Out of Old Albania. Save in Epirus, where Greek culture holds the towns, and even the Moslem Albanians of the hills write (when they can write at all) in Greek letters, no foreign influence has yet invaded the intimate life of this exclusive race. Individual Albanians have, indeed, given their talents to bring unity or order to the life of other peoples. Half the captains by land and sea of the Greek wars of independence were Albanians from Epirus or the isles. Crispi came from the Albanian colony in Sicily; the khedivial family imposed itself on Egypt; the last grand vizier of the old regime in Turkey was a South Albanian magnate. But no native church, no native literature, no local field for statesmanship has yet exercised the talents of a race which is certainly not the least gifted of the Balkan peoples. Until recently an Albanian educated was an Albanian lost.

The Real Need. "Do you believe that we should have a more elastic currency?" asked the man who is always talking national finance. "Not much!" mumbled the man with the shiny clothes. "It's elastic enough now. What they ought to do is make it more adhesive."

And Then Some. It has been said that all the mean acts of his life are quickly brought before a drowning man. The same might also be said of a candidate for office.—Exchange.

Name Does Not Denote Value. The original Delft pottery is undoubtedly of great value to collectors of antiques as it dates from the fourteenth century, but the name proves nothing, as any colored glazed earthenware made after the delft pattern may bear that name.

Davy Crockett's Rifle Now in National Museum

WASHINGTON.—Among the thousands of relics in the National museum there are few objects more replete with historical interest than a certain Derringer rifle, catalogue No. 9,508. This rifle was used by Col. David Crockett of Alamo fame, and also was the weapon fired by William J. Graves in the duel with Jonathan Gilley, resulting in the death of the latter. It was made about one hundred years ago, and the curator of the division of technology says it is an exceedingly well made and finely finished gun, being still in excellent condition. It is a .44-caliber, muzzle-loading, sporting rifle; the octagon rifled barrel is 45 inches long, and fitted with a full stock of curly maple, plain open sights, a percussion lock and a "set" trigger. Col. Wright Rives, U. S. A., who has deposited the rifle in the museum, says it was made for his father, John Cook Rives, by Henry Derringer, celebrated for manufacturing superior firearms, particularly the well-known pocket pistol known as the derringer.

Louis Ludlow Really Didn't Need an Automobile

THIS has to do with Louis Ludlow, the Hoosier correspondent, figured as a near-purchaser of an automobile. Mr. Ludlow is by all odds the champion pedestrian of the newspaper profession of Washington. He has a walk that is a cross between a kangaroo's jump and the lunge of a horse, and in order to keep step with the average citizen it is necessary for him to take about three reefs in his stride. In his daily routine, in which he will travel between twelve and fourteen miles, Mr. Ludlow runs to each point on schedule time. Representatives of opposition papers on more than one occasion have endeavored to reach a telegraph office in advance, only to find that Ludlow had been there about eight leaps ahead. So it was anything but a happy thought that prompted the agent of a local automobile house to take on Mr. Ludlow as a possible purchaser. It is not yet clear just what attracted him to Mr. Ludlow. Some think the formidable array of newspapers he represents, as chronicled in the Congressional Directory, was the main reason, but there are those who think the agent was given a wrong steer, just to add a bit of excitement to Louis' routine life. He found Ludlow in his Munsey building office, just reaching for his hat. The agent mentioned he would like to have a few minutes' conversation and thought he could interest Mr. Ludlow. The latter replied he was in a hurry and that they could talk as he journeyed toward the capitol. The first city block traveled enabled the agent to make a fairly good start with his discourse on the merits of his machine, but Ludlow's mind was a long way off, busily calculating the number of committee room doors he would probably find locked, necessitating a return trip. In the second block the agent began to show signs of doubt as to whether this was Mr. Ludlow's normal gait or something he used to eliminate troublesome agents. He decided to stick to it for another block. His words were now coming jerky and he was blushing. About the end of the third block Louis had faint recollection of hearing something like, "Mr. Ludlow, it is plainly evident you do not need an automobile." When Ludlow was able to apply the brakes and come to a full stop he turned around and saw his late companion many yards in the rear, his face turned in the opposite direction, retracting his steps at a considerable reduction in speed. And that is the last he has ever seen of his automobile friend.

Uncle Sam's Diplomatic Codes No Longer Secret. IT cannot be said truthfully that the state department was surprised when, recently, word came across the water that Colonel House had discovered our "secret" diplomatic code was no secret at all to the diplomats and spies of Europe. There now are three diplomatic codes in use by American ambassadors, said to be from five to seven years old. European governments change their codes at least three times every two years to keep them from falling into the hands of spies. The "green code," supposed to be the most secret of all, is said to be well understood by agents of European countries. The code by which American naval attaches communicate with their superiors is said to be from five to seven years old. European governments change their codes at least three times every two years to keep them from falling into the hands of spies.

Secretary Daniels is equally well known. Formerly when Washington sent a note to a European power the embassy, after decoding the communication, always paraphrased it. This was done so that no code expert in the employ of a foreign government could lay the embassy translation by the side of the cabled code message and thus work out the code. Recently there have been several mistakes that have made it a simple matter for experts to learn the American cipher. The state department, for instance, gave out the copy of Austria's reply to an American note as it was translated literally from the American code. Any belligerent who saw this translation and then saw the code message as it passed through the hands of the telegraph official on its way to Washington would have little difficulty working out the code by use of cipher experts. The possibilities of embassy couriers being bribed to impart information is another disturbing factor. One such incident is said to have been discovered only recently by one of the American embassies in Europe.

This Woman Knew a Country Dog When She Saw One

ONE morning, as the flagging from the treasury to the Mills building was alive with clerks on their way to work, a setter dog mixed with the crowd, yelping as he ran. Men and women stopped to watch the dog as he bounded madly after a wagon in the middle of the asphalt. Over to the park side, to a man swinging along with a cane; back across the street to the White House gates; out again to the roadway between the grounds and state department, and then, with a rush, back to the avenue, barking every step of the way. He was hunting for a master he could not find. In all the crowd of clerks there was but one who misunderstood the situation. One of his kind always bobs up, if you notice. He was a nice-looking little man, too, with spiked ends to his gray mustache and a watch chain that gold-linked a badge across his vest. All the same, his name was Mr. Smart Aleck, for as the dog, in flying by, came near snarling his valuable black cloth legs, he yelled out loud enough for six of his size: "That dog's mad! Somebody shoot that dog! He's mad!" "Oh, for goodness sake, shut up! The dog isn't half as mad as you are." The small man fairly tugged his rage at the insult. "What do you mean, madam?" But madam, who had bestowed her remark informally in passing, kept right along. She didn't at all look like a woman who would speak to a strange man on the street, for while she was as ugly as the mud fence which so accommodately serves for comparison, and her black skirt failed to ripple three distinct times as it had oughter, she was really very genteel. Perhaps she knew a country dog when she saw one. Perhaps, also, she knew what was liable to happen if a policeman came along with a gun. Unless, he was wise enough to know a country dog on sight.

URUGUAY'S EIGHT-HOUR PLAN. An act was recently passed limiting the actual labor of workmen in Uruguay to a maximum of eight hours daily. It applies to workmen in factories, shops, yards and quarries, to employees or servants of industrial or commercial establishments and of railway and street car lines and in general to all persons engaged in tasks similar to those mentioned. Employees in government work are not exempt. The hours of adults may be increased in special cases, but not to exceed 48 hours for each six days of work. For every workman violating the law the employer is to be fined $10 for the first time and $15 for each repetition. The workmen are to be fined the amount received for the excess work, but the fine will not exceed the excess earned in one month. Twenty-five inspectors, controlled by the labor office, are to enforce the act. Inspectors in the department of Montevideo will receive $1,800 per annum, and those in the other departments will be paid $960.

Fulton Mothers Now Treat Children's Colds Externally

They Find Vap-O-Rub Better Than Internal Medicines for Croup and Cold Troubles.

Mrs. J. S. Pugh, 510 Market St., and Mrs. Mary Bolton, 105 Ravine St., both of Fulton, Mo., have found, in common with many other Missouri mothers, that it is no longer necessary to dose children with internal medicines for cold troubles. In the South Vick's Vap-O-Rub is the standard remedy for these troubles, but it was only last winter that it was introduced here. Vap-O-Rub was discovered by a North Carolina druggist. He found how to combine Menthol and Camphor with the volatile oils of Thyme, Eucalyptus, Cubeb and Juniper, in salve form, so that when applied to the body, the ingredients are vaporized by the body heat. These vapors are inhaled with each breath, through the air passages, to the lungs, carrying the medication direct to the affected parts, and, in addition, Vick's is absorbed through the skin, taking out the tightness and soreness. This double action makes Vap-O-Rub really a remarkable remedy for many forms of inflammations. Either inflammations of the air passages, such as head colds, catarrh, bronchitis, sore throat, or deep chest colds, or inflammations of the skin tissues, such as burns, bruises, stings, piles, itching and muscular soreness. It is particularly recommended for small children, as it can be used freely, with perfect safety, on the youngest member of the family. But let these Missouri mothers speak for themselves. Mrs. Bolton writes—"I have used Vap-O-Rub on baby for bad colds. Results were excellent. I find it better than any internal medicine I ever used." Mrs. Pugh's experience is—"I tried your Vap-O-Rub on three of my children for bronchitis. They would cough so hard at night I could not sleep, so would get up and rub their throats and chests with Vap-O-Rub and they seldom coughed any more that night, and after I had kept it up for several nights they stopped coughing. I believe it is better than taking so much medicine internally." Three sizes, 25c, 50c or $1.00. At all druggists.
