

FREE TRADE IN SYRIA.

Manufacturers Paralyzed by Lack of a Protective Tariff.

WHERE ALL WEALTH IS HIDDEN

For Fear It Will Fall Into the Hands of the Sultan's Tax Collectors.

BLAINE'S FAME IN THE FAR ORIENT

Mr. Esakiel Taminosian, the Syrian gentleman who has been in the city for several weeks, and who has delivered very interesting lectures in half a dozen or more of the leading churches on his native country, in an interview yesterday gave some facts relative to the form of government in his country. He said:

"There is hardly any form to the Syrian Government. It is not a republic. The Sultan of Turkey is the 'all powerful' over all the country and its officers. He being the eldest, inherited his office, and the next eldest in the family will inherit it from him. He is a man of great taste and a lover of pleasure. His gardens and palaces are beautiful. He receives a salary of $5,000,000 a year and lives in luxury with a great number of wives and servants. His support must come from the poor of the country without benefiting them in return. The soil is very rich and fruitful, and the yield of crops is very abundant, but the wealthy and industrious hide their means because they have no protection from the Government.

Beaten by Foreign Manufacturers.

"European manufacturers can furnish different kinds of articles cheaper than they can manufacture themselves. They have free trade, you know, throughout the country. In Syria, as well as the whole Turkish empire, the system of free trade prevails. The manufactured articles are poured in from the European ports, and the people who are living in the country have little to do. The laborer receives from 16 to 25 cents for a long day's labor, while in this country the laboring man would spend that amount and even more in his soda water and cigars. The people of this country ought to be more grateful to their Government for furnishing them protection. The great number of foreigners here who have not yet studied the institutions of this great country and tasted liberty favor free trade so they can import articles free of duty from their own land, accumulate wealth and take the money across the waters, while it ought to remain here for the benefit of the people."

Mr. Taminosian was asked if the people in Syria were intelligent enough to realize what liberty and protection really signified, and if they enjoy life as did the people of this country.

The Home of Ancient Civilization.

"Yes," he said, the people in and about Syria know what the higher civilization means. They know that they had the most highly civilized country at one time and supplied the world with their rich products. They know they had cities such as Antioch, my birthplace, a city which, until the great earthquake, 115 A. D., was the great center of the Eastern world, celebrated for the splendor of its palaces, and the magnificence of its palaces, and which at one time contained a population of 400,000. It is the city where Paul founded the Primitive Church; where commerce that floated on the Grantes touched the uttermost parts of the empire; where the Crusaders defeated the Saracens, and where for more than a thousand years the curious of the pious pilgrim has bent his footsteps. The people understand their country's past glory and wonder why they do not enjoy such blessings at the present time. It is no wonder to my mind, however, because I have seen the great United States and watched the workings of its government, and the constant care and protection over its people.

Men Who Sigh for Liberty.

"There are strong and intelligent men in Syria who can invent, but, instead of doing so, they admire the Western inventors and praise them for their telephones, and electric lights and other wonders, and wish they were under a Government like that of the United States—a country where liberty means common right to all and a place where human beings are treated like men." Mr. Taminosian is an ardent Blaine admirer and would go, he said, a thousand miles to vote for him if nominated.

"He is also known in my country," he said. "My father wrote me after the Italian controversy, saying that Mr. Blaine was a great and wonderful man. He carried on that dispute with great coolness and ability, that made his fame world-wide."

In regard to the cradle of Christianity—Jerusalem—Mr. Taminosian stated that from a real estate dealer's standpoint the city is booming. Lots that were selling some years ago from $100 to $500 now command thousands, and the population is rapidly increasing. The Rothschilds have taken an interest in the city, have purchased property there, established business, and many Hebrews from various parts of the world are now returning to the land of their fathers.

Mr. Taminosian has been in this country over nine years. He has succeeded in securing a good education and is now lecturing in the interest of a Christian school to be started in Antioch September next. He says the people in Syria need to be educated. If they only can learn to think intelligently the country in a few years will be transformed and transfigured.

CUMBERLAND, MD.

Facilities for Transportation. Cumberland's facilities for transportation are unequalled by any city of its size in the Union. It is distinctly a railroad town, having the following railroads running into the city: The Baltimore and Ohio, main line; the Pittsburgh and Chesapeake Bay, running to Pittsburgh, thence via the Pittsburgh and Western to Cleveland, Toledo and Chicago (the end of the division of the Pittsburgh and Connellsville being there); the Pennsylvania, connecting with the main line at Hagerstown, Pa.; the West Virginia Central Railway has its terminus here and runs through the rich coal and timber fields of West Virginia. In addition, here the West Virginia Central propose to extend their line south to connect with the Chesapeake and Ohio Railroad, and east to connect at Hagerstown with the Cumberland Valley, Western Maryland and Shenandoah Valley Railroads. They will then, by these connections, have an outlet east by the Reading Railroad. In addition to these railroads, Cumberland has the Cumberland and Pennsylvania, running from Cumberland through the coal fields of Allegany county to Piedmont, where it connects with the Baltimore and Ohio; the George's Creek and Cumberland, extending through the same coal fields and terminating at Lonaconing, and the Eckhart branch of the Cumberland and Pennsylvania, which runs to other mines in the Cumberland region. Splendid and cheap transportation is also afforded by the Chesapeake and Ohio canal to tide-water from Cumberland.

The Humboldt Land and Improvement Company will have their first great public sale of lots on the premises, Wednesday and Thursday, June 8 and 9, 1892. Bids are invited on all railroads. All are invited. For further particulars, address the company's office, No. 3 South Liberty street, Cumberland, Md., or Washington Danenbower, real estate broker, corner Thirteenth and G streets, N. W., Washington, D. C., or W. G. Beckenbaugh, auctioneer, Baltimore, Md.

Northrop's Patent Faneled Metal Ceilings are neat, durable and artistic for all classes of buildings.
