

CRESPO IS IN POWER.

The Fact Is Officially Confirmed in a Dispatch From Walker.

LOS TEQUES BATTLE SETTLES IT.

A United States Consul Is Fired at by a Government Vessel.

VENEZUELA AND PEOPLE DESCRIBED

WASHINGTON, Oct. 7.—A dispatch from Admiral Walker to the Navy Department confirms the reported victory of Crespo in Venezuela; announces that the present Government has fallen, and that General Crespo will soon be at the head of the new Government. The dispatch of Admiral Walker said in substance:

"Revolutionists successful. Crespo victorious. President and Ministry have abandoned Venezuela. Crespo takes possession of Caracas to-day."

From this dispatch it will be seen that the next probable step will be the announcement of a new Government, with General Crespo at the head of affairs.

An unofficial dispatch from La Guayra via New York says United States Consul Phillip C. Hanna has been fired at from the guns of a Venezuelan war ship while on a visit to Maento in a private boat. Fortunately the United States consular representative was not struck. Whether the firing was an intentional insult to the American flag remains to be seen. Maento has been the scene of several sanguinary engagements which have ended in the defeat of the Government forces.

THE PORT OF LA GUAYRA.

What a Dispatch Correspondent Saw When He Visited the Seat of War—Worthless Forts Deemed Impregnable—People Rely on the United States for Protection. THE DISPATCH received yesterday the following telegram from a special correspondent in Venezuela, descriptive of the country, inhabitants and customs, which is of interest at the present time:

On approaching La Guayra, the port of Caracas, from the north, at a distance of 40 miles or more, one sees a dark outline above the horizon which gives the impression of land, but should one suggest this idea he or she would promptly be contradicted by at least one-half of those present. Nevertheless all doubt is soon removed, for within an hour or so you are near enough to see high mountains in front and on both sides.

At the foot of these mountains La Guayra lies in front. At the foot is a small beach upon which the principal part of the town is built. From the sea La Guayra has the appearance of an amphitheater, with the bright spots made up of different colored houses, surrounded by flags of various nations. Some of these flags are the flags of others are private houses whose owners still claim citizenship in the mother country. All have the same meaning, however, and woe to the revolutionist who dares to maltreat one of the occupants, for in the harbor we see numerous men-of-war, whose forces have combined for mutual protection, and at a signal from any Consulate are prepared to send armed boats' crews to fight the wrong.

What One Finds on Leaving Ship.

On landing we met the usual crowd of wharfmens, most of them jabbering like so many parrots in the Spanish tongue as spoken in South American countries. But a few steps and we cross a railroad, this with telephones, forming the connection link with the capital. The railroad, by the way, is 22 miles in length, following an old wagon road, winding in and around the mountains to Caracas, 3,500 feet above the sea. It is said that there is not a straight rail in its entire length, and one readily believes that when he knows the distance is eight miles over the mountains. There is a fair wagon road direct, and the drive may be made in three hours, while considerable freight is packed over on burros still, though the two hours by rail is quicker and surer.

Now we enter the train proper, passing a plaza in which is a crowd of soldiers—the Indians of the country being in the ranks, and a sorry looking lot they are. Brown, dirty, wearing a uniform that was once white, but now having a colorizing more nearly with the complexion. The streets are narrow and crooked, and in all Spanish towns, with one or two notable exceptions, the stores are dark and dirty, with an indescribable odor from a combination of garlic, with some one or more of a hundred smelling things. But when you visit the clubs you find it cool and pleasant, with the daily papers and numerous illustrated ones of other countries.

A Very Considerable Boulder.

Suddenly you come upon a large rock, weighing hundred tons, surrounded by green grass, and are told that in the near past it came crashing down the mountain side to stop at this point for no apparent reason. A grateful public erected the cross as an expression of thanks for not taking the rest of the town in its path. Of course, you wish to visit the bull ring, and ascend the hill to your right, enter a rickety, open building of a circular form.

The only place one may not visit is the fort on the top of the hill and commanding the harbor. Entrance to this is impossible, and one can only form an opinion of its usefulness from outside appearances, and as you see broken walls, with an old-fashioned cannon protruding here and there, this decision must be far from complimentary to the Government. Strange to say, the natives think this cannot be taken, and they also think that in case it were bombarded by any European power, the United States would intercede. At the same time their opinion of Americans at present is "way below par."

Arms Carried by the Native Troops.

The soldiers carry rifles of all descriptions, from the old-fashioned musket to the modern Lee magazine rifle, but none are without the "machete," a long knife similar to one the butchers use, with which most of the fighting is done.

Passing through the side streets you see children up to the age of 10 clothed only in a tain covering of air, while those having passed that age wear only what is indispensable.

The harbor is protected by a breakwater of about one-fourth of a mile in length, to which steamers may moor. Before the revolution this port was very busy—likewise the railroad—and as freight is charged for at the rate of $1 per ton to Caracas, one is prepared to hear that a dividend of 5 per cent per month is paid.

The lungs are strained and racked by a persistent cough, the general strength wasted, and an incurable complaint often established thereby. Dr. D. Jayne's Expectant is an effective remedy for coughs and colds, and exerts a beneficial effect on the pulmonary and bronchial organs.

A VERY BAD BOY.

Raymond Wilson Arrested and Will Be Sent to Morgantown. Raymond Wilson, a West End boy, was arrested yesterday and locked up in the Thirty-sixth ward police station for incorrigibility. The charge was preferred by his mother and he will likely be sent to Morgantown, as papers have been made out and only require Judge Suceop's signature. When arrested yesterday he was fighting with his sister and smashing everything he could get hold of. Word was sent to the police station and Sergeant McCurry responded. He found the boy throwing dishes at the other members of the family. He had some trouble in making the arrest.

For several months past complaints have been made as to the conduct of Wilson and he has been arrested twice before, but was let off on promise to do better. His mother, who is a widow, says she can do nothing with him.

A MODEL LOCOMOTIVE.

The Pennsylvania Road Experiments With a New Engine.

One of the largest locomotives ever used on the Pennsylvania lines was at the head of the Western express when it arrived at the Union station yesterday morning. It was built at Schenectady, N. Y., for the company, and yesterday made its trial trip. If the test comes up to the promise made by the manufacturers, a number of such engines will be put on the road. The locomotive has ten wheels on each side, six drivers, each 2 feet 6 inches high. It weighs altogether 135,000 pounds. The Pennsylvania is constructing the Altoona shops a still larger engine than this. The drivers will be seven feet and the weight 140,000 pounds.

FELL FROM A BOOB.

William Johnson Suffers Severe Injuries by Falling on a Pile of Stones. William Johnson, an operator at the Paoli station, near the Point bridge, fell from the roof of the station yesterday and had an arm broken in two places, his thigh fractured and was otherwise severely injured. He was taken to his home on Steuben street.

When the accident happened, Johnson was on the roof repairing the wires, which had become damaged. The roof was covered with ice and his foot slipped as he was making his way along the comb of the roof. He rolled to the ground, falling upon a pile of stones, which bruised him in a terrible manner.

EXPOSITION—Columbus discovered America four hundred years ago, but did not have an opportunity of seeing the Great Pittsburgh Exposition. You are more fortunate.

EXPOSITION—"The Last Days of Pompeii." We are not interested in the last days of Pompeii; "old Pompeii" is a back number. It is the approach of the last days of the Exposition that is causing us uneasiness. It will positively close October 22.

EXPOSITION—"In the Gloaming." The Exposition, with its myriads of electric lights, delicious music floating through the massive building, and beautiful displays, make a scene, to which Aladdin's palace in the fairy tales is not to be compared for beauty.

EXPOSITION—"Good by, Sweetheart, Good by."

but we still have the dear old Exposition to while away the weary hours; one always feels happy and contented when there.

Another System in Signaling Adopted by the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

It is the intention of the Pennsylvania Railroad to place a system of interlocking signals all through the road. At present the company is erecting a power house in the vicinity of Holmesburg Junction, near Philadelphia, to furnish power to the new $1,000,000 system which they mean to put in. Already the automatic system of signaling is used between this city and Wall station, but the new departure, while similar in detail, is somewhat of a slight improvement. It is operated by the wheels of the locomotive as it passes along over the rail. Two wires are placed along each rail. These are connected with signals which are connected by the current the moment the wheel of the engine touches it.

The new system is being introduced for the purpose of reducing accident. It not only gives warning of approaching trains, but tells their exact location within two blocks ahead and behind it.

SULLIVAN was starved and exhausted before he met Corbett according to Dr. Grier's signed report published for the first time in THE DISPATCH to-morrow.
