

BISMARCK'S BLAMED
By Nearly Everybody in Germany for His Vicious Attacks ON THE EMPEROR'S PET SCHEME.

The Prince's Own Speeches Quoted Against his Present Stand.

SOCIAL DEMOCRATS AND THEIR HOPES

(BY CABLE TO THE DISPATCH.)
BERLIN, Nov. 6.—(Copyright.)—Prince Bismarck has again made himself the question of the hour. Fearing, apparently, to enter the Reichstag and fight Count Von Caprivi on technical military grounds, he has voiced his antagonism in an interview with the press, in which he carefully calculated malice and irrelevant treasury in the end, surpasses anything in his past official utterances.

While accomplishing much mischief, undoubtedly, among the people, and seriously embarrassing the Government, however, it is undeniable that the ex-Chancellor has again lowered himself officially in the estimation of the German people. Even among the Liberals, whose cause he ought to be highly honored, he has caused a general feeling of apprehension and disgust.

Everybody is anxious as to the event of his unprovoked attack upon the whole people and policy of the present Government.
Will Emperor William repress his feelings sufficiently to refrain from a state trial? All hope that will be the result of the influential men of Prussia would blame him if he should not.

Everywhere one hears references to Prince Bismarck's course against Harry Von Armin, who, for less serious offenses, was hunted from office and hounded from Germany. The state of feeling in high civil and military quarters certainly warrants the most serious apprehensions. The feeling against the ex-Chancellor is little less than fury and hatred, and the suggestion made in all earnestness that should the Emperor still abstain from legal action he ought at least to remove Bismarck's name from the army and strip the King's coat of honors.

One of the most singular features of the Bismarck interview, with its reckless revelations of the secret history of the German Government, is that it was given soon after the Zukunftsinterview, in which Prince Bismarck, ostensibly protesting his loyalty to the crown, and thereby excusing himself, as a member of the army, refused to appear in Parliament the Emperor's policy.
The whole intent and purpose of the Bismarck interview, on the other hand, is to embarrass the Government, and it is impossible to imagine that Bismarck expected to bring about the wounded vanity of perhaps the only possible explanation, and even this explanation requires further explaining. Many think that the slight attention paid to the Zukunftsinterview was such a revelation to the Prince of his waiting people that he sought in the Bismarck interview to challenge the attention of the country to any cost.

The Criticisms All Contradictory.
It is doubtful that Prince Bismarck's bitting criticisms of the military bill will have much effect upon its prospects, for these criticisms are at once two-edged and contradictory. Every argument now advanced by him against the bill can be answered at length with quotations from his speeches in which he was urging the passage of the Septennat and other bills designed to increase the military burdens of the people. His objections to the Septennat now term are mere echoes of the objections already made by the Conservatives who yearn for the return of the old system.

Not Altogether Consistent.
This argument is somewhat weakened by its source, in view of the fact that the Government has documents proving that Prince Bismarck himself, just before his fall, planned to submit to the Reichstag a military bill proposing changes which would have necessitated the additional annual expenditure upon the army of 120,000,000 marks.

The most reprehensible utterances of Prince Bismarck in the Bismarck interview, however, are his gratuitous insults to the celebrated men now in the state service or retired from it in the Reichstag.
Thus, he accused Herr Von Radowicz, Imperial Ambassador at the Court of Madrid, of drinking too much wine and revealing state secrets while drunk. This accusation Herr Von Radowicz will answer with a fine suit, if the foreign office will grant him permission.

Concurrently with this renewed activity more intimate relations have been established between the Executive Committee and the rank and file. As proof of this last assertion, which will be disputed at the congress by many persons believing that the committee has been an automatic body, the report gives some statistics. Between the Halle and Erfurt congress the committee received 2,227 letters and postal cards. Between October 1, 1891, when the last congress was held, and the present time the number increased to 3,041. In the latter period, also, the number of replies sent out increased from 3,000 to 3,400 in the former period. Considering Social Democratic figures certainly do not prove much in the committee's favor.

Inner Life Full of Improvements.
The committee has also sent out and received thousands of circulars, pamphlets and tracts. The inner life of the party is described by the report as quiet but full of significant improvements in the last year.
The decision of the Erfurt congress that the members are said to have held the so-called opposition in check and to have imposed the discipline of the party organization. Complaints that the agitation has not been sufficiently vigorous in connection with the assertion that the committee has done all in its power to increase the interest in the cause and bring new converts to the party.
The sentences of Social Democrats to imprisonment during the last year are 127 and 127 days. The fines have amounted to 20,562 marks. The report ends with the prophecy that the cause will proprietor in the future as never before, and that unprecedented triumph will await the party when the country shall go to the polls to elect a new Reichstag. The Russo-German treaty, however, has not been mentioned by Bismarck. He has only referred to it in a general way, and has not mentioned it in favor of the Russian grain. The opinion grows that Russia never intended to proceed further with the negotiations than was necessary to enable Germany to enter the proper mood for placing a Russian loan in Berlin. It is regarded as only a matter of weeks when the negotiations will stop and all hope of a commercial understanding will be abandoned.

The Dispatch's electric action bulletin will be flashed every 15 seconds from The Dispatch building Tuesday evening.

SERIOUS BREAK EXPECTED.

Statements Coming From Strikers Are That Fully Twenty-Five Men Will Apply For Positions in the Homestead Mill This Morning.

Matters were quiet at Homestead yesterday except for the presence of abiding groups of men on the street corners, discussing the probabilities of a serious break this morning. Concerning this there are so many contradictory reports that it is impossible to state accurately in advance.
Some statements coming from strikers are that fully 25 men will apply for jobs this morning, and that several skilled workers would take laboring jobs until they could secure better positions.

Another story is that only six men have contracted with the company to return to work and that certain places in support of this The DISPATCH correspondent spoke to an engineer who applied for a position. The man admitted that he had asked for a place, but said he was informed that he would have to return to-day. He also said that on Saturday six men came to his house and told him they secured jobs and were going in Monday, so he had better join the crowd.
Through our inquiries with the engineer went yesterday and was proposed to go to work on Monday.
Mill foremen claim there will be no large break, for the reason that no considerable body of men can be given employment at once, as most of the positions have been filled. The great strike is now over four months old, and an authority asserted that only 50 strikers have so far accepted company terms. In the meantime, though, the mill management has secured about 2,000 workmen elsewhere who are in the mill.
Altogether the company has engaged 4,000 men, but for quite awhile nearly as many left or were discharged. There was a report yesterday that over one-half the deputy sheriffs are to be withdrawn at once. This is denied by Chief Young.

Died From a Fall.
Hugh McCoy, an old man who lived on Berlin alley, died yesterday from the effects of a fall. While leaving his home Saturday evening to see the Republican parade, he stumbled on his door step, injuring himself internally.

A Presentable Pair
Of shoes is an essential factor in one's dress. The most stylish and elaborate costume is fatally marred by the appendage of unsightly shoes which have visibly survived their usefulness.
Think of your feet first, your dress second. More people look at the feet and how they are fitted than they do the dress. A defective fitting shoe is very noticeable, and certainly very uncomfortable. You can rugs alike. We have our own collectors in Turkey and Persia and import our goods in large quantities. We keep the select for our trade and sell the balance to the American stores. We guarantee to give the correct names of every rug we sell, as we are native dealers. We secure fine rugs from the Turbaned Turk and Persian at reasonable prices, as they do not know the value of the fine articles, so we are enabled to sell our goods at the very lowest figures possible.

Remember, this is our specialty, and we have stores in many of the large cities. We keep nothing but the Imported Goods. Our goods come direct by invoice through the Custom House.
