopathy really is, and what it is not, becomes, then, as much a personal duty as to understand any other issue claiming public attention.

Merely to take for granted preconceived ideas about osteopathy will not do. Most opinions expressed on this subject are founded on wrong information, misconception or even prejudice. To say that "it is like massage, Swedish movement, Christian Science, mind cure, faith cure, etc."—all of which is not true—is simply a confession of ignorance.

This "Osteopathic Primer" presents the subject to you in such a way that you will no longer be liable to confuse osteopathy with other institutions.

I can not attempt to tell you all about osteopathy, but merely something of it, which you can understand. Some of the underlying principles, briefly stated and applied to the body, will answer.
If I show you half a dozen of the many ways in which the osteopathic physician approaches the diagnosis and treatment of disease, you will realize, at least, that osteopathy is not a "one-idea" system, "treating everything just alike," as sometimes is stated.
To illustrate these principles by schematic drawings will help you see their application.

Moving to Town.
(From Farm Journal.)

Ed. Farm Journal:—I am now seventy-eight years old, an age at which my farming is on the order of Peter Tumbledown's.
Now I do not know how old Peter is, but if he is as old as I am, and if he is trying to farm with all hired help, I can somewhat overlook his short-comings and slovenly farming.

The most successful farmer nowadays is a stout man with three or four stout boys who do not want to quit the farm and move to town. To farm with all hired help is slow business and there is but little in it. I hear that Peter is talking of selling his farm and moving to town. Well, I have known quite a number of farmers who moved to town to get their "children into better society."

One of those farmers went into the grocery business, and in about four years was sold out and is now living in a rented house, hauling rock and working on the streets.

Some of the others' wives are taking in washing, and their girls are in factories and stores working ten hours a day.

When on the farm they had everything good to eat on their tables in the way of vegetables and fruits, eggs, milk and chickens, all fresh. They now have such things on the table but seldom, and of poor quality.

Some of their boys are clerking in stores, some are working on the streets and some are saloon-keepers. Now, there you are! How is that compared to a happy free life on a farm with plenty to eat, and the girls with rosy cheeks and bright, sparkling eyes, instead of the pale, tired, worn-out look of the girl in town shops?

I have no advice to give Peter or other farmers who are meditating selling out and moving to town; it would be like the girl who asked a friend's advice about marrying a certain young man. Her friend's
