THE WRONGS OF A CHILD

Mary E. Grady Assaulted by Her Brother-in-Law.

HE THREATENED TO KILL HER

Isadore L. Barriere, a Plumber, the Assailant—He Knocked Her Down While She Was Alone in the House—He Tried to Have a Criminal Operation Performed.

Isadore L. Barriere, arrested last night by Detective Weedon, on a charge of assault upon Mary E. Grady, was this morning in the police court this morning and was held under $2,000 bonds to await the action of the grand jury.

The complaining witness sat with her mother in one of the witness seats. She is a very pretty little girl, fifteen years old. While her dress was not rich, it was neat and tasteful.

She was the only witness examined. Judge Kimball and Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Spangenberg closely interrogated her as to the facts in the case.

Isadore L. Barriere, according to the child's story, is her brother-in-law. Last January, while visiting her mother's home, he criminally assaulted her, striking her in the face with his fist and greater indignities. No one else was in the house at the time, and he threatened to kill her if a word of the occurrence ever reached anyone's ears.

By means of threats he continued these relations until he became so violent that he became alarmed and took her to see a female physician. He himself waited behind a tree while Mary went to see the woman, who demanded a fee, however, which he would not produce, promising to pay her afterwards. As he could account for nothing through her and he himself gave the girl a drug, which produced such sickness that the girl lay ill for some weeks.

When witness came home, her mother at once perceived what was wrong and notified the police.

In giving her testimony Mary spoke in a low, well modulated tone. Her face was suffused with blushes and there was a tremor in her voice.

THEY SOURED ON HIS FISH

Trout at the Treasury in Water Colors and Oil.

How the Clerks on the West Side Suffered From an Excruciating Cuisine.

The clerks on the west side of the Treasury can't tolerate the odor of fried or fried fish. The clerks claim that they have become so sensitive to the smell of fish that they have to leave their offices when the smell of fish is in the air.

It is alleged that when this fish fresco begins to dry up in the morning he doesn't do a thing to the atmosphere in that vicinity. It is all pervading and laden with reminiscences. In the antique, of olive oil, lard, salt and "drips," whatever that may be, but no matter how pungent may be the potpourri of oils, greases and other lubricants, the odor of the holocaust of fish is overpowering.

It is held and lingers with the clerks. It is impossible to speak, think or ponder on anything but fish while the chef is at work. Even in the winter time when the windows are closed and rubber strips in the sashes keep out any intrusive air, a stinging breath of frost, yet there will come through the frosted panes or through the ventilators on the roof the unequivocal, horrible smell of trout in water colors and oil.

This man with the perpetually kitchen was summoned before Captain of the Watch (Cochran) yesterday. He was asked, and it was evident that he was the man who cooked the fish. He said that, of course, he knew it was disagreeable, but that he could remedy the evil. He suggested that he could cook the fish out in the suburbs, where there was plenty of fresh air, and then bring them down to the Treasury.

The chef of Executive avenue agreed eventually to abate the nuisance, but at the same time he reminded the captain that there was another cart which might be cooking the fish out in the suburbs, the horrors of the West Side. The captain will, of course, investigate.

JUNIOR CREWS WERE FAST

They Defeated the Veterans in the Potomac Club Regatta.

The Spill of the Lightweight Four the Only Unfortunate Incident of the Afternoon's Sport.

The annual regatta of the Potomac Boat Club took place on the upper Potomac course yesterday afternoon. All the races were well contested and many of the finishes were highly exciting.

Only one unfortunate incident marred the pleasure of the afternoon, but no one was hurt the mishap was soon forgotten. The "lightweight" crew of the Junior four were overturned beneath the Aqueduct Bridge, but as all the oarsmen were swimmers they extricated themselves from the difficulty without any trouble.

The most exciting race of the afternoon was the contest between the senior and junior eights. The juniors won in fine style, leaving the "old" men well in the rear. The winners were: D. Hindey, 1; Young, 2; Elison, 3; Heath, 4; Wheatley, 5; Toelner, 6; Ryan, 7; Gordon, stroke and Helton, coxswain.

The "lightweights" ran away from the men of average size and won the race by a comfortable margin. The winners were: Warden, 1; Offley, 2; Simon, 3; Nolan, stroke. The heavy men were: Bell, stroke; Doyle, 3; F. Ball, 2, and Von Dauchenhausen, 1.

Three crews contested for victory in the 1000 yard race. The winners were: Hurd, 1; good style from Robinson, and Stewart, with Rowzee and Danenbrower out of it.

The junior fours' race furnished the most excitement of the afternoon by a spill under the bridge. The winners in this race were: Bradley, 1; Hazel, 2; Young, 3; Looker stroke. The second crew were: Elison, 1; Wheatley, 2; Sims, 3; and R. Looker stroke. The "shipwreck" were: Gordon, 1; Clifton, 2; G. Hume, 3; F. Ball stroke.

The race in single sculls between Von Dauchenhausen and Warden was won by the former in easy style, neither man pushing himself. The championship in fours was the last race. The seniors met defeat at the hands of the juniors, as in the race between the eights.

The winners were: Warden, 1; Offley, 2; Simon, 3; Nolan, stroke. The losers were: Von Dauchenhausen, 1; Ball, 2; Doyle, 3; M. C. Ball, stroke. Mr. R. Ross Perry, of the Annapolis Boat Club, was in charge of the course, and he discharged the duties of starter in a most satisfactory manner.

SNOOZED ON A RAILING. In Consequence S. H. Sampson Tumbled Into an Arroyo.

A corpulent individual, who gave his name as S. H. Sampson, his residence as No. 1601 I street northwest, and his occupation as that of a clerk, this morning carelessly stepped upon a railing surrounding the arroyaw at the Civil Service Commission building, at Eighth and E streets northwest.

He had evidently been indulging in several evening imbibes, and being very fat he could not keep his feet on the railing. He fell head first into the arroyo, and was seen by a passerby who called out to him to get up.

For a few moments he sat quietly then a sort of stupor overcame him, and suddenly and without forewarning the loss of gravity of the individual got his feet on the inside of the railing and then 250 pounds of fat fell upon the hard cement bottom of the arroyo.

Some boys that saw the accident and thought it was a joke. They thought it might be a stunt, and they called out to the man to get up. He did not move, and they called out to him to get up.

CONWAY LAD RECOVERED

who had been mourned as worse than dead, Hardy was not obtained at the station, but he returned to his home, thinking that he had gotten out of a bad scrape in a very easy manner. Before he had crossed the threshold of his door the house was surrounded by police, and he will undoubtedly be arrested this morning.

Blake is a man thirty-eight years old, of slight build, with an ordinary face. A seragay sandy mustache adorns his upper lip. He was formerly a resident of this city, and had been employed as a bookkeeper at several places in Albany.

The news that the boy had been located and the kidnappers discovered flew like wildfire through the city and the streets surrounding the Argus office were soon blocked. The crowd became so great that the police were called upon to handle it. At 7 o'clock an extra guard of police was placed about Hardy's home, from which he was not allowed to emerge. It was feared efforts might be made to lynch him, as the feeling against the abductors is running high.

The rescue party was attacked as they passed through the woods and four shots were fired. They think one of the men in ambush was shot. The boy was rescued in the country about eight miles west of the city some the worse for his enforced absence from home.

The excitement and joyous exclamation of the boy's return were so intense and so boisterous that the little fellow became calmed, and the rescuing party returned at once to the carriage and conveyed him to his home.

Several hundred people quickly surrounded the Conway residence, and about eight o'clock of joyous welcome rent the air.

Blake, who agreed to surrender the boy for $2,500, escaped from the rescuing party after the boy had been secured. The police authorities have left on special engine to endeavor to overtake him at Keamses, eight miles west of Albany on the New York Central Railroad.

Hardy was arrested and taken to police headquarters. He will not admit any connection with the abduction, but the proof against him is positive.

The reward of $2,500 offered Blake if he would return to the Argus office for the boy, will not be paid, as he violated the conditions agreed upon in escaping. There is no doubt now that Blake was the principal in the plot of abduction, and laid all the plans. Hardy furnished the information upon which Blake proceeded.

The rescuing party report that Blake had been in the small station on the Central Railroad, eight miles west of Albany. A hall was made on the edge of a piece of woods, and he dressed Messrs. Farrell and Phelan through the woods.

The men were generously an hour. When they returned they saw that Blake had kept his word and showed them the child. He was standing on a mound, his arm clasped in the brassy hand of a man of large physique. Then Blake remained with the two men, several yards from the boy. Some time was spent in parleying with the abductors, but finally they were given up the boy until the $2,500 was handed over. Several men with long black coats, and hoods covering their faces, were seen in ambush near the mound. Realizing that it would be useless to attempt to force the boy, an agreement was made to meet behind the Methodist Church at Karner's in an hour, when the money would be paid.

Farrell and Phelan went to the meeting place, and were met by the brassy man, who was carrying the child. Mounting Capt. Riley and Geagan slipped into a place of concealment near by.

After further parleying the brassy man, seeing that the money was not immediately forthcoming, returned to the woods, and Geagan and Riley stealthily followed him. Subsequently Geagan came up with the man and boy. He quickly snatched the lad from the man and called to Riley, who was close behind, to cover his retreat. Geagan soon reached the carriage with the boy, and the horses were galloping back toward the city in a jiffy.

The conspirators appeared to be dumfounded and made no attempt to recover the child. The members of the rescuing party were well armed and two of them discharged their revolvers with a view of capturing the party.

In the confusion attendant upon the escape, the party forgot Blake and he is now at liberty. The carriage was driven on a wild gallop toward the city. But one stop was made. That was at the first telephone station, where Geagan notified the mounted police and they set out immediately to surround the woods. A special engine, carrying a force of detectives was sent to assist the mounted officers. They are now scouring the woods and have hopes of capturing the whole gang.

At police headquarters Hardy was interviewed with the major and district attorney for some time. He has completely broken down and confessed all the details of the dastardly plot.

His statement is withheld by the police for the present. While Hardy was being transferred to police headquarters from the third police precinct several attempts to drag him from the patrol wagon were made by the angry crowds, but the wall of police formed around him proved a safe barrier.

The maximum sentence for the crime which he charged to Hardy is fifteen years' imprisonment.

SUGAR STILL ON THE JUMP

Makes a Record in the Market by Touching 150.

Stocks Open Lower, But Decline Only Fractional—Grangers Recovered and Advanced.

New York, Aug. 19.—The stock market opened lower in sympathy with the weakness of London quotations and in the first half hour the trading element resumed work for a reaction.

The declines did not extend beyond fractions, and in the case of the grangers, Missouri Pacific and a few of the specialties, there was a minor fall recovery and even an advance from the night's figures. The market was held in check, however, by the persistent testing of its strength by operators for a fall.

An interesting feature of the speculation was the rise in Sugar to 150, a record price.

Later the market sold off again on realizations.

WHEAT OPENED LOWER. Market Sensitive, With Indications of an Advance.

New York, Aug. 19.—Wheat failed to hold yesterday's full advance at the opening this morning and opened a cent lower, but it had a subsequent nervous recovery from 93 1/4 to 95 for September. The feeling is extremely sensitive, but the sentiment is strongly bullish.
