A Swindler in Jail.

Philadelphia, Aug. 14.—James McMullen, who was arrested in Maryland on Saturday night, was lodged in the Camden county jail yesterday afternoon. He is alleged to be the leader of a gang of clever swindlers, who have been passing forged checks. He was captured at Brooklyn, N. Y., and taken to Camden by county Detective Smith. A rubber stamp used to certify the bogus checks and two checks filled out were found on McMullen. He consented to go to Camden without awaiting requisition papers. McMullen told one of the jailers yesterday that Charles Gilbert, who was arrested for passing two of the checks in Camden, had no part in the swindle, as he had received one of the checks in payment for rent and had cashed the other one.

MISS GRANT'S SUITORS

A Royal Heart Laid Before the Beautiful American.

The Count of Turin willing to abandon his chance of succession to the throne of Italy for her hand in marriage—she met Prince Cantacuzene White Visiting Rome.

New York, Aug. 14.—The "Journal" this morning publishes the following dated Berlin, August 13:

Miss Julia Dent Grant might have entered the royal family of Italy, according to the "Lokal Anzeiger." If she had not been so generous to allow the Count of Turin to sacrifice his chance of succession to the throne for love of her.

Appearing as it does in one of the best informed and most trustworthy newspapers in Europe touching the affairs of royal personages, this story of the American girl is attracting great attention, and has excited renewed interest in her approaching wedding at Newport to the distinguished Russian, Prince Cantacuzene. The "Lokal Anzeiger" says:

"There are surely not many plebeian girls who can boast of having received offers of marriage from two full-blooded princes. Miss Julia Grant, the granddaughter of the world-renowned General and President Ulysses S. Grant, has not only been honored by many suitors of lofty station, but has been placed in a position where she was asked to choose between two princely offers."

"No less a personage than the Count of Turin, nephew of the King of Italy, sued for her hand, and a wedding would surely have followed had not King Humbert insisted that the Prince should in that event forfeit his royal rights and estate.

"This gallant Prince was more than willing to do so. Indeed, he would have sacrificed everything in the world for the object of his love. But Miss Grant would not hear of such self-immolation for her sake, and the Prince returned to his home in Italy, where he is now recovering from the effects of his obdurate uncle with a badly wounded heart.

"Prince Cantacuzene, on the other hand, was not called upon to face such a perplexing alternative, as he is entirely his own master.

"By the death of his father last December he became the head of the family, which is one of the oldest in Russia. He is the master of a magnificent chateau near Moscow, and of a great fortune. The betrothal festivities took place in Paris not long ago, and the wedding will be celebrated in America next month with great pomp."

"The 'Anzeiger' goes on to tell how the Count of Turin met General Grant's granddaughter at Newport during his visit there in the summer of last year, and forgot all other considerations in the charm of her society. It is represented that the gallant young Italian's attentions were not frowned upon either by Miss Grant or her family, and that he hastened to communicate with King Humbert, entreating the sovereign's permission to marry the beautiful American girl. The response was swift and uncompromising. If the prince should follow the dictates of his heart, he might never hope to be King of Italy.

"Only three lives, in addition to that of King Humbert, stand between the prince and the throne. The first is that of the crown prince, who is an invalid, and who is still childish, although he married Princess Helene of Montenegro three years ago. The second is that of the Duke of Aosta, the Prince of Turin's elder brother. The third is that of the Duke of Aosta's baby boy, born in December. The prince's younger brother, Luigi, Duke of Abruzzi, is at the head of an exploring expedition in the frozen north."

"When Miss Grant had convinced her brave admirer that she would not allow him to throw away his chance of becoming king, he traveled to India in search of adventures and tiger skins. He has secured plenty of both. The last report from him was that after a narrow escape from being torn to pieces by a man-eater, he was about to start for home with a large captive tiger and three cubs as living trophies of the valor born of disappointed love.

"After his departure, continues the 'Anzeiger,' that Miss Grant, traveling with her aunt, Mrs. Potter Palmer, made the acquaintance of Prince Cantacuzene. That head of the family, who is now in Rome, where the prince was one of the military attaches of the Russian Embassy. So deeply enamored was he by the following Miss Grant and her niece to Canada, and thence to Paris, where the engagement was made, after a paternal consent called by General Fred Grant, who was then on his way to the Philippines.

LEAVES A WIFE FOR AN AUNT.

An Old Woman Sued for Alienating a Husband's Affection.

Waterbury, Conn., Aug. 14.—Mrs. Louisa Page, aged sixty-seven, of Milton, near Litchfield, is the defendant in a suit for $10,000 for alienating the affection of a husband who is her nephew. The plaintiff is Mrs. Annie E. Page, wife of an employe of the Ingraham Clock Company of Bristol. The Pages have a child, the custody of which was given into the custody of the mother on Friday by Judge Penn in the probate court at Bristol.

The plaintiff alleges that by some peculiar influence the aunt has replaced her in the affections of her husband and she does not now receive ordinary respect from him. Only lately he published a notice asking people not to trust her on his account. After the notice appeared he latched up his horse and with the old woman left the wife and child to look out for themselves. The defendant is well off and before leaving Bristol with Page she settled a grocer's bill of $100 for him.

Tests in Wireless Telegraphy.

Boston, Aug. 14.—Experiments with wireless telegraphy have been made at the Blue Hill Observatory recently by the use of kites. The work has been under the direction of Lawrence Rotch, who will continue the experiments in the effort to solve interesting problems connected with wireless telegraphy. So far no effort has been made to send messages further than to a receiving station on Mount Chickataubut, about three miles away. Later, however, a receiving station will be established on Harvard Memorial Tower in Cambridge, twelve miles distant. The experiments so far have been based on the Marconi system and a Marconi transmitter has been used, copper wires being attached to kites at both stations, instead of masts, as in the Marconi experiments. Although the experiments by Mr. Rotch have been in many ways successful, yet something has interfered with the perfect working of the system. The operators have succeeded in transmitting signals from station to station, but the current has often been disturbed by the electricity in the atmosphere. The operator at Harvard it is hoped is established at Harvard it is hoped to find some way of overcoming the effect of the atmospheric electricity. The work in the future will be done largely under the direction of Prof. Sale, of Harvard.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 14.—Mrs. Noah Bailey yesterday arrayed herself in two suits of flimsy summer clothing, and making a fire of paper and pastboard boxes in her bedroom, stood in the flames. She fought her rescuers, but will die from her burns. She is said to be insane.

JOYING WITH A FERRYBOAT.

An Expert Swimmer Jumps Overboard for a Race.

New York, Aug. 14.—Dr. Philip Stahl, who arrived from Germany on Saturday, jumped from the Pennsylvania railroad ferryboat Chicago on her 5:45 trip from this city yesterday. He had no intention of committing suicide. He is an expert swimmer and wanted to show some friends that he could swim to Jersey City and get there ahead of the boat. On arriving in this country the doctor went to the house of a friend in Brooklyn, Charles Otto, No. 195 Springfield Avenue, Newark, N. J., went to Brooklyn yesterday to take Dr. Stahl, who is to be his guest, back home with him. The party had a little celebration and when the doctor, Mr. Otto and some friends boarded the boat they were all feeling in good humor. Dr. Stahl, began to boast of his ability as a swimmer and after making some comments on the slow speed the boat was making, offered to wager that he had been let alone over. Thinking that he was only joking, one of the party pretended to accept the wager.

The doctor flung his hat on the deck, climbed up on the railing and plunged into the water. Otto tried to grab him before he went over, but failed. The boat, which was then making fine time, stopped the slip, and the deckhands fished the doctor out of the water. He had struck out vigorously for the slip and was making good headway. When the deckhands landed him on the deck he laughingly protested against their interference and declared that he would have soon the water if he had been let alone. He was turned over to a policeman at the ferry and taken to the police station. His friends accompanied him and when the matter was explained he was allowed to go.

A BATTLE NEAR A CHURCH.

Terrible Ending of a Feud Between Two Families.

Carbondale, Pa., Aug. 14.—As a result of a family feud between the Quilan and Gallagher families, of this city, one man lies dead and two others are badly injured.

The trouble reached the climax yesterday. After attending mass the Quilans were returning home, five in number. In the outskirts of the city they met two members of the Gallagher family and a discussion arose. Fearing blows, a member of the Gallaghers went for a messenger and returned with a loaded revolver. Clubs and stones were the weapons. During the melee the Gallaghers were reinforced by another brother, the mother and the grandmother.

For over half an hour the battle raged, and when nearly all the Gallagher family were on the ground, the Quilans broke the fight up. Three men were on the ground, James Quinn, the sixty-year-old father, was dead; Thomas and Michael were badly hurt, and Mrs. Gallagher was also hurt quite badly.

The two Gallaghers who opened the fight are in jail.

A Relief of Bishop Hooper's Fortune.

London, Aug. 14.—An interesting relic of the ill-fated Bishop Hooper is to be sold tomorrow. It is a portion of the stump cut from the stake at which the bishop was burned in St. Mary's Square, Gloucester, in 1555, as an obstinate and irreclaimable heretic. The stake was taken up to make room for the foundations of the present monument. A greater part of the stake was used in fashioning a casket, which was presented to the daughter of Mayor Broughton.

"Hecht's Greater Stores"

The surplus selling has taken gigantic proportions.

Our great mercantile movement, the selling of makers' and importers' surpluses, has been attended by a constantly crowded store for one solid week. The people came, they were amazed, and they bought with an eagerness seldom displayed at such special sellings. Had other stores announced offerings as great as ours then the buying public might have had their doubts as to the veracity of their claims. But it was Hecht's advertisement that lured them to buy and experience alone has taught them that Hecht's underselling abilities know no depth. You never heard the equal of these values.

A REMARKABLE GROWTH

The Rapid Development of American Commerce With Japan.

From About $3,000,000 in 1893 Shipments From the United States Have Risen Until Last Year This Country Sent $20,000,000 to the Flowery Kingdom—Some Statistics.

Japan and her new tariff treaties and relations to foreigners is the subject of a monograph just prepared by the Treasury Bureau of Statistics. With a new currency, a new tariff, new treaties, and new relations with the large foreign element, conditions in that empire are a subject of special interest, while the rapid development of American commerce with Japan and the market there opening for American goods adds greatly to the interest.

No other nation has experienced such a remarkable growth in its commerce with Japan as has the United States. Japanese official figures give the importations from the United States in 1893 at $3,045,000, and in 1898 at $20,000,000.

Japan's exports have doubled and the imports have trebled during the period under consideration—1893-1898.

With a yearly consuming power of $138,000,000 the commercial wants of Japan are worthy of careful study. This is especially the case when the disposition is to look to the United States for a constantly increasing proportion of its supplies. Not only have the producers and exporters of the United States developed in the past few years a disposition to push their sales in that country, but Japan herself is showing a disposition to make her purchases from the nearest market available in the United States, and has recently established steamship lines connecting with United States ports.

The following table shows the principal imports into Japan from the United States in 1898, in approximate figures:

Cotton, raw	$7,530,000
Kerosene oil	2,990,000
Locomotive engines	220,000
Floor	500,000
Rails for railways	800,000
Tobacco, leaf	730,000
Cigarettes	600,000
Nails	400,000
Printing paper	400,000
Structural iron, bridges, and buildings	375,000
Sole leather	250,000
Electric light apparatus	230,000
Alcohol	195,000
Lumber	190,000
Railway material other than iron	160,000
Watches, silver	125,000
Iron pipes and tubes	110,000
Paraffin	110,000
Pig iron	210,000

Japan is, by reason of recent events, the nearest neighbor to the United States, and those whose territory is actually contiguous—Canada and Mexico. Her comparatively recent exchange of main-land territory to Russia for the line of islands stretching northwardly from her central group, brings her territory within about 500 miles of that of the United States in the Aleutian chain of islands, while at the south her newly acquired island of Formosa lies within less than 200 miles of our newly acquired territory, the Philippines. Thus not only are the United States and Japan "neighbors," territorially, but their lander possessions combined stretch along the entire Pacific coast of Asia from Arctic to Equatorial waters.

A WOMAN BACK FROM DAWSON.

Mrs. Hall Reaches Seattle With an Abundance of Cash.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 14.—Mrs. James Hall, a brave little New York woman, whose husband has not been out of the Yukon Valley for fourteen years, arrived here yesterday on the steamer Humboldt from Skagway. She brought $15,000 or $20,000 as spending money for the month that will intervene until Mr. Hall can get out.

Mrs. Hall could spend $10,000 a month for the next two years without involving her husband to the slightest extent, and then could go back to the Klondike and get enough for two years more at the same rate from Claim 17, Eldorado.

Mrs. Hall is slender and pretty. She says the Yukon Valley seems more like home than metropolitan New York. She met and married Hall in that region, and expects to return next year.

"My husband owns Claim 17, Eldorado," says William Higginbotham, Mrs. Hall's lawyer. "The clean-up for this season was $400,000. It adjoins the famous Lippy claim, which has made a Seattle V. M. C. A. instructor so wealthy. He attended a last summer won't have to take my husband's money."

"My husband will join me in the East in three weeks. He hasn't been out of the Yukon Valley for fourteen years. He has never seen an electric car, even. We'll have a good time, though, getting up to date."

"I like life in Dawson. Winter is not as disagreeable as in New York. My health is good, and with communication once established with the outside world I would as soon spend the winter there as in any other place."

"One gets used to condensed milk and bad butter. A telegraph line will reach Dawson before the river freezes, and it is reported that a new paper will get a brief press report."

"We had quite a distinguished passenger in the person of Sherman Dewey, nephew of the famous Admiral. He runs the Dewey House in Dawson and is coming out to marry a Portland girl."

Sought Death by Hanging.

Philadelphia, Aug. 14.—James Morrow, sixty years old, of 2328 Ralston Street, attempted suicide yesterday afternoon by hanging himself in the rear of his home. He lives with his four daughters at the above address, and they have been his main support for the last nine years. About two years ago his eyesight began to fail him, and has continued to grow worse ever since. Constant worry over the thought of losing his sight, it is thought, affected his mind, and probably led him to attempt to end his life yesterday. He refused to enter the house Saturday night and stayed in the back yard until morning. About noon yesterday he tied a handkerchief around his neck and tried to strangle himself to death. His groans attracted the attention of the inmates of the house, who cut the handkerchief from his neck. He was taken to the German Hospital, where it is thought he will recover.

Gas Overcomes Three Men.

Allentown, Pa., Aug. 14.—John Pisco was killed by gas, and Frank Mosser and an Italian named Perro were overcome at the Lawrence cement mills, at Siegfried's, eight miles north of this city, last night. Pisco went into a kiln to kindle a fire. He failed to return, and Frank Mosser was sent to see what was the matter. Mosser also failed to return, and Perro was sent to investigate. When he, too, failed to come back it became evident that something serious had happened. An investigation revealed that Pisco was dead and the others unconscious.

A QUEER MARITAL AGREEMENT

Hotel Keeper Morgan Resigns Claims to His Reputed Wife.

Paterson, N. J., Aug. 14.—Charles Morgan, for a number of years a hotel keeper in this city, has left town, taking with him a copy of a queer agreement. The parties to the agreement are Morgan and the woman who was known as his wife until she recently ended the partnership in an arbitrary fashion. The facts came out through the filing of papers transferring Morgan's property.

Recently Morgan returned home to find his wife gone. She returned a few days later to inform him that she had married an Italian silk weaver, named Caproni. Morgan was shocked, but concluded that he could do nothing but accept the situation. He sold his hotel and other property, but discovered that he could not make the title good without having the signature of the woman who had been known as his wife to each of the deeds. She consented to sign if Morgan would sign an agreement absolutely releasing her from any claim that he might make upon her. He is never to seek her out and should they meet, by chance he agrees that they shall act in every way like absolute strangers.
