MR. BRYAN'S SPEECH.

DELIVERED AT THE STATE FAIR IN RICHMOND ON OCT. 17TH.

Mr. Bryan, after expressing gratification at his reception and the usefulness of agricultural fairs, said in substance:

"The greatness of our nation is not measured by the products of farm or factory, but by the manhood and womanhood produced for the following of high ideals. Things tending to advance our Government can never be out of place. I shall take as my subject 'The Average Man,' and shall show how numerous he is—how important he is—and then connect him with Government and with public problems, and if, when I am through, you have a suspicion that this average man of whom I speak inclines to be Democratic, just remember that the average man, if he knows what he is, cannot be anything but Democratic."

Loud laughter followed this sly political sally.

"There is no other country on this globe, where man is so free to make the most of his brains and his muscle as in the United States."

"Our average man," he said, "is the biggest average man in this world. In some countries, you cannot get an average man, for the average man would be somewhere between the extremes and he is not present in the flesh. He is an imaginary character. The common people are the people in this country, the term common people was complimentary, and had been so since the time of Christ, of whom it was said 'the common people heard him gladly.'"

In this favored class, he put the farmers—the farmer's, who, as a class, are rich enough to keep out of the poorhouse, yet not rich enough to disgrace their families by marrying foreign nobility. Next come the mechanics as types of the sterling middle class and the city wage earners. These are the people—the farmer and the artisan—who produce the country's wealth in time of peace and do her fighting in time of war. Next came the merchants (always allowing the merchant princes time to jump out); the physicians (perhaps the specialists will object); the ministers, some occupants of high priced pulpits may not be pleased); the lawyers, particularly the corn field lawyers; the newspaper men, with some exceptions; the teachers—in fact, anybody else who wants to come in. Yes even the financiers may come in if they so desire. The bankers also may come in, although some didn't in the '96 campaign. After all, it is more a matter of sympathy than possession.

"Thomas Jefferson, though, cast his lot with the people—he was one of the common people and their greatest friend. Now isn't this a large and a respectable class?"

"I am glad I belong to it; my father was a Virginia farmer." (Applause.)

"I am proud of every drop of perspiration that came from his brow."

"Another good shot," cried an enthusiast at the audience.

"Yes," he taught me to respect labor and to work myself."

Against three-term Proposal the idea in this country now that the President of the United States recognizes it. He said on the evening of his election that he regarded this term as a second term and would not be a candidate for a third term. So the President recognizes it, my friends. If I had said what the President had said, I would not believe the pretensions of friendship of any member of my party that assumed I would change my mind on such a question."

(Great applause.)

He declared himself in favor of electing United States Senators by the people. "The present plan is 'too Hamiltonian.'"

"The Hamiltonian idea is the decaying idea; the Jeffersonian idea is the growing idea. Everywhere in the world the Democratic party is growing; the aristocratic party is the dying party of the world around."

The Federal courts have attempted to suspend the laws of the States, and they have made the people reflect on this division of powers.

"And what's the result? Just as soon as the people think about it they begin to express themselves in Democratic terms. The Attorneys General of the States of the United States met at St. Louis less than two weeks ago and they prepared a memorial to be presented to Congress, and what is it? It is a request that the power of the lower Federal courts to suspend the laws of the States shall be taken away, so that these State laws may be enforced, leaving those that object to prosecute appeals from the Supreme Court of the State to the Supreme Court of the United States. Now that is Democratic doctrine, though a majority of the Attorneys General who prepared the memorial were Republicans."

He commented on Roosevelt's tendency to borrow good things from the Democratic platform—a pro-se which Mr. Bryan described as "milding."

"It (government ownership) is a pretty good threat to hold over railroads, for if they don't get out of politics, they will have to get out of the railroad business. And, my friends, when you come to the effective regulation of railroads, why, that's what the Democratic party has been fighting for years. The question of government ownership has never been an immediate issue—an ultimate remedy—and is dependent upon the effectiveness of regulation."

"I believe I speak the sentiments of a vast majority of Democrats when I say that the American people do want the effective regulation of the railroads of this country, and out of our section of the country the Democrats state what they want in the matter of the regulation of railroads: They want, first, to find out what the railroads are worth. And what man who is not a railroad attorney will object to finding out what the railroads are worth?"

"What else do they want?"

"We want to stop the watering of stock and the issuing of fictitious capitalization. And who will object

Only those who plunder patrons and stockholders alike by manipulations of the capital."

"What else? We want to compel the railroads to get out of business where they compete with their shippers and therefore cannot deal fairly."

"We want the rates so reduced that the corporations will only earn a reasonable return upon the present value of the road when it is honestly capitalized."

"And what is a reasonable return? A return that will quote the stock at par when the capitalization is honest capitalization."

He declared that public sentiment in this direction was so thoroughly aroused that even the Republicans had awakened to the necessity for making at least a pretense at correcting the evil.

Secretary Taft, for instance, was pretending to get busy. Possibly one per cent. of the offenders had been punished. "But if Taft will punish one per cent," the rest of the people will punish the other ninety-nine per cent."

He urged the strict enforcement of the laws against the trusts. "I believe," that the American people are about to express themselves on this trust question, and when they do, you will find all the people on one side.

Concerning the tariff, Mr. Bryan declared that the only argument left is that the tariff must be reformed by its friends, and Secretary Taft stands for reform, but wants it postponed until just after the election, that would be flying in the face of the people who elected them. "Wait for the tariff to be reformed by its friends! Why, it reminds me of a story I once heard: A fellow went into a store and put on a coat and walked out. The merchant bellowed, 'Stop, thief,' but the man did not stop. Then the policeman took up the chase, and finally pulled his revolver. The merchant, in an excited manner, cried, 'Mr. Policeman, don't shoot; but if you do shoot, shoot the pants, the coat is mine.'"

"No, my friends, they can't shoot holes in their own coat."

"On the labor question, I believe the time is coming when there will be no difference among the common people as to what ought to be done. The President arbitrated a coal strike once, but he got his ideas from a Democratic platform. The time is coming when an investigation before a board of arbitration will be compulsory. It is a disgrace to this generation that we compel a laboring man to resort to a method which starves his family while he fights for his rights."

"Yes, the people will demand universal arbitration."

"One month ago today a Republican judge in Kentucky issued a rule—made a law—which forbade food to the strikers."

"We have one race problem; that is enough. The people do not want imperialism. The Democratic position is the position of the average man."

"In the name of the widow and the orphan, I protest against an asset currency. Was not my 50c dollar bad enough? I want a dollar that will not shrink in the hands of the man who owns it. That they said eleven years ago, and that is what I say now."

"While I criticize what the President does that is bad, I commend him for what is good. He has called attention to swollen fortunes."

"Since the President has taken this question up, I get only half the abuse that has been mine."

"Who ever got one hundred millions of dollars honestly in this country or in any other country? A man would have to be President of the United States about 1,000 years to earn a hundred millions of dollars, and yet that is the limit that Senator Beveridge has placed on a fortune before it becomes swollen. We have men who have collected from the people far more than that. One man, it is said, made nine millions in one month out of the pockets of the people. These swollen fortunes have disgraced business, debauched the home, and brought odium upon the Church of God itself. It is time the average man had a word to say, and each citizen should draw from society in proportion as he contributes to the good of society."

Popular Concert by the Stonehill Band.

The concert given by the Stonehill Band in the opera house, last Friday evening was another one of those delightful entertainments for which the band has become famous. There was a full turnout of the membership and attracted in their handsome uniforms, made quite a martial and impressive appearance. In evidence that the band had lost none of popular favor, the largest attendance of the season was out to hear them, all the seats in the auditorium were taken—even the boxes being occupied by a galaxy of well dressed ladies and gentlemen. The program was well arranged, each number being a good selection and affording a variety of music which included both classic numbers and popular airs. The opening piece, a "Reformation Review" march promptly brought forth a hearty encore. Then followed other numbers which proved equally popular.

The vocal solo by Miss Elsie D. Hamilton was received with marked approval. Miss Hamilton responded to the encore in another selection of equal merit, her entrance upon the stage in each instance being the signal for hearty applause.

Mr. J. B. Wood of Waynesboro, for many years a valued member of the band, gave a cornet solo. "The Evening Star"—a "Reformation Review" march and responding in a selection that won even more favor from the large audience.

After a short intermission the band resumed with another number, and then followed a vocal solo by Miss Emily Overton Moore, accompanied by Mr. Kennedy, cornet and Fred Beards worth with the violin. Miss Moore has a fine voice and her singing on this occasion added new luster to the fame she has already won before Staunton audiences. "Heart's Delight" and "Sing Me to Sleep," were the selections which so well suited her voice and so well pleased the audience, that she was received in hearty encore.

Another number on the program that met with especial favor was "A Hunting Scene" by the band. Southern melodies, a medley, also by the band, was composed of many popular numbers and concluded with Dixie, ending the program amid a storm of enthusiasm and cheers. To Prof. Beardsworth, who has been so long in due much of credit not only for his skill and ability as a leader, but for his interest in and constant effort in behalf of this historic organization, of which he is the official head.

KIDNEY TROUBLE

Suffered Two Years—Relieved In Three Months.

C. B. FIZER.

Mr. C. B. FIZER, Mt. Sterling, Ky., writes:

"I have suffered with kidney and bladder trouble for ten years past."

"Last March I commenced using Peruna and continued for three months. I have not used it since, nor have I felt a pain."

"I believe that I am well and I therefore give my highest commendation to the curative qualities of Peruna."

Pe-ru-na For Kidney Trouble.

Mrs. Geo. H. Simsler, Grant, Ontario, Can., writes:

"I had not been well for about four years. I had kidney trouble, and, in fact, felt badly nearly all the time."

"This summer I got so very bad I thought I would try Peruna, so I wrote to you and began at once to take Peruna and Manalin."

"I took only two bottles of Peruna and one of Manalin, and now I feel better than I have for some time."

"I feel that Peruna and Manalin cured me and made a different woman of me altogether. I bless the day I picked up the little book and read of your Peruna."

It is the business of the kidneys to remove from the blood all poisonous materials. They must be active all the time, else the system suffers. There are times when they need a little assistance. Peruna is exactly this sort of a remedy. It has saved many people from disaster by rendering the kidneys service at a time when they were not able to bear their own burdens.
