

TEARS

NEW YORK—"Weeping," says Dr. Sarah J. McNutt, for twenty years teacher and professor in two medical institutions and a woman who knows what her sisters are doing, "may almost be considered as in the past tense. I venture to say that where there used to be hundreds of women lying face down in the pillows blubbering and having terrible times over just nothing at all there are not ten now. Why, it used to be just as much a custom with some women to devote half an hour a day, usually in the afternoon, to half-forced crying as it was for them to get up in the morning.

"With some there was what may be called a morbidly joyous search for that which would give them an occasion for grabbing the handkerchief and entering upon a sobbing session. With others they simply hurried their duties along so as to be sure that nothing would interfere with the daily cry. Still another sort of woman just trusted to luck that the day would not be made wholly unbearable by the absence of some trivial incident suggestive of woe.

"Tears in those days were quite as contagious as the measles. The period of incubation was very brief. Neighbors hung out clothes in the back yards and then leaning over the fence would recall some doleful incident of twenty years back, in which neither had any direct interest, and thereupon the pickets they would mingle their tears until household duties called them away.

Some Cause for Their Grief.
"Now, it may be that there was some excuse in a small percentage of these cases, but only in a few. It should have been quite as easy for a woman to look at the world sensibly then as it is now. But they didn't seem to know how. Women used to keep more to themselves than they do now. They used to sit and think about themselves and magnify small things into large ones and try to carry all the world's woe on their shoulders, and then, knowing full well that they were in for it, they would seek relief in the easy way.

"When woman began to get a grasp of herself and to find that she was in the world to do something besides weep and moan and sob and sigh the situation began to change. The status of woman in the household had much to do with making her a weeper, just as her new status has made her the happy, smiling woman we see around us now.

"Man used to be the unit in the household and the wife obviously became the cipher. The unit would take his place at the head of the table and between mouthfuls deliver monologues on the state of the nation and society, to which the cipher would be a patient, although generally not an interested listener.

Man the Supreme Monarch.
"He expressed all the opinions for the domestic establishment, made its laws, interpreted them like a high court and administered them. Being the silent member the wife found no other way to relieve herself than to get away in some dark corner with a camphor bottle and booboo until she had a pain in the stomach and her eyes frightfully red. Then she would draw one final sigh, broken up into half a dozen sections, and hurry to the kitchen to resume her interrupted duties.

"She sniveled through the long winters, sobbed when the birds were singing in the spring, wept from planting time until after harvest in the fall, and were it not for her generally good constitution she would have been under the weeping willows before she was thirty.

"When woman of that period went out to do a little shopping it was customary for the husband to go along and of course carry the wallet. She would timidly buy five cents' worth of needles and thread, and he, with a flourish, would slowly unwind the strap from the pocketbook and count out the change, take the package and hand it to her, and she in turn would sigh her thanks for this evidence of generosity and love.

"It is a true picture that I have undertaken to draw—true every word of it. No wonder that women went around with granulated eyelids and fluttered a sigh with every tenth breath.

Old Order of Things Changed.
"Of course, it was inevitable that women would get away from this condition of oftentimes self-imposed depression. They just had to wake up. The old order of things had to pass. The great sisterhood of American women has stepped out of the shadows into the sunlight and it is getting something real and good out of life now.

"It would be inaccurate to say that women have given up crying altogether, but they have progressed to a point where they no longer have nerves forever on edge and tears forever on tap.

"Now I will tell you how I think it came. Just as soon as a woman ceases to imagine that she is the most utterly forlorn and unhappy person in the world she is bound to get a new angle on herself. Women today have minds for other things than themselves. They are not worrying over what they used to call their sad fate. They are thinking about others.

about matters of some moment, about books and plays and gardens and happiness, and when they give to these things all the time they deserve there are no spare moments for lone-lone moaning, accompanied by sniffs.

Exit the Day of the Tear.

"There are in round numbers 60,000 clubwomen in New York. Do you suppose any of them will spot a face handkerchief with a tear today? Not one. How many of the bright-eyed young business women—stenographers, typewriters, clerks, office assistants and all the others—do you imagine will go to business this morning wondering whether they will find time for a good cry during the day? Not one, unless she is ill. How many of the shopgirls on the east side and in Brooklyn do you suppose will go sniffing to their work today? Not one. They are too busy."

Dr. McNutt took a number of books from the top of her desk and dropped one upon another with a slam.
"There," she said, "are seven antidotes for tears. If you want others, there are the newspapers. I'm a great believer in novels. I read a lot of them. They give me just the kind of mental thrill that is good for me. A good, clean story without a problem is a tonic.

"If I could put a chauffeur novel in the hands of some of our women who still think there is something to weep over in everyday life I believe I could shut off the flow of falls of tears. All of our young women read nowadays. Take the girl just out of the office. She jumps into the novel yacht or the novel automobile or climbs onto the novel load of hay and away she goes. If she is in the novel yacht she goes dancing over the waves of the Sound and feels the cool spray in her face. When night comes the yacht puts in at Stamford or New Haven and she goes to sleep and is lulled to pleasant dreams by the splash of the water. She slips on her goggles and goes spinning over the road in the machine, her hair flying and sights changing all along the way.

Reading That Has Helped.
"One thing about stories is that you do not have to do any talking yourself. Writers have a way of making people say just the thing that the reader would like to say were she in the book. That helps a lot. It doesn't tire one. Unconsciously the reader enters into the enjoyment of the spirit of wholesome adventure that runs through the pages and it seems to be real. You see it helps a woman to get into a new atmosphere, and in that lies the secret of cheeriness.

"The really busy woman has no time to snivel. She knows that it is time wasted. She knows that it means nothing in comfort and that it is bound to make her nervous and take the snap out of her eyes.

"Yes, yes; crying is rapidly becoming a lost art. The bottle of smelling salts still dangles at the end of the chateleine chain, but its use is purely decorative. The sniff and sob are no longer modern."

"Women," said Dr. Mary MacMillan, "have become more philosophical in recent years. They have found that tears are unproductive of substantial results and therefore not to be summoned at frequent periods. A woman friend of mine had a daughter among the passengers on the Olympic when that vessel met with an accident on the other side. The girl very thoughtfully sent a cablegram to her mother telling of her safety. It was received on this side with smiles instead of tears.

"I imagine it would have been different a generation or two back. One night picture a mother then wringing her hands and sobbing quite as if she had met with a great misfortune.

Days of Mingled Tears.
"It was customary, I have been told, for news of joyful character concerning an incident of some seriousness to be received with great outpourings, which were not confined to the person most interested, but participated in by others in the immediate circle of relatives and friends. The person whose tears fell first would naturally send for the next nearest relative, who would hear the news and then mingle her tears with the other's. Then others would come in and take out their handkerchiefs and form part of the circle. About dusk the manifestations of lachrymal disturbance would reach its height, for the shadow period is supposed to be appropriate for it, after which it would subside and by and by there would be a general brightening up. I have heard it said that much satisfaction was had on occasions of the sort, but we now know that it was a mistake.

"There are legitimate occasions for tears without creating them, but there are few trials which may not be faced by women without tears. Women no longer live in an atmosphere of what may be called the weebone. They do not look at life from the vale of tears viewpoint, and it is well that they do not. With smiles taking the place of tears there will be buoyancy instead of depression, cheerfulness instead of moroseness. Healthy, normal women ought not to weep and few of them do."—New York World.

WEIGHING MACHINE FOR NAVY

Porhydrometer Will Tell Dead Weight of Ship's Cargo at Any Time.

A porhydrometer is to be installed on the Neptune, the newest collier built for the navy, for experimental purposes. The secretary of the navy has just authorized an expenditure of about $3,500 for that purpose. A porhydrometer is an apparatus designed to weigh with the utmost accuracy the dead weight placed on board or removed from any ship, barge or other floating vessel to which it is fitted. It is based on the principle that a body floating in a liquid of whatever density exactly displaces a quantity of the liquid equal to its own weight. By its application a vessel is transformed into a gigantic weighing machine. Anything added to or removed from its cargo is accurately recorded by the machine in accordance with its weight in pounds. That applies to human beings as well as other freight, so that the absence of a single passenger or member of the crew of a vessel or the addition of another person is recorded.

The weighing is done by means of an aerometer connected with a vertical tube fitted in the center of the vessel and extending from well below the water line to well above the load line. This tube is connected by a pipe with the outside shell of the vessel so that when the valve or cock is opened the water in which the vessel is floating has free access to the vertical tube and rises in it to exactly the same level as outside the vessel.

In case the apparatus does all that is claimed for it, it will be of great value in the handling of coal for naval vessels and in the settlement of disputes about the quantity of coal shipped on naval vessels or at foreign stations.

Says Missionaries Lack Tact.
Professor Frederick W. Williams of Yale, who is an expert on China, believes too many missionaries to the Chinese are tactless, according to the New York Sun. To their tactlessness he imputes the small number of Chinese converts.

Professor Williams, at a luncheon at Princeton said last month: "I have known missionaries as ignorant of tact as Jim Driscoll was ignorant of foot rules."

"Jim Driscoll, a farm boy, got a job in a steel mill, and his boss gave him a foot rule one day, and said: 'Measure me that plate out there in the yard.'

"Jim at the end of a half hour, returned and said: 'The plate is the length of the rule and three fingers over, with this piece of cobblestone, and the stem of my pipe and my foot, from here to here, bar the tobacco!'

Adaptation That Aims to Set Forth the Trials and Tribulations That Beset Life.

1. My wife is my boss, I shall not deny.
2. She maketh me lie down behind the bed when the swell company comes, and she leadeth me behind her up Main street.
3. She restoreth my pocketbook after she has spent all its contents on hobbie skirts and theater tickets, and she leadeth me up the main aisle of church for her new hat's sake.
4. Yea, though I walk more than half the night through dark rooms with a crying baby, I will get no rest, for she is behind me; her broomstick and her hatpin they do everything else but comfort me.
5. She prepareth a cold snack for me, then maketh a bee-line for an old society supper. She anointeth my head with the rolling pin occasionally. My arms runneth over with bundles before she is half done her shopping.
6. Surely her dressmaker's and millinery bills shall follow me all the days of my life and I will dwell in the house of my wife forever.—Exchange.

A LIVING IMAGE.

Mrs. Fondmar—There! Isn't baby the image of his father?
Oldchumme—Sure! Same lack of expression, same red nose, no teeth to speak of—and, by George! prematurely bald head, too!

BABY'S TERRIBLE SUFFERING

"When my baby was six months old, his body was completely covered with large sores that seemed to itch and burn, and cause terrible suffering. The eruption began in pimples which would open and run, making large sores. His hair came out and finger nails fell off, and the sores were over the entire body, causing little or no sleep for baby or myself. Great scabs would come off when I removed his shirt.

"We tried a great many remedies, but nothing would help him, till a friend induced me to try the Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment but a short time before I could see that he was improving, and in six weeks' time he was entirely cured. He had suffered about six weeks before we tried the Cuticura Soap and Ointment, although we had tried several other things, and doctors, too. I think the Cuticura Remedies will do all that is claimed for them, and a great deal more.

(Signed) Mrs. Noble Tubman, Dodson, Mont., Jan. 28, 1911. Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold by druggists and dealers everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. 18 F Boston.

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS

Genuine Merit Required to Win the People's Confidence

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been cured, to those who are in need of it.

In an interview on the subject a prominent local druggist says: "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows immediate results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy that I know of has so large a sale."

The success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact that it fulfills every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder diseases, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

A free trial bottle will be sent by mail, absolutely free. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and mention this paper. Regular size bottles sold at all druggists—50c, and $1.00.

"What kind of an animal is that supposed to be?" asked one of the other.

"You surprise me with your thickness," returned the second cop. "That's a govtilla. Never hear of them before?"

THERE WITH A REPUTATION

Doubtful and Humiliated Hubby Now Probably Believes Wife Can Keep a Secret.

The late William Ritchie Wister, the father of American cricket, might also be said to have been a godfather of the feminist movement," said a woman writer at the Acorn club in Philadelphia.

"Mr. Wister," she continued, "abominated that type of husband who treats his wife like a child, refusing to take her into his confidence. I once heard Mr. Wister tell a story about a German-town man of that sort.

"The man came back from a business meeting wherein the future welfare of himself and his family was vitally involved, but he declined to tell his wife what had been the meeting's outcome.

"Oh, no," he sneered, "I can't tell you anything. You'd repeat it if I did. You, being a woman, are constitutionally unable to keep a secret."

"But the wife, with a quiet smile, retorted: 'George, did I ever let the secret of how you were led astray that summer the church conference met in Chicago and got arrested in a saloon for biting off the bartender's ear?'

Ruskin Pitied Americans.
It is not only the half million bricks of Tateshall that have been numbered for trans-shipment across the Atlantic. Ruskin, when he was a boy, pitied the Americans for being so unhappy as to live in a country that has no castles. They will have a castle now, and no nation likes to be pitied. But the other importation, made by Mrs. Gardner as an addition to her Italian villa near Boston, was that of an entire chapel as it stands, with all its interior furnishings, even to the half-burned candles in the altar. The monks who served the chapel had been scattered by the strong hand of the law, and the building was to be devoted to the pickax. The courageous American lady had it packed up in a Venetian hill country, where it stood, and carried down piecemeal and embarked.—London Chronicle.

Weak Heart
Many people suffer from weak hearts. They may experience shortness of breath on exertion, pain over the heart, or dizzy feelings, oppressed breathing after meals or their eyes become blurred, their heart is not sufficiently strong to pump blood to the extremities, and they have cold hands and feet, or poor appetite because of weakened blood supply to the stomach. A heart tonic and alterative should be taken which has no bad after-effect. Such is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which contains no dangerous narcotics nor alcohol.

The ingredients, as attested under oath, are Stone root (Collinsonia Canadensis), Bloodroot (Sanguinaria Canadensis), Golden Seal root (Hydrastis Canadensis), Queen's root (Silybia Silyvestris), Black Cherrylark (Vincum Virginicum), Mandrake root (Podophyllum Peltatum), with triple refined glycerine, prepared in a scientific laboratory in a way that no druggist could imitate.

This tonic contains no alcohol to shrink up the red blood corpuscles; but, on the other hand, it increases their number and they become round and healthy. It helps the human system in the constant manufacture of rich, red blood. It helps the stomach to assimilate or take up the proper elements from the food, thereby helping digestion and curing dyspepsia, heart-burn and many uncomfortable symptoms, stops excessive tissue waste in convalescence from fevers; for the run-down, anemic, thin-blooded people, the "Discovery" is refreshing and vitalizing. Stick to this safe and sure remedy, and refuse all "just as good" medicines offered by the druggist who is looking for a larger profit. Nothing but Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery will do you half as much good.

The Bishop and the Boy.

The late Bishop Williams of Connecticut was very fond of children, and it was always a joy to us youngsters when he came for his visit to my father's parish. His anecdotes and stories enlivened the whole household. Once when he was staying with us he told the following story:

"One Sunday morning, just after breakfast, I repaired to the rector's study, where I was soon followed by his little four-year-old son, who climbed up on my knee and began to talk. Suddenly the little fellow looked up into my face and said: 'Bishop, do you want to see my plucky book?'

"Yes, indeed," said I. So the child slid down and started to get the book. When half-way across the room a sudden idea seemed to strike him, and, running back and putting one hand on my knee, he looked up in my face and shook his little forefinger at me, whispering: 'Bishop, it's Sunday. We must do as on se sly!'"—Harper's Magazine.
