Dr. Woodward Says That Reports Are Exaggerated.

DEATH RATE AS EVIDENCE

It Shows That There Are Probably Not More Than Five Hundred Cases in the Entire District—Results of His Official Investigation—Minor District Matters.

Health Officer Woodward is having an investigation made of the prevailing rumors with respect to the existence of an unusual number of typhoid fever cases in the District.

Dr. Woodward was asked to-day by a Times reporter whether or not, in his opinion, the number of cases would reach 1,000 or more, as stated, and replied in the negative.

"The report," he said, "is largely overdrawn. Reliable statistics show the death rate from typhoid fever is as 19 to 100, and if it were true that we had 1,000 cases in the District, you can see that by the most conservative estimate the number of deaths would reach 100 during each period equal to that period of the disease in which most deaths occur, which is five weeks."

EXACT DATA LACKING.

"We have no data, that will justify any absolute statements as to the present number of cases, but there are probably from 400 to 600 in the entire District.

"I am now and have been for some time engaged in an investigation of the existing conditions. An inspector is preparing a report for the month of September just past, but, however, just double what it was in the month of September, 1894 and 1893 respectively."

Attorney Wynkoop has rendered an opinion in the matter relating to the high wall erected by J. A. Wynkoop on premises owned by him in the rear of Nos. 403 and 405 First street southeast, in which he suggests the construction made by Attorney C. A. Frandenburg, attorney for Mr. Wynkoop, and decides an all-important point.

Mr. Wynkoop's wall was built to a height of sixteen feet, and upon complaint being made he was ordered by the building inspector to reduce it seven feet.

Mr. Wynkoop appealed from this decision, upon the grounds that the rear walls of the adjacent houses are party walls built partly on his ground, and that a party fence divides the ground formed by the triangle. He therefore had the right to build a wall to any height within the party fence and on his own grounds.

Mr. H. C. McCauley, who in August last purchased the right to use the public scales at the Georgetown Market, called upon the Commissioners to-day to state a grievance.

The Commissioners heard A. W. Caldwell to-day in support of the adoption by the District of a crematory plan of his invention for the destruction of the city's waste. Mr. Caldwell was accompanied by Mr. Caldwell's agent.

After hearing his exposition of the operation of the plant now in use in New York city, the Commissioners admitted that the plan was worthy of consideration, and he was referred to Health Officer Woodward for a further explanation.

original proprietor of lands in Washington. They asserted ownership in the neighborhood of the old observatory. The decision in this case followed precedent, and the land that has been used for years by the government was declared by the judge to be in the ownership of the United States.

The claimants to land on the other side of the city, including the squares facing the river, from square 233 to the Arsenal, met the same fate, and the title passed by the government was upheld. This was the last of the section.

Again the government's case was sustained, and the opinion closed with a brief remark advising each alleged owner of reparations rights to be in contravention of the law and unfounded.

These suits have been pending for many years. It is hoped that the decision in the reclamation of the Potomac flats and their development into a beautiful boulevard, as originally projected.

REMAINS OF MISS JULIA MANGIN BURIED IN MOUNT OLIVET.

HER DYING HOURS DISTURBED BY THE CRUEL TREATMENT OF A HEARTLESS LANDLORD.

The funeral of Miss Julia Mangin, who died at No. 908 Twentieth street northeast, last Saturday as the result, her relatives alleged, of shock caused by the heartless and cruel treatment of the landlord, as told exclusively in to-day's Morning Times, took place from St. Stephen's church this morning.

Father O'Connell said the mass, and all that was mortal of the unfortunate woman was quietly interred in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

The publication of the facts connected with the sad affair has aroused the greatest indignation in the neighborhood, and all classes of people have visited the house on Twentieth street. It is a three-story brick structure in a respectable neighborhood, and all of the windows have been raised and nailed up with doors, front and inside, have been torn from their hinges.

The door which was not removed was the one which closed the room in which Miss Mangin died. The door, three in number, moved into the house last June, substituting two rooms on the third floor. Julie was then ill and was removed to the room from the Columbia Heights house she had been for several months previous.

A short time ago the people from whom the Mangins sublet the rooms decided to move out of the house. Miss Julia Mangin was then too ill to be moved and Dr. Shaw, who was attending her, informed her sisters if they attempted to remove her, they would do so against her will, and would have to assume all risks.

Offenders on Saturday Night and Sunday Answer in the Police Court for Their Wrong-Doing—Officer Mohl's Usual Case—Lack of Evidence Let a Brutal Case Go Free.

The docket, the court room, the witness benches and the space set aside for counsel were all crowded this morning, and both the upper and lower police courts did a land-office business. As usual, Officer Mohl was present, and his case was the first called.

"Henry Middleton" was his victim, and was charged with disorderly conduct. Middleton had been loafing on a corner, and Mohl ordered him away.

"All right, sir, it's my move," said Henry, and went into the store to lay a pair of shoes.

"When I came out of the store he grabbed me and arrested me," explained Henry. Then Mohl told his honor that Henry had called him all sorts of names.

"Did anyone else hear this?" asked Judge Kimball, in a doubtful way. "Well, I should like to talk about it."

"All right; step back and think it over," counseled his honor. "Middleton, what did you say to him?" "Judge, your honor, I didn't call him anything 'cept 'snooky.' Dat's de game he goes by."

"Why is he called 'snooky' inquired his honor. "Middleton, what did you say to him?" "Judge, your honor, I didn't call him anything 'cept 'snooky.' Dat's de game he goes by."

Higher Cables From London Have But a Brief Effect.

Brain Brokers, by Exploiting the Reduction of Bank Reserves, Succeeded in Boosting the Day's Market.

The early improvement in stocks this morning was due to higher cables from London.

The traders recovered from their surprise, however, they started to sell the market, and the early gain of 1-4 of 7-8 per cent. was not only lost, but in some cases a decline was recorded.

The reduction in the bank reserves has led to talk about higher money rates. The bears are making the most of this, and are increasing their selling lines. The loss in prices was equal to 1-4 to 1-7 of 8 per cent.

Brokers of the leading bears were quite prominent in the stock market during the closing hours of the day. They brought about a further decline in prices, notwithstanding some buying for London account.

Sugar sold down to 10 1/2; Chicago Gas 93 7/8; Missouri Pacific to 32 3/4; Distilling and Cattle Feeding to 22 3/4; and Tennessee Coal and Iron to 43.

The further advance in the price of certain grades of refined sugar and intimations that anthracite coal will be put up later in the week fell so far as the stock market is concerned, and at closing speculation was barely steady in tone.
