pose that international relations through which the mutual interests of the several trades individually and of the wage working classes in general may be promoted on the two continents.

Resolved, That, in order to remove any misapprehension or misrepresentation as to the real aims of this conference, we hereby declare that the proposed bureau of information and correspondence shall be administered by the duly elected representatives of labor bodies, as provided in the plan of organization adopted by this conference...

Some wanted each delegate to be assessed; others wanted the different organizations represented to pay equally, which would not be the case if the delegates would pay equally, as some organizations sent more than one delegate...

N. L. Griet was appointed financial agent of the bureau. The other resolutions reported by the committee and finally adopted are as follows:

Resolved, That we, the delegates to this conference, representing 200,000 workmen of the United States extend our heartfelt sympathy to the locked-out workmen at Homestead...

Resolved, Also that the said workmen in their struggle to maintain their natural rights, to organize and combine to protect themselves against the aggressions of combined capital are morally justified in pursuance of the line of conduct they have followed...

Regret the Loss of Human Life. Resolved, That we regret the loss of human life, but recognize the fact that this sacrifice was the result of our present industrial condition, and will continue so long as our present capitalist system of production remains...

Resolved, That we condemn the action of the Carnegie Foundation in refusing to arbitrate with the men, who by their labor as co-partners have produced all the capital of the Carnegie concern, which is employed to deprive them of their inalienable rights as American citizens...

Resolved, That we condemn the military authorities for their action in subjecting a citizen of the United States to cruel, inhuman and barbarous treatment, and demand that the officers who approved of such punishment be removed from office and deprived of their commissions...

More Substantial Than Resolutions. During the discussion on the resolution, Delegate McBride said that a stack of resolutions would not buy a dinner and that he sympathized with the Homestead people to the amount of $2, and asked the delegates to give something more substantial than sympathy...

Resolved, That the labor organizations of the United States extend their sympathy to the locked-out men at Homestead, and that financial aid be forwarded to them to help them in their struggle.

The following committee was appointed to have a report of the conference printed and circulated in this country and Europe. Jere Dougherty, J. Pichel, N. L. Griet, Geo. A. Comback and Timothy Hovey.

Executive Committees will be appointed by the various trades unions represented, provided they approve of the work done at the conference, and the bureau work henceforth will be carried on by the organizations through their committees.

Though there were sharp words and bitter feeling during both sessions, every delegate seemed in good humor in the evening, when the conference passed a motion of final adjournment.
