

OLD FORT GEORGE

Interior of Maine Fortress Is Now a Ball Ground.

Historic Earthworks Built by the British in 1779 and Named in Honor of England's King—Outlines Still Visible.

Augusta, Me.—Ancient Pentagon, better known as Castine, situated on the eastern side of Penobscot bay and river, is one of the most prominent historic spots in Maine today. It has preserved the well-marked traces of the works of the past and no small settlement has within its borders so many earthworks and old forts. Foremost among the earthworks is Fort George, situated on the high land in the center of the peninsula. It was built by the British in June, 1779, and was named Fort George in honor of his majesty, George III. The fort is tetragonal in form with a bastion at each of the four angles. The bastion where was located the magazine was fully occupied by the entrances being made of arch passages of brick, which may be seen today, covered with mortar, and over them a layer of logs with a heavy covering of earth.

According to tradition and history, it was from these same barracks that Gen. Peleg Wadsworth escaped when held a prisoner in 1780, after being captured by the English at his home in Thomaston and taken to Castine, where he was confined for a long time. Following the departure of the British from Castine in 1815 the Americans took possession of the fort and the government had it repaired, strengthened and garrisoned, new barracks taking the place of those used by the British. The interior of the fort has long been used by the boys as a ball ground. The foundations of the old barracks are still visible.

History says that it was in this old fort that the gibbet was erected on which both Ball and Elliott were hanged. Both names were well known in the early period of Maine. The palisades, the barracks, the munitious of war and its buildings have all disappeared, but otherwise the old fort remains practically the same as when the British left it.

In early February of 1780, while the country was in a session of quietude following the conflicts of the preceding fall, General Campbell, then in charge of the garrison at Fort George, learning that his hated American foe, Gen. Peleg Wadsworth, was at his home on the St. George river in Thomaston, determined to make him a prisoner. The British general hearing that his only guard was six soldiers, he detailed Lieutenant Stockton with a force of twenty-five men to make the capture. A sharp sanguinary fight took place, in which several of the British soldiers were killed and wounded.

The news of the capture preceded the detachment on their return to Castine. The story is here told that General Campbell sent his compliments to General Wadsworth and a surgeon to dress his wounds, assuring him that his situation would be made comfortable. He was furnished with books and allowed to receive visitors. He died with the commandant and met all the principal officers of the garrison.

It was not long before General Wadsworth made application for a flag of truce, by which means he could transmit a letter to the governor of Massachusetts and another to Mrs. Wadsworth. This was granted on the condition that the letter to the governor should be inspected.

General Wadsworth's escape followed soon after. In company with Major Benjamin Burton he bribed their water carrier and from him received a gimlet. They bored holes in the boards of the side of their barracks, covering the holes with chewed bread. One stormy night they cut their way out with a knife and escaped. For miles they were forced to go through the then wilderness, crossing the river to Stockton, thence south through Belfast, Northport and Rockland to Thomaston. The fort was finally vacated in 1815.

HERMIT SET HIS FRACTURE

He Whittled Splints Out of a Board—Neighbors Are Warned Off.

Spokane, Wash.—Refusing with some display of anger all attentions proffered by sympathetic neighbors, B. Gray, an aged hermit, set his own leg, broken when a collar which he was digging caved in on him. The injured limb now rests in an improvised splint made of rough boards whittled and shaved by Gray.

Gray has resided in this lonely abode for the last year. Little is known of him. Occasionally he is seen wandering in vacant lots in search of fuel. He does odd jobs and is reputed to have a considerable sum of money.

URNS TO DEMOCRATS

PRESIDENT TAFT IN A MOST PECULIAR POSITION.

Is Relying on Opposition Party to Pass Measures Repudiated by His Own Followers—Opportunity for the Democrats.

The extra session which will meet on April 4 will assemble under curious conditions. The Republican president is committed to the passage of his tariff board bill and the Canadian reciprocity measure. The Democrats, who made the reciprocity bill a party measure in the last house, and contributed nearly twice as many votes in favor of reciprocity as Mr. Taft's own party, will have a comfortable majority at the extra session. They are committed to reciprocity, and will pass that and the tariff board bill with enthusiasm.

The Republicans will have in the senate a majority of only eight, against 28 in the past session. The Democrats and the Republicans who support Mr. Taft will have no difficulty in enacting the desired laws. The interesting question, however, is how much further will the Democrats go in framing tariff revision legislation, and how far will Mr. Taft go with the Democrats? The Democratic position is, perhaps, fairly expressed in their last national platform, adopted at Denver in 1908. There are phrases in that document which have a prophetic sound in the light of the events of the last three years:

"We welcome the belated promise of tariff reform affected by the Republican party in tardy recognition of the righteousness of the Democratic position on this question, but the people cannot safely trust the execution of this important work to a party which is so deeply obligated to the highly protected interests. . . . We favor immediate revision of the tariff by the reduction of import duties. . . . material reductions should be made upon the necessities of life. . . . and graduated reductions should be made in such other schedules as may be necessary to restore the tariff to a revenue basis. . . . We demand the immediate repeal of the tariff on pulp, print paper, lumber, timber and logs, and that these articles be placed on the free list."

The Payne-Aldrich tariff bill has been enacted since this platform was written; a campaign has been waged on the very ground that the revision was not sincerely undertaken or honestly performed; the complexion of the house has been changed and the Democrats have won victories all along the line; and, finally, a Republican president has himself fathered a reciprocity measure which is in almost exact accord with the Democratic tariff demands, and is now trusting to Democrats to save him when his own party has failed him.

The conditions seem right, therefore, for tariff excursions at the extra session beyond the field of Canadian reciprocity, but none the less it is not likely the session will be prolonged, or that radical or comprehensive revision will be undertaken. One reason is that the president would not permit radical revision at this time. The other reason is that the Democrats, if wisely guided, would not undertake a serious tariff program on such short notice.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Party's Responsibility.

The Democrats are face to face with a great opportunity, and also with a great responsibility. The test comes early, but there is no reason why it should not be successfully endured. The Democrats under the leadership of Mr. Clark, the new speaker, have shown wisdom and patriotism in their co-operation with the president. It is 19 years since the last Democratic house of representatives was elected. Then, as now, there was an extra session. Later came the fight over the Gorman-Wilson bill. Then followed the split of 1896 and the long exile from power. It must be that the Democrats have learned something from this bitter experience. They ought to have learned much. Adversity is supposed to be an excellent teacher, and certainly the Democratic party has had its share of adversity. Of course, we are all greatly interested in the reciprocity agreement, the tariff commission bill, and tariff reform; but the chief interest, we think, in the Democratic party and its probable course in the impending session of congress.—Indianapolis News.

Democratic League of Clubs.

The National Democratic League of Clubs is a national federation of Democratic clubs throughout the country. No dues are required and local independence is assured. The creed of the league is to educate young voters to become Democrats, to teach foreign-born voters that being Democrats will make them better Americans and to preach the policies of Jefferson and Jackson, day in and day out.

To a disinterested and unprejudiced observer it looks a little as if the senate committee's plan to allow Senator Lorimer $25,000 for his expenses in defending his right to his seat, and the senator's conscientious rejection of it might be something in the nature of a trap devised for the purpose of mollifying the public temper.

Notwithstanding the fact that it was a do-nothing session, it managed to get away with a billion or so of the people's money.

MUST MEET PEOPLE'S DEMAND

Revision of the Tariff Most Imperative Duty Devolving on Democratic Party.

The charitable doctrine that teaches us to say no ill of the dead does not apply to such a body as the congress which expired by limitation on the fourth of March. Passing over the rest of its mingled record of good and evil, the most important of its acts is the Payne-Aldrich tariff, upon which the country gave judgment last November. So complete and deliberate has been this judgment as to afford the authors of the bill no benefit of doubt on the grounds of popular passion and prejudice. The act was not a relief from the Dingley tariff, which in its breeding of monstrous industrial trusts and its spoliation of the masses of the people had become a national calamity. It requires a long bead roll to recount the predatory combinations that owe their birth, this prolific parent of monopoly, with the steel trust leading the long line.

There was little or no false pretense as to the character and intent of the Dingley act. It was admitted that many of its duties were raised to an exorbitant height with the view of moderating them by reciprocity treaties, which were never realized. The special session of the congress that has gone, which was summoned by President Taft to mitigate the burdens of the Dingley tariff, mocked the country with a hypocritical pretense of performing this duty when preserving all the worst features of that enactment. While a show was made of lowering duties on non-competitive imports and on some commodities competing with products of the trusts, duties were raised to prohibitory rates and in obedience to the combination of manufacturers and sheep growers the barbarous schedule of wool and woolsens was left untouched.

Upon the effects of this act, with its direct and indirect influences in grievously enhancing the cost of living throughout the land, and upon the congress that created it, the American people have solemnly pronounced their judgment. After a long reign of protection it will be for the new congress that now comes to life to meet in full measure the popular will that the tariff shall be relieved of its spoliation features. Of this the action of the Democrats of the house on the reciprocity agreement with Canada affords a cheerful augury.

Limit to Pension Expenditure.
The pension bill will carry an appropriation of $155,000,000, which is a good deal of money. The house of representatives had passed a bill—the Sulloway bill—which would have added probably $50,000,000 to this sum. It soon became apparent that it could not get through the senate as an independent measure. The president had let it be understood that he would veto it. Possibly the senate itself would have refused to take the responsibility of adding this great amount to our disbursements when there is already a persistent deficit. So the bill was offered as a rider to the pension appropriation bill. Senator Lodge raised a point of order against it on the ground that it was new legislation, and he was sustained by the vice-president. The notable thing about all this is that all the effective opposition to this measure was Republican opposition. For the first time in many years Republicans have begun to see that in the nature of things there must be a limit to the size of our pension bill. It was a Republican president who threatened a veto. It was a Republican senator who made the point of order against the pension rider, and a Republican vice-president who, as president of the senate, sustained it. The people would be glad to believe that this indicates a disposition on the part of our statesmen to exercise greater care henceforth in dealing with pensions. It would be encouraging to know that there actually are limits beyond which congress will not go.

Too Palpable a Fraud.
Gifford Pinchot asserts that an amendment written into the agricultural appropriation bill by the senate would take millions of acres out of the national forest reserves. The amendment provided that all land on which there is standing less than 4,000 feet of merchantable timber to a section of 160 acres shall be excluded from government reservations. Inasmuch as the amendment was proposed by Senator Fryburn, who is an avowed enemy of the policy of conservation, the fears of Gifford Pinchot were probably well-founded. Equally, if not more, inimical to a conservative land policy was the amendment tacked on the same bill by Senator Carter in aid of fraudulent mining claims. A prospector drops a gilt collar button and grubstakes a location on the pretense of having found gold. Senator Flint declared that half the timber land in California was taken under fraudulent mining locations. Senator Carter would have validated such frauds if the claims did not in terms include the timber—in fact, the timber is never specifically included. The hair naturally goes with the hide.

Wise Democratic Policy.
The Democrats, if they are wise, will help the administration to pass the reciprocity measure and the tariff board bill, and go home. They may point to their achievements and formulate at leisure their policies, which can be developed to advantage at the next regular session of congress. The country does not want a tariff campaign this summer; it does not wish congress to remain in session and the Democrats will doubtless use discretion. In the history of the party wise leadership was never more important.

CURE THAT SORE THROAT

Sore throat is inflammation of the mucous membrane of the throat, and if this membrane happens to be at all sensitive a predisposition to sore throat will exist.

Paxtine Toilet Antiseptic is both a preventative and a cure for sore throat because it possesses extraordinary cleansing, healing and germicidal qualities. Just a little in a glass of water, used as a gargle, will quickly relieve all soreness and strengthen the mucous membrane of the throat, and thus overcome all tendency to sore throat.

Paxtine is far superior to liquid antiseptics or Peroxide for all toilet and hygienic uses. Paxtine may be obtained at any drug store, 25 and 50c a box, or sent postpaid upon receipt of price by The Paxton Toilet Co., Boston, Mass. Send for a free sample.

Famous Eccentric Toasts.

Private Donahue and Private Leahy were the best of friends, but when Private Donahue became Sergeant Donahue, Private Leahy saw the fallings of his former companion with amazing clearness. "Sergeant," he said one day, after long, fixed gazing at his superior in rank, "if a private stepped up to a sergeant and called him a constipated little monkey, what wud happen?" "He'd be put in the yard-house," said the sergeant.

"He wud?" "He wud." "But if the private only knew the sergeant was a constipated little monkey, and said niver a wurd, wud he be put in the yard-house for that?" inquired Private Leahy. "Av course he wud not," said the sergeant, loftily. "Well, thin, for the present we'll have it go at that," said Private Leahy.
