

How about Carpets?

Are yours beginning to get threadbare? A shabby carpet does make a room so dowdy. Carpets are very cheap now. We never knew them so cheap—you can get the finest kinds for what you used to pay for medium grades.

MR. BAGLEY'S CROSSING Serious Charges Filed Against His Italian Wife.

DETECTIVE ON HER TRACK

He Asserts That She Is the Mother of a Child Which He Does Not Acknowledge as His Own—Asserts That She Pursued Him and Brought About Divorce from His First Wife.

The ordinary case of the helms-hunting foreigner is varied in the case of Mr. W. Bagley, who to-day filed a cross bill for divorce from Mrs. Olga Bagley, daughter of the Countess Alfieri, of Milan, Italy.

He claims that she is the mother of a child which he does not acknowledge as his own. Mr. Bagley's account of his wanderings over two continents, and closes with the charge that his wife has recently given birth to a child that is not his.

He dates the total overthrow of his domestic happiness to his arrival here and renewal of friendly relations with his aunt, Mrs. A. B. Williams, who, he says, now directs his wife's movements. Under her guidance his wife has for a year been trying to get a divorce from him, and he has finally given up and left her in her native land.

His wife is the daughter of a wealthy Pittsburg manufacturer. His parents are both dead and he has a large estate in Italy. It was the prospect of this, he says, that explained the behavior of his wife, his aunt and her husband, who helped to bring him into St. Elizabeth's by drugging him.

After reciting the facts in his divorce proceedings so far, beginning with Mrs. Bagley's bill filed a year ago, Mr. Bagley takes up the history of his life from the time he left his home here. He left this District on November 10, 1881, and on the 15th sailed for Liverpool. From there he joined his mother and sister at Sestri Ponente, in the Italian Riviera.

His relations soon became so friendly that he felt it proper to tell the two ladies that he was a married man, and he showed them the photographs of his wife and child. Soon after he left with his mother and sister for San Remo.

He also wrote that he hoped to see him at Nice, and asked that he write to him. Later he got a letter from these ladies, asking him to accompany them on a tour of the Riviera. He declined the invitation.

A few days before Christmas he went with his mother and sister to Nice, and about three weeks later, Miss Uccelli and her mother appeared there quite unexpectedly to him, and stopped at the same hotel. From the many and pressing invitations and their allays seeking his company he was persuaded to renew their intimate relations.

WANTED TO GET RID OF HIM. Her intimacy became so noticeable that on one occasion her stepfather, Col. McAllister, who wanted to get rid of him, suggested that he should get a divorce from his wife in Washington and marry Miss Uccelli. He refused to do this, and she suggested, and they at once took the matter into serious consideration, asking if such a thing were possible. The mother consented to do this, and he was married to her in Washington.

He then found employment with the banking firm of Michael Gennelli & Co., at Naples, in August, 1882, when he had been in Europe less than a year. He secured the divorce and on September 24 they were married at Milan. The couple passed the winter in Florence and on the Riviera. Upon the birth of their first child, Elizabeth, he rented a house at Sestri Ponente and they lived there happily for five years.

In 1894 they settled up their affairs, and on August 10 sailed for the United States. He hoped to find employment in Philadelphia by which he could support his family. Soon after his arrival there he called her to his home in Washington, D. C., and she refused to go with him. He remonstrated with her and warned her against too great confidence in him.

Soon after he was very ill from the effects of too free use of morphine and went to Providence Hospital to recover. He parted with his wife very affectionately. He remained a few days at the hospital, and returned to Mrs. Williams' home. He was told at the door that Mrs. Williams had given orders that he was not to be admitted to the house and his wife would not see him.

He went to the Oxford Hotel, and from there he was taken to a boarding-house. She made arrangements to go to Mrs. Stone's, on Massachusetts avenue, and paid for a week in advance for the whole family. She left him there, promising to return with the baggage and the servants. She came back once or twice, but did not stay, and made him go there.

CLERKS' PIQUE GLOVES Voted the Republican Ticket in Baltimore Out of Pique.

IT COST DEMOCRATS DEARLY

Baltimoreans Who Are Employed in Washington Found That Some One Cast Their Ballots for Them—Novel Method of Detecting Negro Repeaters—Gorman Takes It Calmly.

Department clerks who went over to Baltimore to vote yesterday holding indignation meetings at the branch of the society. Fully a thousand or more Democratic voters left this city for Baltimore the day before and on the day of the election.

Many of them intended to vote the straight Democratic ticket, but the wrath of Gorman was to have been scratched for Lownds. The ward heeled did not know who the clerks were, and in many instances thought they were good government men.

As the clerks were expected to maltreat the Republicans and good government people, they immediately began a systematic persecution of the Washington delegation.

Whenever a stranger went up to vote he was pestered and abused and in many cases he was actually assaulted. This, of course, soon began to have its effect on the Washington crowd, and whenever they could reach the voting box the straight Republican ticket was voted.

It is estimated by the conservative Democrats that the stories of rioting and the maltreatment of voters cost the Democratic party between 500 and 1,000 votes in the city of Baltimore alone.

The majority of the clerks went to the Democratic ticket, with the exception of Gorman, but they are not against the Democratic ticket, and some say that under no circumstances will they ever try to vote the Democratic ticket.

DANGEROUS REPEATERS. Several squads of negro repeaters were being organized in the city. This is the most dangerous of repeaters, as it is almost impossible to tell one from another. A few days before the election a great number of negro names were registered in the city.

Internal Revenue Commissioner Miller tells a good story of how negro repeaters were detected during the election in West Virginia. For some months it was known that negroes were being "colonized" in that State, and it was causing a good deal of worry to the election officials.

Several Washingtonians, who are entitled to vote in Baltimore, had rather amusing experiences during the election in that city. The voters could not tell one from the other, and it was causing a good deal of worry to the election officials.

THE JULIUS LANSDOWN Furniture and Carpet Co.

WILL CLOSE ITS DOORS. The University Club is Having Trouble with Unsecured Creditors.

The University Club, at the corner of Seventeenth and I streets northwest, will, as stated in The Morning Times today, close its doors at a date, probably an early one, to be determined by the board of managers. The club men assign as the reason for this that they desire to have a less expensive establishment, as they do not care to meet unnecessarily expensive fixed charges on the property.

It was stated by a member of the club that the unsecured creditors desire a settlement, and that there are now negotiations pending to bring about such a settlement. These negotiations so far have been entirely unsatisfactory to the creditors.

The mortgage debt of the club foots up for $83,000 and the debt to unsecured creditors amounts to about $10,000. Of this $10,000 about $8,000 is due to local business men.

The association was held yesterday at the club rooms by a committee of the unsecured creditors, of which Mr. S. C. Palmer was chairman, and a committee of the board of the club.

After the conference Mr. Palmer said to The Times that he did not care to discuss with the creditors the details of the agreement that had been reached. He, in fact said that he did not think that the unsecured creditors would get anything. He estimated the liabilities of the club at $93,000.

The club appears to be anxious to settle its debts as early and as equitably as possible, and they hold that the property when sold should pay all claims dollar for dollar.

They will make their change of headquarters before January, this matter and others to be settled at a meeting of the club to be held on Saturday night.
