READER ALLOWED ONE GUESS. Did This Pleasant Little Conversation Take Place During or After the Honeymoon?

He threw down his paper. "I wonder if the colonel really means to try it again?" "What did you say, dear?" "If you'd been listening you wouldn't ask me."

"If you had said anything worth hearing I'd been glad to listen." "How do you know you would?" "Try it."

He glared at her and wisely says nothing. She picks up the paper. "Dear me," she says, "I wish they'd settle it."

"Settle what?" "The length of next fall's skirts." He snorts. "Is that all you can find in the paper?"

"I guess it's a good deal more important than the stuff you find." "Do you mean to compare a paltry skirt to the stupendous living issues of the hour?"

"Oh, go jump into the River of Doubt!" "What do you know about the River of Doubt?" "As much as anybody knows. Bah!" "Bah yourself!"

NO LONGER IN THE MARKET. Mr. Meekens Had Supplied Himself With a Letter Opener That Could Not Be Improved On.

A canvasser stepped briskly up to Mr. Meekens' desk and laid a small article close to his right hand. "I have here a new letter opener," he said.

"I have already the best letter opener and the quickest." "How long have you had it?" persisted the canvasser. "You know there are constant improvements always being introduced."

"Mine couldn't be improved," responded Meekens. "I've had her for about two years now—anniversary of the wedding next month."

Those Artists! They were walking through the galleries with a growing air of disapproval. Before a painting of a woodland dell, with nymphs and fauns dancing, dressed informally as nymphs and fauns should be, the middle-aged unoppressed couple paused.

Umbrellas are in great demand in the Netherlands, where light rains are frequent. Usually a man gives away better advice than he ever receives.

Religious Scruples. A soldier is allowed to "change his religion," as it is termed, if he can convince his commanding officer that he has good reasons. On one occasion a man intimated his desire.

"Now," said the colonel, "what are your reasons? Have you conscientious convictions in regard to the matter?" The man intimated that he had.

"And," continued the colonel, "to what denomination do you wish to be transferred?" Said the ease-seeking Tommy: "I disremember the name, sir, but it's them as parades for church half an hour later than the others."
