

THE POLICE ENCOURAGED

Apparently Hopeful of Solving the Kenmore Hotel Mystery.

The Reason for Optimism Guarded With Great Secrecy—Mrs. Bonine's Stock Market Dealings—Additional Counsel Engaged for the Prisoner.

At Police Headquarters this morning the officials appeared to be greatly encouraged regarding a solution of the Ayers-Bonine mystery, and it was stated that there might be a surprise in store for the public at no distant day.

Charles A. Douglass, of Douglass & Douglass, counsel for Mrs. Bonine, announced today that they were busily engaged in considering the course to be pursued in the case and that they were preparing a formal application for bail for their client, which will be presented to one of the judges of the District Supreme Court either tomorrow or Monday.

It has been ascertained that Mrs. Bonine had had at least one transaction in stocks through one of the F Street brokers and that she made a few dollars thereby.

Mrs. Bonine retired at an early hour last night and enjoyed the most restful sleep that she has had since the night of the tragedy. The matron looked in upon her several times and remarked that her sleep was as peaceful as that of a child.

During the morning her eldest son arrived with some clean clothing and he was made the bearer of the message. He said that she would like to have them brought in order that she might send a message by them.

FLOWERS CAUSE A LAWSUIT.

Action of a French Syndicate Against C. Strauss & Co.

The hearing of the suit brought by the Syndicate Cultivateurs des Oignons de France, Val de France, against C. Strauss & Co., of this city, was continued before Justice Clabaugh, in Circuit Court, No. 2, yesterday.

The syndicate seeks to recover $1,673.19 for certain narcissus, hyacinth, and jonquil bulbs alleged to have been furnished to the defendants.

These unlooked-for results left the defendants without flowers of these varieties at the height of their season and forced them into the open market where they were compelled to pay large prices for the flowers of these varieties.
