FASHIONS OF THE SEASON.

Some of the Latest Ideas in Gowns, Coats and Millinery.

The New York Times gives an idea of what will be fashionable this season in millinery, coats and gowns. It says: Here is an exhibition of new gowns, coats and millinery, which gives in a nutshell most of the new ideas of the season. Skirts are full, the greater number of them, tucked, shirred, some times tucked and shirred at one and the same time; plaited, and where they still cling to the close-fitting lines showing hip yokes and front panels, and the back frequently without a vestige of fullness except where they are cut in graceful curves.

Fancy tailor suits are made up with colors, a lot of this introduced into the jacket in some way, and are trimmed with handsome buttons in metal combined frequently with small buttons matching the material of the gown in color. Leather is used with these fancy tailor makes, and is frequently stitched with silk to match the foundation color. In addition to the leather, lace also goes into the pretty suits. B-verve tailor suits are made with the long, simple coats, three-quarter lengths as a rule.

Evening coats come in long and three-quarter lengths as usual, and are made of cloth and silk combined with chiffon and lace, in many of the finest coats these being made into the garment. Fur trims the heavier cloth coats.

In furs moleskin is the latest, and appears in coats, muffs and collars, plain and frequently combined with ermine. Squirrel will be worn as last year, and is also combined frequently with ermine.

The domestic gowns are among the handsomest, and one of the closely fitting ones is of lavender or heliotrope crepe de chine combined with a pale blue. The upper part, or deep yoke, to the gown is of a rich heavy lace, fitting smoothly over the chest and shoulders, and finishing with a fall of fringe over the tops of the sleeves. The stock is of lace finished with a line of blue around the top to match the velvet around the waist. The bodice below the lace yoke is of the plain crepe de chine full at the top and gathered in fall at the waist line.

The skirt is made of tucks and lace tucks set diagonally, fitting snugly over the hips down to the first broad band of lace let in a deep point, more tucks below this and another pointer band of lace. A straight band of the same lace is set into the smooth back and carried the full length of the gown. The hat worn with this gown is a blue fur felt trimmed with silk the color of the gown.

One of the fancy tailor suits, a three-piece suit, is of dark blue voile, with a belted worn over a charming little blouse of white India silk, the front in a delicate design of drawn work and fastened at one side with large pearl buttons. The skirt is one of the nine-gore variety, the seams piped with dark-blue silk to match, at the lower part of each seam a band of dark blue silk being carried up for a quarter of a yard or so and finished on the edges with buttons. Down the centre of the back is carried another band of silk, some two inches wide, and also edged with small blue buttons. There are straps of the dark silk buttons covering the shoulder seams.

The sleeves and lower part of the pocket in front have little turn back revers of white leather, each fastened with a good-sized bronze button. The revers are stitched with dark-blue silk, and so is the belt to the gown, which is also of the white leather, and fastening in front with a large oval brass buckle of simple design. The sleeve is interesting. The upper part of it reaches a little below the elbow, and below that the sleeve is of dark blue chiffon in rolls forming a puff, while below that is a deep cuff of alternate rows of chiffon and silk. Bright color is introduced in the facing of the front of the jacket, which has white silk for a foundation, and carried lengthwise over this several rows of narrow white lace alternating with some shade in bright red.

A beautiful coat of white cloth is trimmed with broad bands of squirrel. This is a long coat with a straight front and full back. The fullness is given by two side plaits folded toward the centre, and some little distance apart on either side of the back. The coat is finished around the lower edge with the deep band of fur carried up at each seam for about a foot. There is a single, simple shoulder cape edged with the fur and carried up for a short distance at intervals agreeing with the trimming around the lower edge. The edges of the large sleeves are finished in the same way, and the fur is carried around the neck and down the front. There is a white, fancy braid on the outside of the band of fur, which finishes the neck, falling with tasselled ends on either side of the front. It is a quiet, rich and beautiful garment. A line of embroidery on the inside of the fronts is in gray and lavender with a touch of black.

A French blue cloth among the imported gowns has the new moleskin introduced into the white wool lace, which forms the upper part of the bodice and a band around the skirt. The fur is set in large pieces into the lace where it forms a cape, falling over the tops of the sleeves, and is made into the design of the lace elsewhere, forming the centres of flower-like designs. The cloth around the waist fastens with a couple of small scallops, and the cuffs of the sleeves, which are deep, are fastened with several scallops, each of them having a small ball of moleskin pendant.

When a boy turns his binding pocket inside out we marvel at the quantity and variety of articles he has stowed away. Odd lengths of string, marbles, a horse chestnut, a top, brass nails, hickory nuts, an apple, and many more articles are gathered in this "snapper up of unconsidered trifles." We think the collection must be hard on a boy's pocket. And it is that so we ever think of the variety and miscellany of the substances we put into the pocket of our stomach? There's the apple and the nuts, and things besides quite as indigestible as brass nails and with no more food value than so many marbles. And yet we wonder that the stomach "gives out." When the stomach breaks down under the strain of careless eating and irregular meals it can be perfectly and permanently restored to health and strength by the use of Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The action of this medicine on the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition is so marked, that relief from disease is at once experienced, and the headaches, liver "troubles," kidney disorders, and irritable bowels can be cured. Whenever the use of a laxative medicine is indicated, use Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They set in harmony with the "discovery" and assist its action by purging the bowels of foul accumulations.

THE OYSTER

Some of the Ways in Which It is Eaten.

The oyster season is now open and the luscious bivalves are on the market in goodly numbers. How to eat oysters is a problem that has been the lifetime study of the proprietor of an avenue hostelry. Nowhere in the city is this burning problem more fully threshed out than in this oyster head-quarters, where have gathered earnest worshippers at the shrine of oysterology so long a time that men's reputations as connoisseurs are proved only by years. When they die you can still hear them spoken of admiringly if their ability was established and depreciatingly if their oyster choices were not worthy of the quiet, constant patrons of the place.

"Strange," said the host the other day, for he is more the host than the proprietor, "the difference in taste shown by lovers of oysters in the matter of serving their favorite bivalve. My patrons—I might almost say clients—show especial difference in the matter of the raw oyster."

"Don't be surprised when I tell you of hot horseradish, tobacco, Worcester's sauce, vinegar, cayenne, celery salt, melted butter, sugar and black pepper, salt, used individually and in a wonderful variety of combinations as condiments of raw oysters."

"Horseradish and lemon have supplanted the old-fashioned vinegar, salt and pepper combination, and I might say fully 75 per cent. of oyster lovers use them, and them alone, to give zest to their oysters. But imagine a preparation of powdered sugar and sweet oil on a raw oyster. I have seen it scores of times. Worse than that, a mixture of French mustard and tomato catsup or melted butter and sugar, or horseradish, Worcester's sauce, tobacco and celery salt, or lemon, vinegar and sugar, with a sprinkling of cayenne. These are no more unusual with those who eat oysters six days in a week than is the practice of submerging an uncooked oyster in a red bath of tomato catsup."

"This gave rise to the question one day by one of a party of four to another. 'What sort of oysters do you usually eat with your catsup?'"

"Olive oil has become a fad with some in oyster service. Requests for oysters fried in olive oil or olive oil in stew and roast are frequent. The several condiments I have named are used extensively in fancy steaks and roasts."

"A lawyer whose name for many years was most celebrated in the list of criminal lawyers at the local bar used to have his oysters brought to him in the pan, so that he might prepare a sauce of horseradish, Worcester's sauce, tobacco and mustard, in which the bivalves were stewed. Another, a justist of note, insisted upon a generous addition of sugar to every shell. The color of an oyster and even the appearance of its shell are made points of preference. One insists that each oyster shell shall be scrubbed and all seaweed and dark sea growth removed, another insists upon those bearing the most blemishes."

"A peculiar fallacy is the matter of color of the oyster itself. Now, an oyster takes its color from its shell. If one shell be dark, so is the oyster, and if light the same rule holds good. Few persons know that if the darkest oyster is rubbed gently with a piece of linen it soon becomes white and clear. There is absolutely no difference, as far as taste and wholesomeness are concerned, between light and dark oysters, but the opinion to the contrary notwithstanding."

"When you depart from the realm of oysters raw you enter into a problem of plain milk, Boston and box steaks, shell roasts, roasts on toast, broils, broils on toast, Baltimore broils and many others, clear to the line of oyster cocktails and oyster omelets. I find the real oyster lover, however, the connoisseur, takes his oysters more or less straight, and principally in two styles. The first is raw, with the thinnest dash of lemon juice or horseradish, and the second, note to my mind the very best of all, the shell roast, with a little melted butter and a little salt and pepper."

"One who has a fondness for oysters to begin with never tires of the savory delights of a shell roast. With impunity and without a fear of ever growing sated or full, one can eat oysters raw the best of all, the shell 365 days out of every year, with the added day in leap year."—Washington Star.

8 Cents
Eight cents a pound is what a young woman paid for twelve pounds of flesh. She was thin and weak and paid one dollar for a bottle of Scott's Emulsion, and by taking regular doses had gained twelve pounds in weight before the bottle was finished.

Eight cents a pound is cheap for such valuable material. Some pay more, some less, some get nothing for their money. You get your money's worth when you buy Scott's Emulsion.

FRACTION OF TIME LOST.

Scientists Are Making an Expensive Search for Missing Sixteenth of a Second.

A sixteenth of a second is missing, and despite the work of scores of learned scientists no one can tell where it has gone.

A search for this minute fraction of time that is costing hundreds of thousands of dollars is under way, and it will be continued till the lost is found, for its recovery is of world-wide importance, states the New York World.

If one grain of sand on the shore of the ocean were lost and scientists were to spend years in trying to find it, their search would seem to be little more hopeless and unimportant than this task, upon which the leading astronomers of England and France are now working.

The sixteenth of a second is missing between the sun's time as recorded at Greenwich and as understood in Paris. The failure to discover the discrepancy in observations may change the nationality of thousands of people.

Longitude is calculated on the basis of Greenwich time. The boundaries of countries are determined by the calculations at this famous observatory. If the Paris calculations and not the Greenwich observations are found correct, boundaries may be moved miles.

No expense is being spared to trace the missing fraction. A special building has been erected at Paris, costly instruments installed, a corps of skilled mathematicians engaged and a process that may take years to complete has been commenced.

MESSAGE BY THE BLIND.

London Institution to Open New Occupation for Which They Are Peculiarly Adapted.

There is to be a very new field of work opened for the blind by the London Institute for Massage by the Blind, which is about to be started under a committee that includes many representative medical men. It is not an experiment. It has proved that the blind can become expert in the practice of massage, which in Japan is commonly recognized as their work, reports the Philadelphia Press. The occupations open to the blind are few and rather remunerative. The difficulty is one of the gravest obstacles to the improvement of the condition of this afflicted class. There are already several blind masseurs in that country. Some £500 is needed, and central rooms are then to be secured under a hospital manager. Blind students must obtain first-class medical certificates in an art which is daily more used, especially by surgeons in sprains and bruises, and masseurs will be allowed to treat only women and children and masseurs only men. The whole scheme needs only to be mentioned to be approved. It is also worthy of note that the blind are usually endowed with a sense of touch exceptionally fine, so that here, and perhaps here alone, is a field in which they may surpass their seeing brothers, massage being dependent for its success upon the nicety of its application, dependent in its turn on the nicety of the operator's tactile sense.

CHEESES OF ALL COUNTRIES.

Some Familiar Kinds That Have Become Well Liked in the United States.

Each country has its favorite cheese. The Swiss make the gruyere cheese. It is made of goats' milk, and is full of holes, caused by the gases in fermentation. The typical English cheese is the cheddar, first made in the English town after which it is named.

Brie is a popular French soft cheese; and camembert, originating in Normandy, is another. These cheeses are cured in caves, where the temperature never rises above 12 to 14 degrees. Another, Roquefort, a celebrated French cheese, is made from the mingled milk of goats and sheep that browse on the thyme-clad banks of the Arno. These cheeses are also ripened in caves, but the temperature is kept at 40 degrees.

Akin to the roquefort cheese is that called gorgonzola, made in Italy after similar processes. It is milder than roquefort, and not quite so good; but it sold much cheaper. Another Italian cheese, the parmesan, is very hard, and is usually grated.

Limburger cheese, so beloved by the Germans, originated in Belgium. It is extraordinarily rich, being allowed to ripen by putrefaction, hence its horrid odor to unaccustomed nostrils.

Some persons have a saying: "Gorgonzola is a cheese to swear by, Limburger to swear at!"

Name Famine in Denmark.
The Copenhagen correspondent of the Berlin Tageblatt has sent his paper an interesting article on the "name famine" in Denmark. In no nation, he says, is the choice of the family name so limited. It very often happens that four persons unknown to each other sit down to a game of whist, and later present themselves, respectively, as Hansen. He proves this statement by quoting Dr. Krak, the compiler and publisher of the Copenhagen Wegweiser, the largest Danish street directory. According to Dr. Krak, out of a population of 500,000 in the Danish capital, 42 per cent. end their names with "sen." Some 50,000 are named Hansen, which is used by the largest number of persons.

Queer Underclothes.
Eskimo women wear the most curious kind of underclothing, its peculiarity being that it is made of the skins of birds. These skins before being sewed are chewed well by the women in order to make them soft. About a hundred skins are required to make a shirt, and the labor of chewing the skins which form their garments is quite enough to account for the massive, well-developed jaws of Eskimo women.

AT THE TOP.

It is a laudable ambition to reach the top of the ladder of success. But many a man who reaches the topmost rung finds his position a torment instead of a triumph. He has sacrificed his health to success.

A man can succeed and be strong if he heeds Nature's warnings. When there is indigestion, loss of appetite, ringing in the ears, dizzy spots before the eyes or palpitation of the heart; any or all of these symptoms point to weakness and loss of nutrition. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery is the medicine to turn to.

$3,000 FORFEIT will be paid by the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Proprietors, Buffalo, N. Y., if they cannot show the original signature of the individual volunteering the testimonial below, and also of the writer of every testimonial among the thousands which they are constantly publishing, thus proving their genuineness.

"For about two years I suffered from a very distressing case of indigestion," writes R. E. Seaward, Esq., of 13 Eastern Ave., Toronto, Ontario. "I tried a great number of remedies without success. I finally knew that I was in a bad way, for I could not eat for a long time, and my solid food in my stomach felt rapidly and depressed. Could not sleep nor follow my occupation. A friend recommended your Golden Medical Discovery. I took three bottles and I am convinced it has in my case accomplished a permanent cure. I can conscientiously recommend it to the thousands of dyspeptics throughout the land."

"The Common Sense Medical Adviser," took large pages in paper covers, is sent free on receipt of ten-cent stamps to pay expense of mailing only. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.
