Hennessy on the night of October 14, 1890, that he was incarcerated in the parish prison under that charge and subsequently indicted by the grand jury; that he remained in the prison from that date until March 14, 1891; that some time in the earlier part of March, 1891, nine of the accused with whom he was jointly charged came on and were placed on trial in the Criminal District Court; that the trial resulted in the acquittal of six of the accused and a mistrial as to the remaining three; that the following day there appeared in the columns of the New Orleans Times and Times-Democrat a card signed by the defendants in this case calling a mass meeting and urging all persons attending to come prepared for action; that the call was in accord with a line of action previously mapped out at a meeting of the defendants held on the previous evening; that the defendants and others unknown did assemble at the hour and place named and were imprisoned in the Western Penitentiary.
