

SHE MAY GO SCOT FREE

Feeling in La Plata as to the Fate of Mrs. Farrell.

TRIAL DRAWING TO A CLOSE

No Idea Can Be Obtained as to the Defense to Be Submitted--E. P. Hall, Defense to Be Submitted--E. P. Hall, Said to Have Killed Her Husband, Denies All the Allegations.

HER CHANCES GOOD

Outside of the relatives of the deceased who have, by their actions, displayed the most intense bitterness against the pretty woman in trial for her life, there are probably not half a score of persons who are of the opinion that Mrs. Farrell will be hanged, and as she is either clearly guilty or innocent with no possibility of an error in the jurying desert, the chances according to popular opinion indicate that she will go scot free.

HER CHANCES GOOD

No idea of the defense to be submitted can be gleaned from Col. Wilmer and his assistant, ex-Congressman Sidney E. Mudd, but it is pretty definitely understood that the defense of Mrs. Farrell will be attributed to some natural cause.

HALL ON THE STAND

In the presence of a very densely packed courtroom this morning the second week of the trial was opened with Eugene P. Hall, the alleged paramour of the prisoner on the stand, during a recess.

FURIOUS RAIN STORMS

Kansas and Indian Territory the scene of their ravages. Kansas City, Mo., July 8.—A special to the Star from Freedom, Kan., says: A blinding rain storm accompanied by high winds from the west passed over this locality extending three miles north yesterday at 3 o'clock, lasting forty minutes. There was fully four inches of water falling, washing away sidewalks, and for a time the Missouri Pacific railway tracks were under water.

NOT SUCH NAME THERE

The Times man carefully examined the register but failed to find the name of Hall therein at any time during November, while on the 18th of that month he subscribed J. B. Dale and wife, Brandywine, Md., in handwriting that closely resembled that of Eugene P. Hall on the slip of paper referred to. J. B. Dale and wife lived in Brandywine, November 13, 1894.
