Rebuilding Sale

RUSH! RUSH! RUSH!

A continuous rush every day and all the day from opening to closing. We venture to say that this—

The Greatest of all Clothing Sales

Ever inaugurated in Washington—has carried more joy and gladness into the homes of the masses than all the other clothing sales combined.

Why? Because we cut prices in half. Gave our reason for doing so. Made a plain, simple, truthful statement of our embarrassing predicament. You came at first by twos and threes, found that our presentation of cases was correct. You carried the news to your neighbors and they in turn spread it among their friends—until we were almost overwhelmed by a avalanche of eager buyers.

AND THIS IS WHY Our aisles are crowded—and other stores empty.

HOLIDAY FOR THE JUDGES

They Have Set Aside Saturday for Purposes of Pleasure and Health.

Every Friday Will Be Observed as Motion Day in Future—The Work of the Courts.

The justices of the supreme court of the District will observe Saturday as a holiday for the remainder of the summer months. The new arrangement went partially into effect today.

In each court the presiding judge has his calendar fairly well cleared and it has been concluded that the ends of justice would be in no manner injured by the innovation.

Chief Justice Bingham has already gone away for the summer in search of health. His departure leaves criminal court No. 2, without a judge.

Judge Cole is still presiding in criminal court, No. 1. The activities he has displayed in the conduct of his court has left the jail with fewer prisoners awaiting trial than it has known in years.

It will be easy enough for the two equity courts to adapt themselves to the change. Judge Hagner was absent today, but Justice Cox, of equity court, No. 1, was on the bench to hear a few motions carried over from yesterday.

In circuit court, No. 1, Judge Bradley said greater portion of the day, to hear arguments and motions. By the new arrangement Friday is now made motion day, but the Holt will trial having the right of way in Judge Bradley's court, it is probable the old motion day, Saturday, will continue in force until the trial is concluded.

Judge McComas, of circuit court, No. 2, closed yesterday as motion day, but came down after noon to hear a motion at the special request of counsel.

The clerk's office, the offices of the district attorney, register of wills, and recorder of deeds will all be open on Saturday, as usual. In the former office divisions of clerks will be made, giving an alternating half of the number a holiday each Saturday while the warm weather lasts.

MAY BE A PINKERTON.

Skeleton of a Man Found in the Monongahela River.

Pittsburg, June 6.—Sand diggers in the Monongahela River, at the foot of Ammon street, Homestead, yesterday, fished the skeleton of a man from the river bottom. The legs were petrified.

The remains were thought to be those of one of the Pinkertons who jumped into the river during that terrible fight with the Homestead strikers in 1892. During the fight, which lasted all day, several Pinkertons tried to escape from the barge, in which a whole regiment of men were cooped up, and one who was being slanted by shot and dynamite from the river bank on the river bank. Three desperate Pinkertons, fearing a horrible death, jumped overboard in the hope that they might swim across the river. They were all shot and sank to rise no more.

None of these bodies were recovered until the find of yesterday, which there is every reason to believe is the skeleton of a Pinkerton. On the skeleton there was absolutely nothing to lead toward identification. The remains had evidently lain embedded in the river several years until disturbed by the sand boat. The remains were brought to the morgue and will be buried by the county.

Fortune Teller Involved.

Lancaster, Pa., June 6.—A peculiar will contest, involving $100,000, has been begun here, in which a fortune teller figures prominently. Conrad Swartz, who died a few weeks ago, bequeathed his real estate to four of his children shortly before his death. He gave nothing to one daughter, nor the children of a deceased son. Yesterday these disinherited ones entered an action of ejectment against the four lucky children, to get their share of the estate. They allege that these four children induced the old gentleman to consult a fortune teller, and after his visit to her he became greatly prejudiced against the plaintiffs.

MISS QUILL'S ROMANCE

She and Veteran Salisbury Were to Have Married Today.

BUT JOHANNA WAS ARRESTED

The Old Soldier Had $90, and He and His Notorious Companion Agreed to Wed—They Celebrated in Advance. The Woman Became Drunk and Was Arrested—Man Taken in Later.

When the "Maria" backed up to the police court this morning Mike Flynn opened the door and commanded the inmates to step out lively. A white woman, trowsy-haired, with a frightful black eye, obeying Flynn's orders, jumped briskly to the pavement, her skirt catching on the steps of the vehicle, revealing lacy of a barber-pole pattern.

"And how air yer, Mister Flynn?" she said to the officer, gaily carressing one of his lapels.

"Don't be worried," replied Flynn, "if it isn't Johanna Quill."

"Yes," said the woman, "an' if it hadn't been for a fresh cop me name would have been Salisbury this mornin'."

"An' it may be yit," shouted a dirty-faced man in the charge of vagrants, coming up to Johanna and waving a ragged wad of greenbacks in his hand.

"I've got the price of yer fine, old gal, and yer better get up an' go."

Johanna kissed her hand to the man, an old pensioner named George Salisbury, and was trotted through an underground passage to the door of the charge of vagrants, where that officer was not of the kind to be settled by a fine.

She sat in the pen exchanging signs with Salisbury, still clutching his roll and exhibiting it to Kendig, telling the bailiff he was fifty strong and would go broke on Johanna.

Judge Kimball looked amused as he stood up and heard Clerk Harper charge her as a person of evil life and fame.

Johanna has been coming before him ever since he took the crime, and always has some unique argument to make for money.

"I thought you promised the last time you were here you were never coming before me again," said the judge.

"So I did," answered the woman, her arms akimbo and her wicked face turned boldly to the light pouring through the window.

THE OFFICERS' MANIA. Johanna said she would never appear in court if it wasn't for the policemen, who had an unconquerable mania for arresting her.

"What was she doing this time, Mr. Officer?" asked Judge Kimball of Policeman Black.

"Drunk, and helplessly drunk at the corner of Four-and-a-half street and Maryland avenue last night," said Black. "She had been with an old pensioner all day helping him to spend his money. So I arrested her on the charge of vagrancy."

"She ain't no vag," yelled Salisbury, rushing to the wire screen separating the prisoners from the spectators. "I'm goin' to marry her today, and I'd her visible means of support."

Salisbury had been through the mill several times himself, and was up in the technicalities of the vagrancy act.

"Put that man out," said Judge Kimball, and Kendig and Cole ejected Salisbury with great dispatch.

"There goes my future," cried Johanna, "me an' him was going to get married last night. We went down to Shea's, and 'cause he had $90 they threw me out an' kept him in there."

Johanna said she had her bearings after she was put out the Shea house, and wandered around, trying to get home.

"How did you get that black eye?" asked the court.

"I was goin' around a corner and a bicycle knocked me down."

"Johanna, I guess you'd better go down for fifteen days," said Judge Kimball, "and give the whiskey a chance to evaporate."

"Now, look yer, judge," said Johanna, squirming herself against the rail, "that man you put out an' me are goin' to get married. We've got the license all right, and if it hadn't been for the booze we'd been on our wedding towey today. Mister Flynn saw the license, an' knows it's on the level."

"All Flynn," said the court, and Mike came, radiant because he was celebrating his first anniversary as a court officer.

"Mr. Flynn, did you see that license?" asked the court.

Flynn smiled at Johanna and said he did.

"She asked me to dance a jig," said Mike, "an' he honor of her wedding day, and the old pensioner has the license."
