SOCIETY DOTES ON DOGS

Blanche, Tray and Fido Are Now in High Favor.

Further Testimony in the Divorce Suit Instituted by the Puglist's Wife—$100 Alimony Asked.

The fact of the society girl for the possession of pets has been notably on the increase in Washington for a number of years.

From this up through all the grades of ages the school girls, society maids, and matrons are to be seen out promenading with their pet dogs.

This is especially the case in the spring and autumn. At the present the majority of the school girls are accompanied by one or more dogs.

There are all kinds of pets in addition to these dogs, for there seems to be actually no limit to the side-shows in which the fashionable fancy may amuse itself in this respect.

Somewhat less than a year ago when the Secretary of War and Mrs. Lamont returned to Washington from a Southern and Western trip, they brought with them a little black dog that became forthwith the pet of both.

HUGGED AND KISSED VERA

She Is the Cause of Champion Corbett's Domestic Woes.

Helen Gould's Special Pet Is a Black Donkey Whose Ears She Decks With Ribbons.

(By United Press.) New York, July 17.—The suit of Mrs. Olie Corbett for an absolute divorce, upon the statutory grounds, from her husband, James J. Corbett, the champion heavy weight pugilist of the world, comes up again this afternoon before Judge Edward Jacobs.

Mrs. Corbett was early on hand. She looked cheerful, and chatted and laughed with Mr. Hummel, her lawyer, in animated fashion.

Mr. Hummel had an extract from a Cincinnati paper telling of the visit of Pugilist Corbett and Mrs. Corbett to that city on April 23 last. Mrs. Corbett says she was in New York City at this particular time, and that it was "Vera" who went with her husband, and who passed as his wife.

It was 2 o'clock before the hearing began. Mrs. King was again called to the stand. Mr. Hummel asked her if she remembered any other occurrences between Vera and Mr. Corbett.

"Yes, sir," replied Mrs. King. "Mr. Corbett and I had adjoining dressing rooms. A man came in one day, and I heard Mr. Corbett introduce Vera to him as his wife."

"On another occasion—I think it was while we were going to Zanesville, Ohio—Lava Vera with her head on Mr. Corbett's shoulder."

"Did Corbett put his head on Vera's shoulder?" "Yes, sir," he said.

"Did Mr. Corbett hug and kiss 'Vera' on the train on that occasion?" "Yes, sir," he said.

Mrs. King then went on to say that at the time of Corbett's arrest and Vera registered at the hotel as Mr. and Mrs. Corbett.

Mr. Hummel then announced that it had been decided not to produce the separation papers, as they contained matters which were not necessary for publication. He asked that if the referee should decide that Mrs. Corbett was entitled to an absolute divorce that $100 a week, the same sum as allowed in the separation papers, should be paid to her by Corbett during the term of her natural life.

Lawyer Sullivan offered no objection to this. Then Mr. Hummel asked that the hearing be adjourned until Friday, July 26, in order that he might apply for a ruling commission, to get evidence of Corbett's improper acts in Pittsburgh and Cincinnati.

The referee accordingly adjourned the case to that date.

MORTALITY INCREASED.

More Than Fifty Per Cent. of Deaths The death rate for the last week shows a still further increase over that of the several previous weeks. There were 146 deaths reported at the Health Department, of whom seventy-eight were children under five years old.

There are no dangerous contagious diseases in epidemic form throughout the city, those which have been reported being epidemic and sporadic.

The effect of the high temperature of the air is seen in the comparatively large number of deaths from brain, heart, and kidney maladies, resulting mainly from congestions.

There were eight deaths by violence, two of which were by suicide. A notable case of the latter kind is that of a young man who was the annual number of fourteen fatal cases from pneumonia and other acute lung diseases, resulting in all probability from cold and recent exposure to very warm to cool weather.

JUDGE MILLER KNEW HIM. James Clarke, Pickpocket, Recognized as An Old Offender.

James A. Clarke answered to his name from the police court dock yesterday when charged with picking a lady's pocket of a purse containing four $1 bills and some change, and in him Judge Miller recognized an old acquaintance. A long time ago James was brought before him for a similar offense, and when his honor recalled that fact he exclaimed:

"That's the man. Why, I didn't recognize you at first, Jim."

Mr. W. Riley Decker, a real estate agent, who captured Clark in the act, testified as to the manner of the theft, and Judge Miller held the culprit to await the action of the grand jury in $2,000 security. Clark was committed.
