

Our $2.00 Men's Hats

are modeled after the shapes of all the leading makers.

Dunlap—Youman—Knox—Miller—and our own special styles—are all represented in this famous grade—and the quality is the same as you always paid $3 for before we started this Hat Department.

Come in and try the new shapes on.

Eiseman Bros.

Corner 7th and E Sts. N. W.
No Branch Store in Washington.

CRUSADE OF HIGHBINDER

Heathen Raids on Christian Celestials in Philadelphia.

Devotees of Fan-Tan and Other Chinese Gambling Methods Incensed Because of Opposition.

Philadelphia, Sept. 10.—Trouble is being agitated in this city between the Chinese Y. M. C. A. and its followers and those Celestials who have not decided to accept Christianity. Monday night a number of alleged gamblers were arrested and held at the instigation of their Christian brethren. Some of the Chinese on that occasion were heard to threaten the Y. M. C. A. Chinese minister, and the latter, in the morning, and it was ascertained yesterday that a number of Chinese had been sent over here from New York, supposed to be emissaries of the society.

An American who is in touch with the heathen class of Chinese learned from the Rev. Mr. Fode, a missionary, that the men who had come from New York were night riders and were ready to obey any instructions. Mr. Fode stated that threats had been made openly to a number of Y. M. C. A. members who had been foremost in the anti-gambling crusade. A meeting of the Chinese was held Tuesday night to consider ways and means to oppose the crusade. Those in attendance were greatly excited. It was estimated that nearly $9,000 was raised by contributions to fight the Christian element in the Chinese colony.

BATTLE WITH A MURDERER.

Desperate Encounter with a Man Sentenced to Be Hanged.

Charleston, W. Va., Sept. 10.—Albert Voire, the murderer of Charles Gibson, was arrested in this city yesterday evening. Voire was sentenced to be hanged on the 25th of June last, and was given a respite for sixty days by the governor. He was to have been hanged on the 24th of August, but just before the time he escaped from the jail at Fayetteville. He had been in hiding on Campbell's creek until Wednesday night, when he came here and went to the home of his brother, in West Charleston. He was followed by Thomas Brantley, chief of police of Montgomery, who, in company with Detective Harriott, Ash, Constable Haxton and other police, went to the house for him. Voire, who had been in the house for some time, refused to come down. Brantley started after him, but he could not get down. He opened fire with a pistol, sending five balls after his pursuer in the dark. One of the balls went through Brantley's hat. The officers told Voire if he did not come down they would start fire to the house and burn it. "Then, and he said, I expect to die up here, anyway," replied Voire.

They went to get permission from the sheriff to shoot through the house. In the meantime Detective Ash had climbed into the attic and fired half a dozen shots at the fugitive. Two of these took effect, and, though they did not fatally injure Voire, they told him of his capture and he was brought down. He was handcuffed and taken to jail. He will be taken back to Fayetteville and hanged, provided he does not get away again.

Time Table.
Today: Low tide, 1:20 a. m. and 1:34 p. m.; high tide, 7:21 a. m. and 7:35 p. m.

Condition of the Water.
Temperature and condition of the water at 8 a. m.: Great Falls—Temperature, 86; condition, 36. Recreational—Temperature, 81; condition at north connection, 36; condition at south connection, 36. Disturbing reservoir—Temperature, 78; condition at north connection, 36; condition at south connection, 36; condition at foot of dam, 36; condition at foot of dam, 36.

City Lights.
Gas lamps are lighted at 7:24 p. m.; electric lighting at 7:30 p. m. The lighting is to be on four hours before the hour named. Gas lamps are lighted at 7:09 p. m.; electric lighting at 7:01 a. m.

It Saves the Coughy Children.
Seaview, Va.—We have a splendid sale on Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and our customers coming from far and near speak of it in the highest terms. Many have said that their children would have died of croup if Chamberlain's Cough Remedy had not been given.—Kellam & O'Brien. The 25 and 50-cent sizes for sale by Henry Evans, Wholesale and Retail Druggist, 335 F. street, and Convent avenue and E. street northwest, and 1425 Maryland avenue northeast.

$2.00 Washington to Philadelphia and return via Pennsylvania Railroad, the greatest of all railroads, matches, service. Great excursion next Sunday. $2.00.

When the Robins Nest Again
You will have money to turn in if you secure your water's supply of fuel now. The Smith & Co. Tel. 1212 at N. W. 208 Florida ave. N. W. Telephone 328 and 338. $2.00.

Massachusetts Mutual Benefit Policy Holders.
Do you want to give money to advantage? If so, give money and annuity of policy and age at the present time. Address X. Y. Z., this office. $2.00.

Tedious Transfer
Through Philadelphia avoided. Through trains to Atlantic City. Pennsylvania Railroad's great excursion next Saturday and Sunday. $2.00.

AMERICANS OWN HONDURAS

Immense Concessions to a Syndicate of New York Capitalists.

MILLIONS PURCHASED THEM

A Deal That Hands Over to the Management of a Board of Directors All the Enterprises of the Republic—No Public Aid Has Been Requested.

New York, Sept. 10.—No little interest is expressed in moneyed circles here over official statements conveyed to the State Department by the American consul at Honduras, to the effect that the government of that republic is under control of American capitalists. This is a fact to the extent of wonderful concessions having been made by the government to an organization of wealthy New Yorkers.

What the consideration was is not definitely known, but it is asserted here that in order to prevent the republic from becoming involved in the meshes of bankruptcies several millions of dollars were advanced.

It is a big enterprise and the public was not asked for its aid. For the men who are interested have plenty of ready money to advance in a worthy cause, and they are those who know a good thing when they see it. On the board of directors of the concern appear the names of John Jacob Astor, Jr., Edward Webb, Chauncey M. Depew, J. J. McHugh, Frederick R. Jennings, Charles McVey, and Melville E. Ingalls.

The organizer is Henry L. Sprague, of this city. He is a lawyer and a member of Francis Lynde Stetson's law firm, in which former President Cleveland was a partner. Mr. Sprague was once law partner of the late President Webb, of the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad, and he is a particular friend of Dr. Edward Webb, who is the husband of one of William E. Vanderbilt's daughters, as well as the president of the Wagner Palace Car Company.

It is declared by Mr. Depew that some of the Vanderbilts millions has been put in the syndicate. But in completing his organization Mr. Sprague was fortunate enough to secure the names of Dr. Webb and Mr. Depew, and the weight of their names was of a material aid to him in increasing the other gentlemen named.

When Mr. Sprague made his visit to Honduras he succeeded beyond his fondest hopes. The government was willing to grant him everything he wanted if the men of millions whom he represented would take the place of the republic from ruin. They could control the custom-house, the railroad, the telegraph and everything else in sight for a long term of years.

The government of Honduras is divided into two branches—executive, legislative and judicial. Each one of the sixteen departments has a governor. There is a judiciary department, composed of a supreme court, appellate courts and provincial courts, but the president is supreme. For all practical purposes it is a limited monarchy, and when Mr. Sprague once got the approval of the president for his plans he had all he wanted.

He hurried back to New York and saw the members of the syndicate. Then he closed the deal. The nature of it has been kept very much of a secret as far as it is known that the plan includes the control of the completion and control of the Honduras Railway, the management of its telegraph system and the dictation of tariff duties at the custom house, but also the establishment of a national bank to carry out a policy for paying off the Honduras debt.

BOURIED BY HIS COMRADE.

Hugh H. Henry Had $515 Stolen From Him by John W. Elliott.

John W. Elliott was a soldier in Battery M, of the Fourth Artillery, yesterday morning with a good record and a chance for promotion. Now he is carried on the rolls of his company as a deserter, and the police are after him, and there is a reward over his head. All this is so because he succumbed to temptation and stole $515 from his friend and former comrade, Hugh H. Henry.

Henry and Elliott were stationed together at Fort Monroe, Va. Several weeks ago Henry received a legacy of nearly a thousand dollars. At the same time he obtained a furlough for ten days. He had been transferred to this city. Henry came here to see his old friend and companion before going West to engage in business. He arrived a week ago and went to Fritz Kuter's Hotel, at Four-and-a-half street and M street. Henry called on Elliott and a soldier named Larry called on Henry to talk over old times and say good-bye. Henry had $515 in his pocket. He told Elliott about it.

During the evening Elliott made an excuse to leave the room for a moment. When he returned at the end of half hour his friend went out to look for him. When Henry put on his coat he noticed that it felt light in weight. Then he looked in the pocket and found his money was gone. Even then he did not suspect his former friend at once, but thought he had taken the money by mistake. Another week and Elliott did not return. Then Henry notified the police. This morning Detective Boyd was assigned to the case and began a hunt for the missing soldier, but up to a late hour this afternoon no trace of him had been found.

$1.00 to Baltimore and Return via R. & O.
For all trains Sunday, September 12. $1.00.

$1.00 to Baltimore and Return via R. & O.
For all trains Sunday, September 12. $1.00.

$1.00 Washington to Baltimore and return via Pennsylvania Railroad—fastest time—finest equipment. Sunday. Tickets good on all trains that day. $1.00.

Two Fall Days
At the greatest seashore resort on earth. An extraordinary opportunity. $2.00 round trip. To Atlantic City, via Pennsylvania Railroad Saturday and Sunday. Apply to ticket agents. $2.00.

NERVE ON THE RACE TRACK

Thrilling Scene in the Running at Waverly Fair.

JOCKEY SMITH'S HEROISM

New York, Sept. 10.—Manassas Boy, a powerful brown gelding, was one of the twelve starters in the first heat of the 2:26 trotting race at the Waverly fair, near Newark, N. J., yesterday. Twenty thousand men and women packed in the grandstand and perched in carriages drawn as near as possible to the rail of the half-mile track were watching the race.

At the quarter-mile pole Manassas Boy, already in fourth place, was trying to get in the lead. His driver, W. E. Smith, of Middletown, Md., was not anxious to go out in front so soon and he tried to check the horse's flight. As he pulled back on the reins the horse lunged forward with his head and broke the bit. The jockey slipped back over the trotter's head.

Tossing his head with delight at his new-found liberty, Manassas Boy broke into a gallop and ran away. Smith dropped the reins, stood up and jumped astraddle of the horse's back. Behind him thudded the hoofs of the other horses. A stumble by Smith or the least swerving by his runaway horse would mean a collision, a spill and almost certain death for one man or more in the track.

A groan went up from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

NERVE ON THE RACE TRACK

Thrilling Scene in the Running at Waverly Fair.

JOCKEY SMITH'S HEROISM

Manassas Boy's Big Break in the Speeding, and a Smash-Up in Ascertained by His Rider Jumping on His Back and Guiding Him by an Improvised Halter.

New York, Sept. 10.—Manassas Boy, a powerful brown gelding, was one of the twelve starters in the first heat of the 2:26 trotting race at the Waverly fair, near Newark, N. J., yesterday. Twenty thousand men and women packed in the grandstand and perched in carriages drawn as near as possible to the rail of the half-mile track were watching the race.

At the quarter-mile pole Manassas Boy, already in fourth place, was trying to get in the lead. His driver, W. E. Smith, of Middletown, Md., was not anxious to go out in front so soon and he tried to check the horse's flight. As he pulled back on the reins the horse lunged forward with his head and broke the bit. The jockey slipped back over the trotter's head.

Tossing his head with delight at his new-found liberty, Manassas Boy broke into a gallop and ran away. Smith dropped the reins, stood up and jumped astraddle of the horse's back. Behind him thudded the hoofs of the other horses. A stumble by Smith or the least swerving by his runaway horse would mean a collision, a spill and almost certain death for one man or more in the track.

A groan went up from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

NERVE ON THE RACE TRACK

Thrilling Scene in the Running at Waverly Fair.

JOCKEY SMITH'S HEROISM

Manassas Boy's Big Break in the Speeding, and a Smash-Up in Ascertained by His Rider Jumping on His Back and Guiding Him by an Improvised Halter.

New York, Sept. 10.—Manassas Boy, a powerful brown gelding, was one of the twelve starters in the first heat of the 2:26 trotting race at the Waverly fair, near Newark, N. J., yesterday. Twenty thousand men and women packed in the grandstand and perched in carriages drawn as near as possible to the rail of the half-mile track were watching the race.

At the quarter-mile pole Manassas Boy, already in fourth place, was trying to get in the lead. His driver, W. E. Smith, of Middletown, Md., was not anxious to go out in front so soon and he tried to check the horse's flight. As he pulled back on the reins the horse lunged forward with his head and broke the bit. The jockey slipped back over the trotter's head.

Tossing his head with delight at his new-found liberty, Manassas Boy broke into a gallop and ran away. Smith dropped the reins, stood up and jumped astraddle of the horse's back. Behind him thudded the hoofs of the other horses. A stumble by Smith or the least swerving by his runaway horse would mean a collision, a spill and almost certain death for one man or more in the track.

A groan went up from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that

he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed as the spectators were around the small track, they could easily see everything that happened, for the sunlight was fierce and strong. The little track became the theater of a tragedy worthy of the most dramatic of the stage.

After the first involuntary cry, there was absolute silence, save for the thundering of the horse's hoofs and the creaking of straining harness. Smith rode to his horse, but the animal was frightened by the strange weight on his back and only galloped madly on. By sheer strength and skill the driver wrestled the gelding's head so that he would not turn from the crowd. Closely packed