

THE WIRELESS TELEGRAPH

Experiments Undertaken by the Army Signal Corps.

Captain Russell Encouraged Over Possibilities of Being Able to Send Messages a Distance of 200 Miles—Value of Such a Service.

Experiments with wireless telegraphy are being conducted by the Signal Corps of the Army, under the supervision of Captain Russell, detailed since his return from the Philippines as an assistant in the office of Gen. A. W. Greely, who has charge of the matter, and feels much encouraged over the possibilities of the system.

It is the purpose of the department to apply the system, when more nearly perfected, to the army transports, assuring to them a greater degree of safety than they now possess.

Should Marconi's claim be realized—the certain sending of messages 200 miles—the elimination of danger to passengers and cargo would proceed to an almost incalculable extent. A ship's radio means communication over a circle of 40 miles in diameter, and it would be difficult to find such an area on either the Atlantic or Pacific in which would not be sailing more than one vessel.

HASKELL'S INJURIES PAINFUL.

Pitcher Katell's Ball Broke a Small Bone in the Umpire's Leg.

Umpire Haskell, up until noon today, had heard nothing from Ban Johnson, President of the American League, regarding what action he had taken, if any, toward suspending Shortstop Shugart and Pitcher Katell. The Chicago team plays today at Baltimore and Umpire Haskell did not know whether Johnson had ordered the suspension of Shugart and Katell, to Captain Griffith or not.

A Crash in a Milling.

PASSAIC, N. J., Aug. 22.—The 10:30 a. m. mail from New York arrived at the Passaic postoffice yesterday, the clerk who emptied the sack was surprised to see a large live crab roll out and crawl over the table. It is supposed that the crab was put in the mailing as a joke by some one in the New York postoffice.

THE PURCHASE OF SUPPLIES.

R. J. Tracwell's Decision as to the Necessity of Advertising.

Regarding the laws relative to advertising for proposals for supplies for the Government, Robert J. Tracwell, the Comptroller of the Treasury, today rendered a very interesting decision. It was in response to a request made by Henry Rechin, disbursing clerk of the Department of Justice. Mr. Rechin asked whether the provisions of section 573 of the Revised Statutes, and acts amendatory thereof, apply to purchases made by the Spanish Claims Commission, in accordance with section 7 of the act of March 2, 1901.

Mr. Tracwell answered as follows: "As I understand the general law relative to the purchase of supplies or services for the Government, the validity of such purchase is not dependent upon the advertisement for proposals therefor, unless such advertisement is required by some affirmative law of Congress. It is the practice of the accounting officers to supply to them many services to be consistent of Congress, but to interpret and enforce such laws as Congress has seen fit to enact upon any given subject."

"If I were called upon to give a law upon the subject of the purchase by any Government officer of any class of supplies or services, I should most certainly not be sailing more than one vessel. To put it concretely, the Signal Corps hopes to establish a system by which the Government may in the least possible time be apprised of the location and condition of any one of its vessels. Should a transport meet with some accident, or unless through its automatic signals, giving its latitude and longitude, into action, and any other vessel within 200 miles would learn of its peril and come to its rescue."

Should the position of a ship's radio be such that a message could be transmitted across the ocean by relays and to other shore. Meanwhile experiments will be made at San Francisco, and while the 20-mile radius is not yet attainable with the present apparatus, it is believed that it will be helpful.
