ISAIAH'S PROPHECY COMING TRUE

PRINCIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATOR. BROOKLYN, April 27 .- The attraction of BROOKLYN, April 27.—The attraction of the parks in their new spring-time garb, your head are all numbers. "The hairs of your head are all numbered." Would Christ which affects many congregations at this carried the virus down into the very soil until the entire earth recked with the legrosy. Under that sinful touch nature withered. The mammate creation, as if aware of the damage done it, sent up the thorn and brier and rettle to wound, and fiercely oppose, the human race. Now as the physical earth felt the effects of the first transgression, so it shall also feel the effect of the Saviour's mission.

As from that one tree in Paradise a blight went forth through the entire earth, so from one tree on Calvary another force shall speed out to interpenetrate and check, subdue and override the evil. In the end it shall be found that the tree of Calvary has more potency than the tree tree of Calvary has more potency than the tree of Paradise. As the nations are evangelized I think a corresponding change will be effected in the natural world. I verily believe that the trees, and the birds, and the rivers, and the skies will have their millennium. If man's sin affected the ground, and the vegetation, and the atmosphere, shall Christ's work be less nowarful or less extensives. powerful or less extensive?

GOD'S WORK ON THE EARTH. Doubtless God will take the irregularity and fierceness from the elements so as to make them congenial to the race, which will then be symmetrical and evangelized. The ground shall not be so lavish of weeds and so gradgeful of grain. Soils which now have peculiar proclivities toward certain forms of evil prosins. Steep mountains, plowed down into more gradual ascent, shall be girdled with flocks of sheep and shocks of corn. The wet marsh shall become the deep-grassed meadow. Catle shall hat unharmed by caverns once haunted of wiid beasts. Children will build play houses in what was once a cave of serpents; and, as the Scripture saith, "The weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice's den."

Oh what harvests shall be reaped when neither drouth, nor excessive rain, nor mildew, nor infesting insects shall arrest the grouth, and the utmost capacity of the fields for production shall be tested by an intelligent and athletic yeomany. Thrift and competency characterizing the world's inhabitants, their dwellingplaces shall be graceful and healthy and adorned. Tree and arbor and grove around about will look as if Adam and Eve had got back to Paradise. Great cities, how neglected and unwashed, shall be orderly, adorned with architectural symmetry and connected with far distant scaports by present modes of transportation carried to their greatest perfection, or by new inventions yet to spring up out of the water, at drop from the air at the beck of a Morse or a Hobert Fulion belonging to future generations. was once a cave of serpents; and, as the Scripture saith, "The weaned child shall put

Much of this prophecy of Isaiah has already been fulfilled, and I proceed to some practical remarks upon the contributions which the natural world is making to the kingdom of God, and then draw some inferences. The first contribution which nature gives to the church is the testimony in behalf of the truth of Christian Contribution which nature gives to the church is the testimony in behalf of the truth of Christian Contributions and the church is the church in the church in the church in the church is the church in er testimony in behalf of the truth of Chris-ianity. This is an age of profound research. Nature cannot evade men's inquiries as once. chemist's laboratory she is put to tortur and compelled to give up her mysteries. Hid-den laws have come out of their hiding-place. The earth and the heavens, since they have been ransacked by geologist and botanist and astronomer, appear so different from what they once were that they may be called "the new heavens and the new earth."

SCIENCE AND RELIGION.

This research and discovery will have powerful effect upon the religious world. They must either advance or arrest Christianity, make men better or make them worse, be the church's honor or the church's overthrow, Christians, aware of this in the early ages of discovery, were nervous and fearful as to the progress of science. They feared that some natural law, before unknown, would suddenly spring into harsh collision with Christianity. Gunpowder and the gleam of swords would not so much have been feared by religionists as electric batteries, voltaic piles and astronomical apparatus. It was feared that Moses and the prophets would be run over by skeptical chemists and philosophers. Some of the followers of Aristotle, after the invention of the telescope, refused to look through the instrument less what they saw would overthough the telest what they saw would overthough the lest what they saw would overthrow the teach ings of that great philosopher. But the Christian religion has no such apprehension now, Bring on your telescopes and microscopes, and spectroscopes—and the more the better. The God of nature is the God of the Bible, and

and the universe, and in all the eternities, He has never once contradicted Himself.

Scientific discussions may be divided into those which are concluded, and these which are still in procress, depending for decision upon future investigation. Those which are concluded have invariably rendered their verdet for Christianity, and we have faith to be. let for Christianity, and we have faith to believe that those which are still in prosecution will come to as favorable a conclusion. The great systems of error are falling before these great systems of error are falling before these discoveries, which have only demonstrated the truth of the Bible, and so reinforced Christianity. Mohammedanism and paganism in their ten thousand forms have been proved false, and by great natural laws shown to be impositions. Buried cities have been exhumed, and the truth of God found written on their coffin-lids. Bartlett, Robinson and Layard have been not more the apostles of science than the apostles of religion. The dumb lins of the pyramids have opened to preach the gospel. Expeditions have been fitted out for Palestine, and explorers have come back to say that they have found among mountains, and among ruins, and on the shore of waters, living and undying evidences of our glorious Chris-and undying evidences of our glorious Chris Men who have gone to Palestine infidels have Men who have gone to Palestine infidels have come back Christians. They who were blind and deaf to the truth at home have seemed to see Christ again preaching upon Onvet, and have beheld in vivid imagination the Son of God again walking the hills about Jerusalem. Caviglia once rejected the truth, but afterward said, "I came to Egypt, and the Scriptures and the pyramids converted me." When I was in Beyrout, Syria, last December, our beloved American missionary, Rev. Dr. Jessup, told me of his friend who met the scaport of Jerusalem, and the unbelieved said to his friend: "I am going into the Holy Land to show up the folly of the Christian religion. I am going to visit all the so-called sacred places,' and write them up, and show sacred places, and write them up, and show the world that the New Testament is an imposition upon the world's credulity." Months after, Dr. Jessup's friend met the skeptic at Beyrout, after he had completed his journey through the Holy Land. "Well, how is it?" said the aforesaid gentleman to the skeptic. The answer was: "I have seen it all, and I tell you the Bible is true! Yes, it is all true!" The man who went to destroy came back to defend. After what I myself saw during my recent absence, I conclude that anyone who can go through the Holy Land and remain an unbeliever as elither a bad man or an imbecile.

Again, nature offers an invaluable contribution to Christianity by the illustration she makes of divine truth. The inspired writers selized upon the advantages offered by the natural world. Trees and rivers and clouds and rocks broke forth into holy and enthusiastic utterances. Would Christ set forth the strength of faith, He points to the sycamore, whose roots spread out and strike down, and clinch themselves amid great depths of earth, and He said that faith was strong enough to tear that up by the roots.

At Hawarden, England, Mr. Gladstone, while showing me his trees during a prolonged walk through his magnificent park, pointed out a sycamore, and with a wave of the hand said: "In your visit to the Holy Land did you see any sycamore more impressive than that?" I confessed that I had not. Its branches were not more remarkable than its roots. It was to the world that the New Testament is an im-such a tree as that Jesus pointed when He would illustrate the power of faith. "Ye might say unto this sycamore tree, Be thou plucked up by the root and be thou cast into the sea, and it would obey you." One reason why Christ has fascinated the world as no other teacher, is because instead of using severe argument He was always telling how something in the spiritual world was like unto something in the natural world. Oh these wonderful "likes" of our Lord! Like a grain of mustard seed. Like a treasure hid in a field. Like a merchant seeking goodly pearls. Like unto a net that was cast into the sea. Like unto a householder.

LESSONS IN FAITH. Would Christ teach the precision with which He looks after you, He says He counts the hairs of your head. Well, that is a long and tedious count if the head have the average endowment. It has been found that if the hairs of the head be black there are about 120,000, or if they be flaxen there are about 140,000. But impress us with the divine watchfulness and the parks in their new spring-time garb, which affects many congregations at this season, does not diminish the crowd which pours into the Academy of Music to hear the eloquent preacher. This morning the great edifice was througed, as usual, as soon as the doors were opened. After the reading of an appropriate passage of Scripture and the singing of the hymn "Glory to God on High," Dr. Talmage announced as his text Isa, Ix:13, "The glory of Lebanon shall come unto thee, the fir tree, the pine tree, and the box together, to beautify the place of my sanctuary." Following is his sermon in full:

On our way from Damascus we saw the mountains of Lebanon white with snow, and then drawn by ox teams down to the Mediterranean Sea, and then floated in great raits to Joppa, and then again drawn by ox teams up to Jerusalem to build Solomon's tennile. Those mighty trees in my text are called the "glory of Lebanon." Inanimate insture feit the effects of the first transgression. When Eve touched the forbidden tree, it seems as if the sinful contact had smitten not only that tree, but as if the air caught the pollution from the leaves, and as if the sam had carried the virus down into the very soil until the entire earth recked with the leprosy. Under that sinful tonch nature withered. The insammate creation, as if aware of the damage done it, sent up the thorn and brier and rettle to wound, and fiercely oppose, the human race. Now as the physical earth felt warms of the human race. Now as the physical earth felt warms of the many the place of many the content of the mortal transpression. The demands in the next They were thin and comparatively no meat on their bones. They seemed almost valueless, whether living or dead, Now, are appeared that the out take care of your Christ would have the Christian demands on their bones. They seemed almost valueless, whether living or dead, Now, are appeared to the thousands in the net. The since the other had comparatively no meat on their bones. They seemed almost valueless, whether livin you say, with that same inspired writer, "hast thou entered into the treasures of the snow?" And while the sharp sleet drives in your face, and the hall stings your cheek, you quote him again: "Hast thou seen the treasures of the hall?" In the Psalmist's writings I hear the voices of the sea: "Deep calleth unto deep"; and the roar of forests: "The Lord shaketh the wilderness of Kadesh," and the loud peal of the black tempest: "The God of glory thundereth:" and the rustle of the long silk on the well-filled husks: "The valleys are covered with corn;" and the cry of wild beasts: "The young lions roar after their prey;" the hum of palm trees and cedars: "The righteous shall flourish like a palm tree, he shall grow like a cedar in Lebanon;" the sough of wings and the swirl of fins: "Dominion over the fowl of the air and the fish of the sea."

THE TRUTHS OF THE GOSPEL might have been presented in technical terms these the world would not have listened or felt. have been presented were it not for the figure of a rock? How could the gladdening effect of the gospel have been set forth had not Zacharias thought of the dawn of the morning, ex-claiming: "The day-spring from on high bath visited us to give light to them that sit in dark-ness." How could the soul's intense longing for Christ have been presented so well as by the emblem of natural bunger and natural thirst? As the lake gathers into its bosom the shadow of hills around, and the gleam of stars above, so in these great deeps of divine truth all objects in nature are grandly reflected. We walk forth in the springtime and everything breathes of the Resurrection. Bright blossom and springing grass speak to us of the coming up of those whom we have loved, when in the white robes of their joy and coronation they shall appear. And when in the autumn of the year relief breather thousands of fineral the year nature preaches thousands of funeral ser mons from the text, "We all do fade as a leaf." mons from the text, "We all do fade as a leaf," and scatters her elegies in our path, we cannot help but think of sickness and the tomb. Even winter, "being dead, yet speaketh." The world will not be argued into the right. It will be tenderly illustrated into the right. Tell them what religion is like. When the mother tries to tell her dying child what heaven was, she compared it to light. "But that huris my eyes," says the dying girl. Then the mother compared beaven to music. "But any sound huris me; I am so weak," said the dying child. Then she was told that heaven was like anen she was told that heaven was like mother's arms. "Oh, take me there!" she said. "If it is like mother's arms, take me there!" The appropriate simile had been found at last. What a grand thought that the lightnings, and the tempests, and the hall, and the frosts, which are the enemies of unrighteousness, are all marshalled as

THE CHRISTIAN'S BODY-GUARD. They fight for him. They strike with an arm of fire, or clutch with their fingers of ice. Everlasting peace is declared between the flercest elements of nature and the good man, They may in their fury seem to be indiscriminate, smiting down the righteous with the wicked, yet they cannot damage the Christian's soul, although they may shrivel his body. The wintry blast that howls about your dwelling, you may call your brother, and the south wind coming up on a June south wind coming up on a June day by way of a flower-garden, you may can your sister. Though so mighty in circumference and diameter, the sun and the moon have a special charge concerning you. "The sun shall not smit thee by day, nor the moon by night." Elements and forces hidden in the earth are now harnessed and at work in producing for you food and clothing. Some grain field that you never saw presented you this day with your morninglmeal. The great earth and the heavens are the busy loom at work for you; and shooting light, and silvery stream, and sharp lightning are only woven threads in the great loom, with God's foot on the shuttle. The same Spirit that converted your soul has also converted the element from enmity toward you into inviolable friendship, and furthest star and deepest cavern, regions of everlasting cold as well as climes of eternal summer, all have a mission of good, direct or indirect, for your spirit.

Now I infer from this that the study of natand objects will increase our religious knowledge. If David and Johand John and Paul could not afford to let go without observation one passing cloud, or rift of snow, or spring blossom, you cannot afford to let them go without study. Men and women of God most without study. Men and women of God most eminent in all ages for faith and zeal, indulged in such observations—Payson and Baxter and Doddridge and Hannah More. That man is not worthy the name of Christian who saunters listless y among these magnificent disclosures of divine power around, beneath, and above us, stupid and uninstructed. They are not worthy to live in a desert, for that has its fountains and nalm trees; nor in regions to live in a desert, for that has its fountains and palm trees: nor in regions of everlasting ice, for even there the stars kindle their lights, and auroras flash, and huge icebergs shiver in the morning light, and God's power sits upon them as upon a great white throne. Yet there are Christians in the Church who look upon all such tendencies of mind and heart as soft sentimentalities, and because they believe this printed Revelation of God are content to be infidels in regard to all that has been written in this great book of the universe, written in letters of stars, in paragraphs of constellations, and illustrated with sunset and thunder-cloud and spring morning.

FROM NATURE'S OPEN BOOK. I infer, also, the transcendent importance of Christ's religion. Nothing is so far down, and othing is so high up, and nothing so far out, but God makes it pay tax to the Christian religion. It snow and tempest and dragon are expected to praise God, suppose you He expects no homage from your soul? When God has written His truth upon everything around you, suppose you He did not mean you to open your eyes and read it?

has written His truth upon everything around you, suppose you He did not mean you to open your eyes and read it?

Finally, I learn from this subject what an honorable position the Christian occupies when nothing is so great and glori us in nature but it is made to edify, defend and instruct him. Held up your heads, sons and daughters of the Lord Almighty, that I may see how you bear your honora. Though now you may think yourself unbefriended, this spring's soft wind, and next summer's harvest of barley, and next autumn's glowing fruits, and next winter's storms, all seasons, all elements, zephyr and euroclydon, rose's breath and thundercloud, gleaming light and thick darkness, are sworn to defend you, and cohorts of angels would fly to deliver you from peril, and the great God would unsheathe His sword and arm the universe in your cause rather than that harm should touch you with one of its lightest fingers. "As the mountains around about Jerusalem, so the Lord is around about His people from this time forth for evermore."

Oh for more sympathy with the natural world, and then we should always have a Bible open before us, and we could take a lesson from the most fleeting circumstances, as when a storm camé down upon England Charles Wesley sat in a room watching it through an open window, and frightened by the lightning and the thunder a little bird fiew in and nestled in the bosom of the sacred poet, and as he gently stroked it and felt the wild beating of its heart, he turned to his desk and wrote that hymn which will be sung while the world lasts:

Jesus, lover of my soul,

Let me to thy bosom fly,

While the billiows near me roll

GROVER IN PRIVATE. Ex-President Cleveland's Unostentatious Life in New York.

THE DEVOTION OF THE WHITNEYS.

Democracy's Leader Takes No Part in Purely

Local Politics.

HILL'S FRIENDS IN THE METROPOLIS NEW YORK, April 26.-Blakely Hall writes as follows concerning ex-President Cleveland: The exact position of Mr. Cleve land in New York is not difficult to define Yet so many absurd things are said and written about him that a careful and accurate statement of the ex-President's social and political position here may have a certain amount of value. I do not claim to have any special source of knowledge concerning Mr. Cleveland beyond continual observation extending over many months. My personal acquaintance with him is slight, but I see him frequently and am acquainted with his professional associates. Last Sunday I happened to be at church on Fifty-seventh street when the ex-President entered. All heads were turned toward him and it was interesting to observe how closely the congregation watched every movement he made. He bowed gravely to one or two friends, then assumed a beetlebrowed expression and stared steadfastly at the clergyman during the whole service. After church he walked down Fiftyseventh street, with his coat hanging loosely open and his head held slightly to one side, listening to the animated chatter of Mrs. Cleveland. She was beautifully dressed and a picture of youth, grace and loveliness Occasionally men whom Mr. Cleveland evidently did not immediately recognize bowed to him with pointed politeness. He bowed to him with pointed politeness. He accepted such salutations by barely raising his hat. Occasionally when he met friends a smile illuminated his face. But he seemed inherently sad. He is in appearance a big, substantial citizen who displays to the casual observer no suggestion of genius or great-

THE LION OF THE WHITNEYS Socially, it cannot be said that Mr. Cleve-Socially, it cannot be said that air. Cleveland exists in New York, except when the Whitneys call him into life. Mrs. William C. Whitney is at present one of the social leaders in New York. Her superb house is accordingly besieged almost as much as that of Mrs. Astor and the people of what are known as the "smart" set, which means the hunting, coaching, polo, yachting and dancing people—are practically well in line behind the clever wife of the ex-Secretary of the Navy. Mr. Whitney himself has been devoting a good deal of time to social duties, and the position the Whitneys hold in New York society is an important

The loyalty of the ex-Secretary of the Navy to Mr. Cleveland is absolute. The Whitneys have made him an honored guest at their dinner parties, concerts and teas, and they have pushed Mrs. Cleveland forward even more successfully than they have her husband. Occasionally some other of the Whitney coterie has Mr. Cleveland out to dinner, but such instances are rare. It cannot be said that the ex-President is in any sense popular with society people, though there is no question about the gen-eral and cordial liking which everybody feels for Mrs. Cleveland. NOT IN LOCAL POLITICS. As far as local politics are concerned, Mr. Cleveland is thousands of miles away from New York. The apparently insurmounta-ble antagonism which he managed to inspire among the local politicians here during his tenure of office in Washington has been in-tensified since he took up his residence in erous for men wh oward success in national politics to be dentified in any way with the schemers who rom time to time get such an iron grip upon New York affairs.

Doubtless Mr. Cleveland's present attitude toward New York's rulers is the result of choice; but there is a good deal of fate in it also. Perhaps it is true that he wouldn't manage things here if he could, but it is none the less true that he couldn't if he would. Mr. Arthur always kept in cordial York whether he happened to be actively or only passively engaged politically at Washington. But Mr. Cleveland is absolutely and thoroughly out of it as far as local influence is concerned. His name is never even mentioned and his wishes are not consulted in the management of the party interests here. DIGNIFIED AND THOUGHTFUL. In manner Mr. Cleveland is quiet, dignified, thoughtful and a trifle pompous, When he attends a public dinner in New York, as he did that of the pianomakers the other night, it is with a distinct and well defined purpose. This purpose is to make a speech. He arrives very late, takes his dinner quietly and, after he has delivered his speech, he shakes hands heartily with the Chairman and hurries out. In every way he shows, even to the most casual observer that he takes life seriously, though this does not mean that he denies himself any of the pleasures of a prosperous existence in New York. He attends the opera and the thea-ters regularly, and his invariable compan-ion is Mrs. Cleveland. The men of the Cleveland administration who are in New York at the present time are constantly appearing in the small talk of the day. They are all moving about. Ambition may be seething in their souls, but they manage to pluck a certain amount of enjoyment from life as the days roll by. Some of them may allow their thoughts to dwell upon the Presidental chair, but they are exceedingly shy about having it known. It is said that the knowing ones are the only men who are utterly ignorant about politics. I do not know whether that is the not, but it is a fact that Mr. Whitney is very students of affairs as a dark horse of great

WHITNEY'S OCCUPATION. His large weath, wide popularity and thorough mastery of himself have given politicians great confidence in him, but his candidacy is only possible if Cleveland is out of the way. Meanwhile Mr. Whitney whiles away the hours by attending the opera, putting railroad deals through, dabling in healt bling in banks and attending to the management of two colossal fortunes. It is now generally understood that he has practically the direction of Colonel Oliver Payne's millions besides his own. He looks a broadshouldered and handsome athlete, and though he professes not to care at all for local politics, he manages to have things pretty much his own way when he cares to take the trouble.

Perhaps the most interesting figure of the Cleveland administration is the ex-President's former private secretary. The mys-tery of Lamont is profound. He is effacing himself thoroughly and pushing the inter-ests of his friends. These friends are three of the righest men in New York. Lamont has impressive offices in the Mills building, and the sole desire of his life seems to be to sink into apparent oblivion. He is forever try-ing to get out of sight. When he enters a cab he pulls down the shade, and his tavorite seat on an elevated train is at the tail end of the last car with his back to his fellow-passengers.

A VERY HARD WORKER He goes to his office very early in the morning, slides in through a private door, and remains secluded until all but his confidential clerk have departed for the night. He is successful in an extreme degree, but he is as anxious to keep this knowledge from mankind as most men are to conceal a tailure. Lamont seldom smiles. He is thinner than when he was in Washington, and his long vigils at his deak have cast a pallor over a face that was never particular-ly radiant. He is destined to be a very rich man, and there is no doubt that his fortune has grown to comfortable proportions. The greatest success of the ex-private secretary has been won by the introduction of the element of honesty in dealing with the political rulers of New York City.

They have not been supposed that way

cal rulers of New York City.

They have not been approached that way in a very long time and probably Lamont's success was as much due to the novelty of his attack as to any other cause. For many years it has been the custom in New York for capitalists who wish to introduce a railroad or any other similar improvement to attempt by means of bribery and corruption to push their measures through. It was usually a question of price. Mr. Lamont has returned to the primeval plan of operations by offering a liberal franchise to the city in an open and honorable way. The authorities have met him half way, but they are rather dazed and baffled by the developments.

THE FOLLOWING OF HILL. The following of Mr. Cleveland's antagonist, Governor Hill, in the city is very large and as that astute statesman has his hands full in Albany he does not meddle at all with reform in municipal affairs. Mr. Hill's sauvity is marked; he is one of the most thoroughly contented and aminable men most thoroughly contented and amiable men as far as appearances go, that I have ever seen. His visits to New York are frequent and as a rule they are unheralded. His taste in theatricals runs to burlesque and he visits the comic opera theaters more fre-quently than those which present the heavier style of plays. On such an occasion the Governor sits in the very rear of a box, while his companions take the front seats. After the performance is over Mr. Hill goes to his regular rooms in the Hoffman House and receives the politicians until 12 o'clock. At that hour everybody leaves, while the Governor goes to bed and sleeps 61/4 hours. This is his limit. He is lean, sinewy, ambitious, and his friends swear by him.

MARRIED YOUNG AND REPENTED.

Two Sisters Who Wedded Brothers Grante Divorces Together. MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., April 27 .- At a special term of the Delaware County Supreme Court at Delhi, Justice Charles E. Parker presiding, divorces were granted for identical causes to two sisters who had simultaneously married two brothers. The actions were brought by Carrie Mayo against Zenas Mayo, and by Louisa Mayo against George Mayo, and the grounds in each case were cruelty. The plaintiffs are the daughters of Harrison Lakin of Hancock, and are nieces of the Rev. Arad Lakin, widely known in connection with his services as an army chaplain in the War of the Rebellion, and subsequently with the New York City Five Points Mission. They are highly connected on the mother's side with the well-to-do Wheeler family of the Delaware River Valley.

The plaintiffs, who are still young and beautiful women, when mere school girls of 14 and 15 years respectively, were married, in a moment of willful caprice, to the brothers Mayo, who were greatly their social inferiors, and, as it now appears, were otherwise unworthy. After about four years of unhappy wedded life, they simultaneously appealed to the court for release from the contral bonds. The court release from the conjugal bonds. The court awards to each an absolute divorce, with leave to resume her maiden name and marry again, and with the full custody of her children.

EXCITING SCENE AT A BURIAL.

The Earth Caves In, Carrying a Man and Monument Into the Grave. MIDDLETOWN, CONN., April 27 .- There was an exciting scene in the cemetery at Cortland at the burial of Frank Hotchkiss, a young man who was killed by the accidental falling of a factory elevator. The family and friends had gathered around the grave and the officiating clercyman had paused in the services while the body was being lowered to its final resting place. tenure of office in Washington has been in-tensified since he took up his residence in this city. It is, of course, exceedingly dan-ried down the heavy granite base and shaft of the family monument and smashed the coffin. James Robinson, one of the pallhearers was also carried down into the grave and was nearly suffocated by the earth that caved in upon him. He was dug out in a badly bruised condition. While the excitement and alarm prevailed women faint ed and the mourners uttered loud wails of runted for an hour until the body could be transferred to another coffin and the grave cleared. EXCAVATIONS IN PALESTINE.

Permission Granted by the Turkish Govern ment to Resume Work. LONDON, April 27 .- The officers of the Palestine Exploration Fund of England ancounce that atter a long delay they have at last received a firman from the Sultan of Turkey which gives them permission to resume their excavations and researches in Palestine. The Turkish Government requested the officers of the society to furnish the name of the site at and around which they propose to bethemselves to transmit to the Imperial Museum in Constantinople all objects of antiquity found in the excavations. They are permitted, however, to keep duplicates and to make copies and take squeezes of all inscriptions and reliefs and to take photographs of everything.

The society has entered into an arrangement with Flinders Petrie, the well-known and successful explorer of Egypt, to carry on its work. It will require £1,000 for the conduct of the work during the spring, and it asks all those interested to contribute.

Your Blood

overcome the impurities which have accumu ated during the winter, or which may be hereditary, and cause you much suffering. We con-fidently recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as the very best spring medicine. By its use the blood is purified, enriched and vitalized; that tired eling is entirely overcome, and the whole body given strength and vigor. The appetite is restored and sharpened, the digestive organs are toned, and the kidneys and liver invigorated. "I was very much run down in health, had no strength and no inclination to do anything. I have been taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and that tired feeling has left me; my appetite has returned; I am like a new man." CHAUNCE
