HURRYING UP THE WARSHIPS

Secretary Herbert Has Been Cabled to Expedite Awards.

No Objections Will Grow Out of the Bids—Desirability of Hasten.

Acting Secretary of the Navy McAdoo has cabled to Secretary Herbert, now abroad, informing him of the result of the bidders' competition, with a view to expediting the award of one ship each to the Cramps, Scotts and Newport News Company.

This action is understood to be necessary as the secretary who can execute the contracts. The outcome of the competition was so utterly devoid of any complications that the board of bureau chiefs considered it superfluous to make any canvass of the proposals.

The bidders themselves have not only offered no objections to the prima facie result which credited one ship to each of the principal shipbuilding firms whose figures were distinctly lowest, but they have expressed considerable anxiety that the question should be settled promptly in order that their purchases of material may be made at present quotations before any marked rise or fall could take place.

Congress also recognized the desirability of haste in building these ships, as evidenced by the stipulation that the contracts would be executed within 120 days from the passage of the act. This period expires October 1, and Secretary Herbert had arranged all his plans to return to Washington about October 1, to consider the bids.

The judge-advocate general of the navy has already prepared the contracts and the successful bidders are anxious to enter into them at once.

It is believed that Secretary Herbert will cable assurances of his readiness to make the desired awards and promise to sign the contracts in accordance with his arrival in which case three weeks of actual construction will be gained by the bidders.

The complainant was Annie Albers. The demerit woman's hallucination is that her mission on earth is to educate dogs, cats and other animals, also to teach the sparrows to sing. Her eccentric conduct finally resulted in her incarceration. She will be examined by the police surgeon.

TELLER AND THE DOLLAR

Critic Attacks His Remarks on Its Purchasing Power.

ADDMITS IT WOULD BUY LESS

Passages from the Speeches of Bryan and Other Silver Leaders Also Cited. Democrats Attempt to Offset the "Misunderstanding" Among the Masses of Workmen.

A clever Republican critic points to a paragraph in the speech of Senator Teller at St. Louis, Mo., as showing the silverite's purpose to cut down the purchasing power of the American dollar. The paragraph referred to is as follows: "We ask for no cheap dollar, in the sense that our creditors, our shrewdness, claim that the American dollar, as now constituted, has too high a purchasing power, and will purchase too much of the productions of man and too much of his labor."

The critic says he thinks the whole political opposition should hold Teller and his silver colleagues, who are making similar allusions to the text of his remarks. Other leading Bryan speakers, the man asserts, are constantly advocating the substitution for the dollar now in use a dollar which they admit will not buy so much of the products of labor.

Unconvinced as was Senator Teller in this statement, attention is called to the fact that Gov. Algeid, of Illinois, is outdoing him in clear, emphatic statement of the same thing. Algeid says the purchasing power of the dollar is just twice as great as it ought to be, and that its purchasing power is double since 1873, and that the silver party will substitute for it a dollar worth only half as much.

ALTELDI DISPUTES HIMSELF. In the same speech Algeid says in 1873 of the dollar was doubled at once in 1873 and that the increase of value has been gradual since that year. Yet he steadily sticks to the assertion that the present dollar is a "200-cent dollar," and explains again that this party intends to cut down its value one-half.

This same Republican critic, who states that he has been looking up this subject for the past three weeks, adds further: "Mr. Bryan, in his speech at Buffalo, August 27, said that the proposed free coinage of silver at the ratio of 16 to 1 would lessen the purchasing power of the dollar. He did not say, though, that the power would be reduced one-half, and I do not believe he meant to go too deep into inconsistency by so doing. But he did admit that the reduction would be equal to the value which has been added, as the silver movement, to the value of the dollar by the legislation of 1873, and other passages in his addresses show that he distinctly disavowed any intention to cut down the value of the dollar."

The Republican who recalled these facts further, that as Senator Teller, who used the pointed remarks of the silver party, should be well aware from his familiarity with the Senate Finance Committee's report on prices and wages, that wages advanced between 1873 and 1891.

TRYING TO COUNTERACT. "That is," said he, "your dollar of the gold standard bought much less labor in 1891 than it did in 1873." An effort has been lately made among the Democratic leaders, and there has been certain evidence of it at local party headquarters to counteract the effect of their statements that the purchasing power of the dollar is to be decreased. They, by their own declarations, admit that while many farmers who have mortgages to pay are pleased with these statements, there are many others, especially among the working masses, who do not understand them.

"It is a hard thing to explain to the popular mind," they say, in effect. On the other hand, certain officials at Republican headquarters are calling particular attention to the fact that, to their minds, the assiduous use of such utterances regarding the purchasing power of the dollar, are, in themselves, enough to accomplish Bryan's defeat.

THE EVILS OF SEPARATION

also attended in another portion of the park. A hospital filled with Union soldiers. "Though not sought for by me, I received from President Lincoln a commission as army chaplain, with special charge of Union and Confederate soldiers of the military hospital of St. Louis, Mo., gentleman, and I was appointed to the position of an Excelsior States officer, and, therefore, something of a peaceful veteran."

"As, however, more than three-fourths of the sick and prisoners in my parish were Confederate soldiers, and I believed I should have more influence with them by being a simple citizen, I returned to Washington, with many thanks, the commission sent to me.

"THE EVILS OF SEPARATION. "I do not believe that even men who were on the battlefield could have more fully realized the evils of the great separation than we who were in the border States, and especially such of us as had to visit the crowded prisons and hospitals in the cities and towns of these States. Hence we rejoiced the more on an occasion of the reunion of the people.

"At 1:45 p. m. the party at the Arlington hotel carriages for the meeting at Central Hall, at Ninth street and the Avenue. There gathered from all sides the veterans and their friends, with many ladies, red, white and blue, for the occasion. The Marine Band had a place in the gallery at the left.

The stand, with seats for 200, was occupied by the participants in the program. Gen. Steuart and his staff, delegates from the city councils of Philadelphia, Wilmington and Richmond, and distinguished guests, ladies and gentlemen from those cities and their States, from Maryland and the District.

The wearers of the Blue had badges of blue, with the monument to be unveiled at Annapolis in gold, with letters of gold. The Gray wore badges of white, with "The Pickett Camp" in black.

It was nearly 2:30 when Prof. Fancoulli raised his hat and the band struck up Sousa's "March of the Pickett's Men." Other music, including Fancoulli's "The Glorious South" and "The Grand Army."

The march was timed so that as the veterans came in with their banners waving the music was playing. At this an old-fashioned rattle was raised, as a salute to the band changed to "Yankee Doodle," and the cheering was redoubled.

When quiet was restored the speakers came in by twos and threes. Archbishop Ryan was cheered. The hall was comfortably filled, and the evening's ceremonies were delivered by Commissioner Trustees. He made a fine address and it received great applause.

Gen. Frazier, who was in uniform, was the center of the theater of operations by the array of the veterans, and the center of the theater of operations by the array of the veterans, and the center of the theater of operations by the array of the veterans.

THE INVOCATION. Following it came the invocation of Rev. J. W. Sayers, chaplain of the Department of Pennsylvania, G. A. R.

Almighty and Eternal God, Thy favor is like a dew, and Thy blessing is like a shower. Oh, bless us, assembled here today, and may what we do be pleasing in Thy sight.

We thank Thee, thou God of battles, that from the beginning of our history, Thou hast raised up heroes and gallant warriors, who have given us the freedom and independence of our country.

After the warfare of life is ended, and we are called to sleep by the tattoo of death, may we all, in the morning of Resurrection, be awakened by the reveille of angels, and ascend to the realms where our loved ones are, and be reunited to them. This we ask in the name of the Prince of Peace, Amen.

The introductory address was delivered by Gen. J. W. Frazier, commander of the Philadelphia Brigade Association.

Gen. Frazier, in part, said: "Comrades and fellow-citizens: When the people of our common country read in your papers tomorrow of the reunion of the blue and gray, they will feel and know that we are not only reunited, but we are reunited on the thirty-fourth anniversary of the battle of Antietam, that day which has done more to unite us than any other day in our history."

The veterans of the armies of Grant and Lee were the first to speak, and they addressed themselves to the supremacy of law, of order, of government, and of Constitution. They did not refer to the great separation, but, without touching elbows, to stand together for such a living present as will insure the future peace and prosperity of our country.

Veterans of the North and the South, this is the last time I shall ever have the high honor of presiding over such an assemblage. I do not believe that I shall ever again have the honor of presiding over such an assemblage. I do not believe that I shall ever again have the honor of presiding over such an assemblage.

SEEKING PRIZES AT CROQUET

Interest in the Local Tournament Growing Every Day.

Some Good Playing Done This Morning—Champions Will Contest for Supremacy This Afternoon.

The croquet tournament, which is in progress at the two Twelfth street and Rhode Island avenue courts, continues to grow in favor and enthusiasm. The attendance has been larger than at any previous local event, and at each game there is always a considerable group of earnest spectators.

The rain yesterday afternoon interrupted the matches set for yesterday, and the grounds again delayed the opening of the games this morning for a short time.

The most interesting match pulled off this morning was the one at the Rhode Island avenue court between Dr. Vesey of Wilmington and Bryant of Washington. The game was one postponed from last year's series, when Vesey, Bryant and Cooper of Washington were all tied in the second division for first place.

On Monday Bryant defeated Cooper and this morning Vesey succeeded in getting the better of Bryant and won in 1 hour and 29 minutes, though the game was close and the contestants quite evenly matched. National Champion Strong acted as umpire.

This afternoon Vesey will play Cooper, and the decision of the game will mean the first prize in last year's contest. Should he lose, the number of points made by the defeated player will be taken into consideration in the decision, and the man who makes the most points in the losing game will be declared the winner. By adopting this method of decision, ties will be entirely avoided in the present series.

Jacobus, of Springfield, Mass., and Holden, of this city, also contested at the Rhode Island court this morning. Jacobus, who is a former national champion, got the better of his opponent at the start, and continued in the lead, winning in about one hour and a quarter.

The match between Bean, of Washington, and Dr. Greenway, of New York, which was postponed on account of rain last night, was resumed this morning, with Mr. Bryant acting as umpire. At the Twelfth street court this morning, Bell, of Wilmington, met Dudley, of New London, and easily defeated him in thirty-three minutes, the quickest time yet made in the series.

The Wilmington man secured control of the balls at the outset, and retained his grip without giving his opponent an opportunity to show his ability. Mr. Chase was the referee.

Buckley, of Philadelphia, versus Chaffin, of Wilmington, and Dudley, of New London against Chase, of Washington, with Bell and Collin as umpires, were matched this morning.

This afternoon at the Twelfth-street court one of the most interesting matches of the tournament will take place between Dr. Greenway, of New York, and either Jacobus, of Springfield, or Strong, probably the former.

The two former are ex-champions in the national tournaments and Strong now holds the pennant. One of the main features in the series thus far is the remarkable playing of the boy wonder, Duryea, of Washington, who won both of the games he entered yesterday, defeating in a clever game Champion Strong.

The playing will continue throughout the week. ATONEMENT DAY SERVICES. They Begin This Evening and Continue Until Sunday Tomorrow.

Atonement Day services at the two Washington Hebrew congregations on Eighth street northwest, and the Adas Israel congregation, at Sixth and G streets northwest, will commence this evening at 8 o'clock. Both congregations meet again at 9 a. m. tomorrow morning and continue in fasting and prayer until sunset again occurs.

At the Eighth street synagogue Rabbi Stern will officiate, assisted, as in previous years, by Messrs. Gansdorf and Nonlinger. The choir will be assisted by Mrs. Nellie Wilson, Miss Clark, soprano; Mrs. Margaret Nolan-Martin, contralto, and Mr. John Nolan, basso.

At today's impressive memorial services for the dead will be read, followed by an address by Rabbi Stern. The "Kaddish" service, in which the younger members of the congregation act as a choir will close the ceremonies of the day.

Rabbi Samuels, assisted by members of his congregation, will conduct the services at the orthodox synagogue, corner of Sixth and G streets. The text of his sermon is to be delivered in Hebrew, and the opening will be "The three essentials of atonement will be: repentance, prayer and charity." During the services psalms and chants, with the traditional melodies, will be sung by the minister and the men of the congregation.

PLAYED A CHOOKEE GAME. Sam Reed Arrested for Trying to Sell a Stolen Bicycle. Samuel Reed, a matly-looking young colored man, attired in a bicycle costume and cap, including foot stockings, was arrested today by police detectives. He had been very feeble since a severe illness last winter, and his death, though sudden at the last, was not altogether unexpected, commonly known as "the great impeacher."

Anniversary of Barleim Heights Battle. New York, Sept. 16.—The 120th anniversary of the Battle of Barleim Heights, which occurred on September 16, 1776, and which was a small detachment of Continental troops, on the cliff overlooking the valley of the Harlem River almost decimated a large body of troops from British General Braddock's army and drove them back to their forts on what is now Morning Side Heights, was celebrated today by the firing of a salute, and the toasting of the American colors.
