You've hit the right tobacco when you fire-up some Prince Albert in your old jimmy pipe or in a makin's cigarette. And you know it! Can't get in wrong with P. A. for it is made right; made to spread-smoke-sunshine among men who have suffered with scorched tongues and parched throats! The patented process fixes that—and cuts out bite and parch.

All day long you'll sing how glad you are you're pals with

It's an easy job to change the shape and color of unsmokable brands to imitate the Prince Albert taste and punch. It is impossible to imitate the flavor of Prince Albert tobacco! The patented process protects that!

PRINCE ALBERT the national joy smoke

You take this testimony straight from the shoulder, men.
You can smoke a barrel of P. A. without a kick! It hands out all the tobacco happiness any man ever dreamed about, it's so smooth and friendly. It's a mighty cheerful thing to be on talking-terms with your pipe and your tongue at the same time—but that's what's coming to you sure as you pin your faith to Prince Albert!

From Mr. Hilburn.

Editor Register—In to-day's Shreveport Times we are told that Secretary Garrison favors compulsory military service, and so do a lot of other ginks who are able to buy officers' commissions for their own sons, or what amounts to the same thing, have money to give them the necessary schooling.

But why compulsory? Is it because the workers have discovered the palpable deception in the beautiful posters that adorn every Postoffice in the land showing the beauties of a soldier's life?

But there is a way to have an adequate army without conscription.
Make the government of this country so great and good that all will be willing to fight for its life as for their own. Take the snobbery out of the army, let the brightest minds lead.
Promotion from the ranks. But above all it is the duty of the individual to defend the country, than it is the country's duty to defend the individual. Does the government ever do that? Not on your life. As long as the laborers of the country will submit to robbery the government is unaware of any trouble, but let them strike and "presto," the guards are called out—to protect the strikers against the hired assassins known as "private detectives?" Not any. "To hell with the miners," "save the mules." What has this country done to avenge the deaths of innocent people in West Virginia, Michigan, Colorado, or what are they now doing in Ohio? Protecting property, "saving the mules," as usual. Will Garrison and his ilk, who believe in force, ever respect the rights of the laboring people?

Yes, when they have to. Not before. And this compulsory idea is called democratic. Listen to this guff: "Secretary Garrison told the House Military Committee at a hearing to-day that compulsory service was the only really adequate basis upon which to construct a military policy, compatible with the idea of democratic government." "Compulsory." That means the other fellow, of course. The poor shall be drafted (that was what we called it in the good old days) into the army and the rich, or well-to-do, be commissioned as officers. Snobocracy! Good-bye, American liberty!

F. P. HILBURN,
Lewisville, Ark., January 9, 1916.

Origin of the Joplin Zinc and Lead Deposits.

(From U. S. Geological Survey.) Lead was discovered and mining began in southwestern Missouri in 1848.
Some zinc ores must have been found with the lead ores from the very first, but at that time they had no value as all the zinc smelters were in the eastern part of the United States. In 1867 and 1869 zinc works were established at St. Louis and zinc mining became profitable. The production of zinc ore soon became equal to that of lead ores and has ever since been an active industry in that region and in the adjoining parts of Kansas and Oklahoma.

The region, generally known as the Joplin district, has been the subject of a number of geological investigations. Geologic surveys of the district were made by the State of Missouri in 1870, 1874, and 1894, and a survey of the Granby area was made in 1907. Surveys were made by Kansas in 1907 and by Oklahoma in 1912. The Federal Government surveyed the region in 1893, 1901, 1907, and a report on a survey of the Wyandotte quadrangle lying partly in the northeastern corner of Oklahoma and partly in Missouri, is now in preparation by C.
E. Siebenhal of the United States Geological Survey. In studying the ore deposits of this area, Mr. Siebenhal reached certain conclusions regarding the genesis of the ores which are somewhat at variance with those reached by some other investigators but are in general confirmatory of the findings of the United States Geological Survey's earlier work.

In these investigations, the original source of the metals has generally been the subject of much speculation and study. Analyses of large quantities of material show the general presence of measurable quantities of lead, zinc, and copper in the pre-Cambrian crystalline rocks, in the Ordovician limestones, and in the Mississippian limestones, and it is also known that the Pennsylvanian shale in a few places carries appreciable quantities of lead and zinc. These rocks comprise all the geologic groups that make up the Ozark Uplift, and each group has been considered the immediate source of the metals by one or more writers on the geology of the ores.

The Government reports of 1901 and 1907 expressed the view that the metals were derived in whole or in part from the Cambrian and Ordo-vician dolomitic limestones from which they were brought up by an artesian circulation and deposited in openings in the Mississippian limestones. The present report, the result of several years study, likewise holds that the ores were deposited by ascending artesian solutions which derived the metals chiefly from the Cambrian and Ordovician limestones.

Among the items of evidence cited in support of this view is the fact that natural waters of the type found in the deep wells of the Joplin district commonly carry zinc as well as lead and other metals. A large number of analyses of such waters are given, among them several analyses of waters from deep wells in the Joplin district or from the region in Kansas and Oklahoma bordering the Ozark Uplift. These wells draw their supply from the Cambrian and Ordovician limestones and their waters not only carry traces of zinc and lead, but when they are allowed to stand in tanks or reservoirs for a while they deposit a sediment that shows considerable proportions of these metals.

The sediment from a waterworks reservoir in Kansas showed a total of 8 pounds of zinc sulphide which had been deposited in a year.

Other evidence is afforded by the relation of the ore deposits to the present distributions of the Chattanooga shale. This shale covers the Cambrian and Ordovician formations over a part of the Ozark Uplift and acts as a septum between these rocks and the Mississippian above to prevent the ascent of solutions from below. Over the area underlain by this impervious shale there are no ore deposits.

Much other evidence in showing that the ores were deposited by ascending artesian water is presented in a report just published by the United States Geological Survey as Bulletin No. 606, which may be had free on application to the Director, at Washington, D. C.
