RE-execution of a Deed Requested. William Clement Grider yesterday afternoon filed suit against the surviving heirs of the late Maria Dines, a free colored woman who died in 1855, asking for the re-execution of a deed to lot 12, square 498, on C Street southwest. This was claimed to be a misnomer in the deed.

LAWS REQUIRE REVISION

Suggestions Made in Assessor Trimble's Annual Report.

INEQUALITIES POINTED OUT

Obsolete Provisions of the License Law Should Be Expunged From the Statute Books—Important Amendments Recommended—Site Selected for Smith Crematory.

Assessor Trimble filed yesterday with the Commissioners his annual report for the past fiscal year, together with his estimates for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1897.

The assessor makes no demand for an increase in his clerical force, but recommends reorganization of the salary roll, as heretofore stated in The Times.

The letter from the assistant assessors, in which an extension is asked of the time for completing their work, is quoted in full, without recommendation, except to call attention to the fact that a postponement will require that the taxes due for the year be paid in one installment, instead of semi-annually.

The assessed value of taxable lands and improvements is given as follows: Washington, $165,399,819; county, $23,522,524; total, $188,922,343. The total tax estimated on real and personal property is stated to be $2,973,790.76.

EXCEPTIONAL CONDITIONS.

The assessor reports that during the year ended June 30, 1895, 3,928 licenses were issued, including 605 barroom and 172 wholesale liquor licenses. The total amount collected was $375,410.28.

There was a slight decrease in revenues, principally from liquor licenses. This decrease is more fancied than real, however, as the enormous increase of the previous year was caused by exceptional conditions.

An immediate revision of the license laws is recommended, and the passage of new legislation to make them effective. Some of them are obsolete or have been nullified by judicial rulings, and should either be re-enacted in accordance with modern necessities and conditions, or expunged from the statute books.

It is noted that during the past year produce dealers at large who vend meats and fish, have been held by the courts to be exempt from the payment of license taxes. It is deemed to be particularly unfortunate that vendors in certain articles are taxed beyond reason, while others escape entirely. Fish dealers, he thinks, should be taxed but the fee should be reduced from $25 to $18 per annum.

ENLARGE THE TAX CLASS.

The class subject to license should be enlarged. The tax on peddlers, he says, should be reduced, the revenues from that source having fallen off more than two-thirds. New legislation should be enacted, and the class of peddlers should be made clear and explicit. There is some disposition, the assessor says, to question the right to tax peddlers, extension being claimed under the interstate-commerce act.

Distillers and manufacturers of liquor, the assessor says, contribute nothing to the license revenues of the District.

The new excise law, he says, is already engaging the attention of the law officers defining the rights of citizens claiming exemption from taxation. This refers to the social clubs. He also calls attention to the fact that the privilege of hotels to dispense liquors, in view of certain rulings, bids fair at an early date to be the subject of contention in the courts.

The deposit of license fees by clubs at the beginning of the year, prior to the decision of the court exempting such organizations, has resulted in a loss of revenue without abating the evil. Citizens complain of their proximity, but the proprietors come each day and tender the money for a license, which is renewed, but by this course they are secured immunity from prosecution in the police court. The only remedy seems to be with Congress, and he suggests that they be either abated entirely or banished beyond the city limits.

No license tax has been paid by any of the street car companies using horses as a motive power during the year. The validity of the law imposing the tax having been affirmed by the Supreme Court of the United States, it was supposed there would no further delay in the collection. The assessor says he can only call attention to the fact. Five hundred and forty-seven hacks, cabs and vehicles were licensed last year.

INSURANCE SCHEMES.

Referring to the insurance companies, the assessor says his department is overwhelmed at times with communications in reference to various assessments, fraternal and so-called benevolent organizations, building and loan associations, with an insurance branch, maturity certificates and other schemes offering inducements that can never be realized. Some of them lose here and there for awhile and then disappear. He regrets that there is no law to prevent these companies from coming here, and laws, he says, should be passed for the protection of the people. A society that solicits insurance business or offers for a consideration to pay sums of money after a lapse of time should be required to deposit with the Commissioners a sum sufficient to guarantee policy-holders against loss.

The Commissioners by an order issued yesterday gave authority to the Potomac Light and Power Company to string wires along the first street north of the city boundary, running west from the Tenleytown road for a distance of two blocks, and down the second street to the Tenley road. Permission was also given the company to replace poles on Seventh street extended.

The site for the Smith garbage crematory will be in one of two squares, and, as heretofore exclusively stated in The Times, it will be in the vicinity of the old Naval Observatory.

The contractor has an option on a site in either square 62 or 63, and has not yet determined which he will accept, but the two squares together and are the next squares north of the observatory grounds on C Street and at the foot of Tenley street.

square 62 is the next one to the north, being divided from the other by Upper Water street. The latter is quite near to the junction formed by New York Avenue and C and Tenley street.

The decision as to which square shall become the site will be made within a day or two, but it is not known when the work of construction will begin. Mr. Wainfield is at present engaged at the Brown site, at the foot of South Capitol street, considering the progress having been made toward the construction of that crematory. It is not expected that it will be ready for operation before January 1.
