A Two Thousand Mile Chase After a Husband.

Yesterday morning, a young wife, named Christiana Nelson, carrying a two-year-old child in her arms, was brought to the central station from the Detroit and Milwaukee depot, to have the chief of police see to getting her a railroad pass to Lawrence, Mass. The wife was poorly off for clothing, the infant was haggard and pale, and the wife had a sad story to tell.

Much against the advice of her friends, the wife determined to pursue the path which she had chosen. By selling off all her furniture, she raised about $60 in money, and passed through Detroit in April, having heard that Nelson was in Chicago.

She remained in Chicago several days without getting a clue of his whereabouts, and then received notice that her husband was in Jackson, Illinois. She at once proceeded there, and found that she was on the right track. He had gone forward into the Missouri border. Her money being nearly exhausted, Mrs. Nelson set out on foot, carrying the child in her arms, and did not pause for even a day's rest until reaching Livingston county, Missouri; always a few days behind the pair, who were making for a relative of Nelson residing near Downs, in the above-named county.

Mrs. Nelson arrived to find that the two had departed the day before for Kansas, and at this point she packed her trunk and had been out on money for a week; her clothing was soiled and torn, her food and lodgings were the gift of farmers, and she made up her mind not to follow the husband further.

Failing to be provided for otherwise, she took her child on her arms and started for Jackson, walking every mile of the way, begging food and a place to sleep. At Jackson she was forwarded to Chicago by the postmaster.
