Poetry.

From the Savannah (Ga.) News & Herald. "The Gray." Sing, if you will, the rosy red Bright curtains round the moon, Or golden beams of the midday shed, From dazzling sunsets short, Or emerald tints in tender grass, Or spring's first, untraced, Or golden beams of the midday shed, To sing the dunder gray.

Are the People Asleep?

Intelligent men in other parts of the world must look with astonishment upon the spectacle which our country now presents; for to them it must be apparent that the citizens of our country are asleep.

The Deaf Mute's Prayer.

We have no tongue to tell our woes, No word to ask your care; Cut off as by a two-fold bow, From pleasures those around us know, Our lot is lonely here below— Oh, hear our silent prayer!
