THE ELECTIONS.

The recent elections have in them some food for reflection. They indicate a renaissance which is waxing with rapid strides. In New York city, where not long since was peace and harmony, where the Republican party "properly" and the "gold standard" reigned supreme, and where it was thought nothing could break the spell, the Republican idol was shattered ruthlessly. Mr. Low, Mr. Roosevelt's type of the high grade politician, the scholar, the philanthropist, the reformer, has proven his incapacity, indeed he is set down as a great fake and kicked out. There is more than mere local discontent there. The greed of Wall Street, the rapacity of the moneyed people, and the lordliness of the favored classes, had become so manifest and intolerant that rebuke was necessary, and it was administered. The campaign was the most vulgar ever waged in that city, and a long period will elapse before the slime is washed from many of those heretofore supposed to be spotless and pure. Low and Senator Tom Platt linked themselves with Devery and many others even worse and fused with any and everybody who could in their opinion furnish votes. But there is another result of this election which was totally unlooked for a short time ago, it is the ending forever as Democratic leaders David B. Hill, Bird S. Coler, Edward M. Shepperd and various lights of that party who thought they saw a way that would lead them out of the darkness in which they were groping, but missed it, and were dashed to death in the abyss that yawned beneath them. They fused with Low and their undoing is now signed, sealed and delivered.

In Maryland the Democrats have won by the skin of their teeth. We say Democrats, though this is a misnomer. The cause of their narrow margin is easily deciphered. The men who are running things in that State are those who bolted in 1896, and if there is anything certain in this world it is that Democrats, real, consistent and faithful Democrats, have about as little use for these as for Republicans. In Maryland, many Democrats would not swallow the nauseous dose and stayed at home. Maybe the truth of the assertion that to have voted for Palmer and Becker in 1896 was a more grievous offense than to have voted for McKinley, and that either is an offense that will not be fully condoned in many years. This has certainly been demonstrated in Maryland.

In Virginia there are few surprises. Things went about as they had been calculated upon, and the wisdom of the recently enacted constitution is made more and more certain. The venal politician has no place now in Virginia, and bribery and corruption as well as the colored voter have taken a back seat.

CLEVELAND DID IT.

The Washington Post in its issue of the 30th ult., in an editorial upbraiding the Republican party for its failure to enact promised monetary reforms, has in part the following to say of Grover Cleveland:

After meeting on the bill for a space of time half as long as the twice-seven years that Jacob served Laban for Rachel, we find the party just where it was at that memorable night in early November, 1896, when, by the grace of Grover Cleveland and his million of Democratic followers, the country was permitted to rejoice that the Republican party and the gold standard had triumphed over currency debasement.

This is a great Republican victory charged up squarely to Cleveland and "his million of Democratic followers," and this too by a journal which knows whereof it speaks and which never gave a Democrat the slightest credit for any commendable act which he did not fully merit.

Thus did Cleveland, according to this high Republican authority, defeat the regular nominees of the Democratic party, thus did he break down and disorganize the party of which he was before that the acknowledged leader, and in doing it was backed by one million Democrats. If there is any greater political depravity than this that has ever been charged up to a leader, we have never heard it, and yet there are some people who really believe that such a man could be nominated by the Democratic National convention and be elected by our votes. Are we all dogs that we should do such a thing?

Mr. Bryan undertook to speak at Toledo, Ohio, from the steps of the Postoffice, but a Republican attendant ordered him off. If it had been Mr. Hanna, or Mr. Foraker, or Mr. Shaw, or any of the holy of holies, nothing would have been said. If it had been the great and only Grover the entire building would have been at his command.

Mr. Hanna has announced that he will not serve as chairman of the National Republican Committee next term. This action can be accounted for in but two ways either Mr. Hanna has discerned a certain inscription on the wall, or Mr. Roosevelt does not care to submit his reputation to the Hanna methods.

WESTERN STATE HOSPITAL.

A meeting of the General Board of Hospitals for the State took place here recently and was attended by representatives of each of the other institutions. The opinion expressed as to the hospital here was most commendatory. Never, they said, had they seen greater neatness, more general good order, and more marked evidences of efficient management. A member of one of the visiting boards in a recent letter to a member of the Western State Hospital board, thus expresses himself:

"I write to thank you for the courtesy extended to me at your institution and city during my recent visit; also to congratulate you on the magnificent condition in which I found your asylum, at our inspection. I can truthfully say that I do not believe there is a cleaner institution anywhere in the world."

Of course there are various improvements necessary. One of these has been entered upon, and that is the wiring of the building for electric lighting, as well as to furnish light upon the grounds. Better facilities for furnishing water are also nearing completion in a large reservoir, which is being dug by the labor from the institution. A store room has been planned, and will probably be erected soon, though a legislative appropriation will be necessary for this. A meeting was had with the board of the School for the Deaf and the Blind, which school is also wiring its buildings for electric lighting, with a view of the Hospital furnishing lights for both institutions, but no definite action was taken in this matter. An arrangement was made for the correct plating of the cemetery, so as to always identify graves, and a committee was appointed to recommend several changes in the present laws.

During the meeting Dr. Benj. Blackie, Superintendent, read his report which set forth in detail the condition of the Hospital and the various needed additions for comfort, economy and safety. We will refer briefly to and exhaustively he has ever written.

According to that report there are in the Hospital 1,074 patients, as against 1,047 the same time last year, and the daily average has been 1,053, and the total number in the Hospital during the year has been 1,254. During the year 297 were admitted. There were 53 deaths, and of those who died 7 were between 70 and 80 years of age, 14 between 60 and 70, and 11 between 50 and 60. Four of these have been in the hospital over 25 years, and eight of them between 10 and 35 years. The general health of the hospital has been exceptionally good, no epidemic has occurred and but few cases of serious sickness.

It will be interesting to know the cost per capita of feeding, clothing, housing and attending these persons in sickness and health. This cost, including the cost of bringing them to the hospital, was $113.71 per capita, the lowest in many years, and this too when coal and nearly every article of maintenance have materially advanced in price.

This hospital was established in 1828, and since that time 6,747 patients have been admitted. The hospital has been ordered to its utmost during the year, and the superintendent sets forth urgently why greater accommodations should be furnished. Insanely seems to be on the increase and deaths and discharges do not keep pace with the applications. In the treatment of patients out door exercise, amusements, occupation and recreation, are found most salutary. The report says: "The modern hospital, or, ought to be, a busy home of industry, every department of it working to a common end, viz: an exemplification of the highest and best methods of living, with a view of restoring in morbid minds those habits of life which are essential to healthy mental and physical health."

Under the head of improvement and repairs, granolithic walks are asked to be substituted for the old dilapidated brick ones. The new reservoir will hold 500,000 gallons of water, and will add greatly to the safety from fire, as its supply will be held principally for such an emergency, though of course will be used daily about the buildings. A request for more land of which the hospital is in sore need, is made. Attention is sharply drawn to the fact that only $75,000 in fire insurance is carried, whereas $200,000 would be more in keeping, and the Legislature is urged to make an appropriation for this purpose.

Electric lighting and an intercommunicating telephone system are urged. The superintendent expresses his thanks to various newspapers in the State for gratuitous copies sent to the hospital, including the Argus and SPECTATOR of this city; also to the chaplains of the hospital for their regular and faithful attendance upon religious exercises at the chapel, and their attendance upon burials; and closes with a tribute to the staff and attendants for their faithful, willing and cordial support and co-operation. The report will soon be printed, and when out will furnish interesting reading to all who are interested in or mindful of the State's greatest charity, the care of the insane.

NEGROES LUNCH AT WHITE HOUSE.

The officers, petty officers and sailors of the dispatch boat Sybil and Mayflower, which had the President and his family and friends for passengers the better part of the summer, called at the White House one day last week. They were given a cordial reception and a bounteous luncheon. A number of negroes were among those who were at the luncheon. Mr. and Mrs. Roosevelt shook hands all around and made themselves generally agreeable.

It is barely possible that Mr. Bryan will not insist in having that legacy paid in silver—Staunton Daily News.

We should say not. If he is an smart financier he will do as our thrifty friend Cleveland did, put it in "U. S. Bonds" where it will be free from taxation.

The next thing we expect to hear, is that Bryan forged the Bennett will.

Mr. Hanna gave Mr. McKinley 180 thousand dollars, just as Mr. McKimley was about being nominated for president by the Republican party. This was called sweet charity, and the nation then gave Mr. McKinley the presidency, and Ohio rewarded Mr. Hanna by electing him to the U. S. Senate.

Mr. Morgan divided his profits in the bond deal with Mr. Cleveland, and this was considered the proper thing to do, and great thanksgiving was given by Mr. Morgan and Mr. Cleveland, and both have been held in high esteem ever since those who set the money.

A certain Mr. Bennett who was very friendly to Mr. Wm. J. Bryan (a great crime to be sure) made a provision for him and some members of his family in his will, but a cry of horror has gone up over the act from those who hold Messrs. Hanna and McKinley, and Morgan and Cleveland in high esteem, those who are very virtuous and honest, the Lord's anointed as it were. Why is this? "Gentle stranger tell us why?"

The developments in the Ship Building Trust receivership display the greatest plunder of modern times says the referee Smith. Not long since a party known as the "get rich quick" combination sent to Sir Singsong for the fraud they practiced upon the public. That fraud was no greater than the one worked off by Messrs. Schwab and Morgan in the present case, and if they were not above the law they would unquestionably look through iron bars.

This much is learned, that such corporations should be required to publish frequent statements of their condition, and their books should be open to public inspection. There should also be a heavy penalty for false reports.

WASHINGTON LETTER

(From our Regular Correspondent.) Washington, D. C., Nov. 2.—President Roosevelt has had the report of Mr. Bristow on the postal frauds for nearly a week, yet shows no inclination to give it to the public after the election. However he can't postpone the publication until after the election next fall as that time the voters will have excellent opportunity of showing their disapproval of an administration under which such frauds are possible. The Bristow report is a very long document, making 2,000 printed pages of an ordinary government issue, and the President has not read it to its length by supplementing it with comments of his own. The most important part of the document is said to be the accusation against the former First Assistant Postmaster General Perry S. Heath, who is at present secretary of the republican national campaign committee, of which Senator Hanna is the chairman. The Tulooh charges made serious accusations against Heath, but they were not thought sufficient to procure an indictment against him. The report is said to charge him with official corruption such that his only protection against criminal prosecution will be the statute of limitations which has just saved republican Congressman Littauer from being called to account for his glove contract with the government.

Representative Littauer has had several recent conferences with the President in reference to the manner in which Attorney General Knox has disposed of the glove contract case. At the last conference Mr. Littauer was accompanied by his attorney, and the Attorney General was also at the White House in case his services were needed to elucidate the legal phase of the case. The Congressman in using his influence with President Roosevelt to bring about a decision by the government which will exonerate him from the charge of illegal connection with a contractor, or will at least give him an opportunity to give his side of the story, his friends say that he is only "technically" guilty. Yet the Attorney General did not care to look at it that way, and he expressed his indignation by declaring that the statute of limitations "no useful purpose" would be served by further consideration of the case. This is a very doubtful vindication, and naturally Littauer is not satisfied. His visits to the White House no doubt embarrass President Roosevelt, who knows that the public will look with disfavor upon any attempt to shield "his close friend and political adviser."

Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor has expressed his views on the "open shop" policy of the government. Owing to the coming convention of the Federation in Boston, where the question will be discussed by its delegates from all over the country it is significant that the leader of them all characterizes the open shop as "brazing hypocrisy." He says, "we are inclined to believe that all this 'crusade' by the Perry-led manufacturers and their mouth pieces of the press in favor of the open shop, or the refusal to recognize the labor unions as business bodies having labor and services to sell, is the product of conscious hypocrisy, but it is not impossible that some of those who have joined in it are really stupid enough not to see the absurdity, the self-stultification, the brazen dishonesty of the proposition." He does not think the President, however, for he continues: "The public knows something of the attempt of plutocracy to misrepresent President Roosevelt's attitude toward unionism." He says that the order in the Miller case did not apply to private enterprise. However, Mr. Gompers represents the most conservative element in the Federation and his radical opponents, mostly socialists, are increasing in numbers at every convention, so that at the last, they composed about forty per cent. of the delegates. This element is sure to make an attack on the open shop policy of the administration, and many politicians believe that they will carry the convention on November 9, in a resolution directing the President's action in the Miller case.

The Cosmopolitan for November has been received from its publishers. It is an interesting number throughout. Among its contents is an article on "Jerusalem as It is Today." The December number will contain another article on the holy city which will embrace pictures of the future of Jerusalem. If the former article is as capital in its metamorphosed condition preparatory to the return of the original owners under the auspices of the projectors of the Zionist movement.

Confederate Veterans.

The sixteenth annual reunion of the Virginia Grand Camp Confederate Veterans which was held at Newport News, closed with a brilliant ball Friday night in honor of the reunion. Honor and spouses. Two hundred couples thronged the army during the evening.

At the business session that city the Grand Camp elected the following officers: Judge George L. Christian, of Richmond, Grand Commander; Dr. W. E. H. Wood of Petersburg, First Lieutenant-Commander; John Fulton, of Wytheville, Second Lieutenant-Commander; Col. W. H. Stewart, of Portsmouth, Third Lieutenant-Commander; Thos. C. Morton, Inspector-General; Washington Taylor, Quartermaster-General; Rev. John P. Hyde Chaplain-General; John K. Powell, Surgeon-General; Thomas Elliott, Adjutant-General; William Keen and Charles Waits, Aides de Camp.

There was a sharp fight between Charlottesville and Lynchburg for next year's Grand Camp. Miss Forsberg, sponsor for Garland Rose Camp, Lynchburg, was introduced and extended an invitation to hold the next year's Grand Camp. Charlottesville then withdrew from the race and Lynchburg, the "Hill City," was unanimously chosen.

The 11th anniversary of Camp No. 100, which was organized in 1892, was celebrated and its members were shown through the shipyard.

Friday afternoon the Virginia Division, United Confederate Veterans, composed of three brigades, met at the Warwick Hotel and elected the following officers: Gen. T. S. Garnett, of Norfolk, division commander; Gen. S. B. Collins, of Petersburg, commander of First Brigade; Gen. James MacCallister, commander Second Brigade; Col. E. D. Funkhouser, commander Third Brigade. Staff officers will be appointed later. At an informal meeting of representatives of the Daughters of the Confederacy, Mrs. A. J. Montague, wife of the Governor, made an address, presenting the claims of the Confederate Old Woman's Home at Richmond. She solicited the earnest co-operation of those present in its behalf.

Death of Mrs. Elizabeth Brown.

Mrs. Elizabeth Brown, widow of Dr. T. H. Brown, who for a number of years was a prominent physician in Rockingham county, died at 5 o'clock Sunday evening at her home in Bridgeville. Death resulted, after an illness of three days, from hepatic colic.

Mrs. Brown was a daughter of the late William Carpenter, of this county, and was born and reared on the old Carpenter homestead near Mr. Crawford. For many years prior to her death she resided in Bridgewater. She was a woman of much culture and intelligence, and in a rare degree combined many admirable qualities of mind and heart that endeared her to a large circle of friends. Her life was one of usefulness and her influence made a deep impression upon her community.

Mrs. Brown is survived by three sons and three daughters. T. DeWitt Brown, Oklahoma, Edward P. and C. Leonard Brown, Parkersburg, W. Va. Mrs. Edward W. McNeill, Morgan town, W. Va.
