CLOSE OF THE CONGRESS

Impressive Ceremonies Mark the End of Eucharistic Meeting.

A PROCESSION OF PRIESTS

Brilliant Reception at Carroll Institute Would Up the Proceedings.

The first Eucharistic Congress of America was closed yesterday afternoon at the Catholic University grounds with one of the most splendid, brilliant, and inspiring ceremonies of the Catholic Church, the procession of the Blessed Sacrament.

The public utterances of the congress by resolution which will specially interest the public are the following:

The Eucharistic Congress pledge themselves to secure the sanctification of Sunday by every means in their power. They venerate it as the Eucharistic day of the Lord, and they purpose to carry out in letter and spirit the admonition of the Third Plenary Council of Baltimore concerning the observance of the Sabbath.

The congress halls with joy the exhortation of His Holiness Leo XIII, that the congress may be a means to the restoration to Christian unity of our separated brethren.

The series of final resolutions were offered by Father Elliott, of New York, for the committee, and were all adopted.

Other suggestions of the resolutions were the same as those previously mentioned, and a copy of the rules of the priests' league be sent to every priest in the United States, to be read and gratefully accepted by the congress and to the public at large, that an authorized list of the Priests' League be published.

THE MARONITE MISSIONARY.

The address of the afternoon session was the feature of the Rev. Joseph Zaback, who was on the program as the Armenian Missionary, but who requested that his address be given in Maronite.

His subject was "The Holy Eucharist in the Eastern Catholic Church." His address included a description of the various sects, schismatics and orthodox of the Eastern Church, including the Nestorians, the Copts, the Syrians, the Maronites, the Jacobites, the Ethiopians, and the Armenians, and all the earlier churches which marked the schisms of the early Christian Church.

By permission of the president several reports were made of societies whose work is in line with that of the Eucharistic Congress. Father Timothy O. S. R. spoke on the institution and work of the Confraternity of the Holy Sacrament, of the Arch-confraternity of St. Paul, of Minnesota. He explained the method by which membership could be obtained in this fraternity, and invited membership.

Most Rev. John J. Sweeney, of Philadelphia, which proved to be an interesting paper, and was presented by the report of the Ladies' Tabernacle, of Philadelphia, which was founded in 1876, with only twenty-five members. This report was printed and a copy given to each of the delegates.

Bishop Keane, however, made a short address on the work of the organization which showed that he had disbursed the very large sum of $60,000, had aided 1,269 churches and had distributed 29,000 articles in churches.

They had given largely to the colored and Indian missions and particularly to the Alaskan mission stations, each of which were supplied with articles of devotion. This statement was greeted with great applause. They had also sent assistance to fourteen foreign missions. Among the articles distributed were 2,111 copies of the Holy Scriptures, 21,827 altar linens, 624 vestments and 9,272 miscellaneous articles.

THE EXHIBITS.

The members of the congress about half past 5 o'clock assembled in the chapel of the Carroll Institute for the procession of the Blessed Sacrament. The chapel was radiant with light, and flowers in the sanctuary were Cardinal Gibbons, Monsignor Sattoli and eleven bishops and archbishops. There was sung the hymn "Pange Lingua" by the whole congregation.

The procession then filed out in the following order: Father Lynch, holding aloft the crucifix, with an attendant on either side; twelve acolytes in red cassocks and white surplices; 300 priests in black cassocks and white surplices; in purple vestments; the cardinal in red vestments; two censor-bearers.

After these a canopy of gold embroidered with red silk, under which walked the papal altars. Monsignor Sattoli was arrayed in a gold embroidered cope. On his right was the Rev. John Murray, and on his left the Rev. John Sweeney, and in the procession, respectively, of the ceremony of the benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. The line was closed with a division of priests fifty in number.

All of the members of the line except Mr. Sattoli and his attendants carried lighted candles. The censor-bearers swung their censers before the host as it proceeded, while all the priests chanted a hymn.

When the procession reached the south front of McManis Hall the acolytes and the members of the Eucharistic Congress by Mr. Sattoli and his assistants ascended the steps, where he deposited the host on an altar which had been erected in front of the altar was exposed the sacred host.

The benediction took place before this altar, and the host was exposed, at which incident the whole line knelt, and continued the chanting of the service. The host was then taken to a position in front of the steps around which the line passed on the return to the chapel.

AT CARROLL INSTITUTE.

Brilliant Reception at the Church Dignitaries Held.

Carroll Institute was crowded last night with prominent Catholics in attendance upon the reception given there by the members of the Eucharistic Congress by the officers and members of the Institute.

The notable guests of the occasion were Cardinal Gibbons, Rev. Bishop Maas, of Covington, Ky., President of the Congress; Archbishop Ryan, of Philadelphia, Rt. Rev. Bishop Keane, rector of the Catholic University, and Monsignor Schroeder.

On the stage with them were about a dozen of the delegates to the Congress, President Bogus, of the Institute, and ex-President D. J. Murphy.

The Carroll Institute Orchestra furnished the music, which was patriotic in character. The hall was decorated with the national flag and the papal flag and escutcheon.

President Bogus opened the proceedings of the reception with a short address in which he expressed the honor felt by the membership at the presence of their distinguished guests and then presented Mr. Murphy, who welcomed the guests and spoke of the entire sympathy of the Catholics of the city in the purposes of the Congress.

Mass responded briefly but with evident feeling on the courtesy of the association, and spoke some words relating to the duty of all Catholics to the priesthood and the government. Cardinal Gibbons said: "Before adjourning I desire in the name of the Eucharistic League to thank the president of this association, and Mr. Murphy for the kind words they have spoken of the president and members of the congress just adjourned."

UNITED HEBREW CHARITIES.

Annual Meeting of the Association Held Here Yesterday.

Among the many well-managed benevolent associations of this city there is none that surpasses in usefulness and practical charity that of the United Hebrew Charities.

The aim and object of this association is not to create mendicancy, but to prevent it; not to have the recipient of charity depend on the association, but by practical work to assist him.

There is not a question now before the public so engrossing and important as that of how to care for the poor and unfortunate. Of all the people, the Jews seem to have grasped the situation with far better and more practical results than any other.

Matters of vital importance will be presented for action. The ladies also are invited and expected.

TO PROTECT PENSIONERS.

Grand Army Committee Devising Means to That End.

It is alleged that the old veterans are deprived of their pension money through temptations and tricksters, and the Grand Army passed a unanimous resolution at the national convention to try and protect them in the care of such money.

In compliance with the resolution Department Commander Anderson recently appointed a committee of five to look into the matter. The committee held a meeting last night, and while various schemes were proposed to prevent the evil, the one which seemed to meet the most favor was the plan to secure legislation providing that a pension check should only be paid when handed through the hands of reputable banks, and to make the check void if presented by any person other than the pensioner himself.
