CURE FOR DYSPEPSIA.—The public will bear in mind that Baker's Celebrated Premium Bitters are the most unfailing remedy for the cure of Dyspepsia, that has ever been offered to an American public. As an evidence of this fact, the cure of Dyspepsis, that has ever been offered to an American public. As an evidence of this fact, the Proprietor has now in his possession a number of certificates from some of our own citizens, after various other remedies have proved unsuccessful. As a cure for Cholera Morbus, Bilious Affections, Diarrhoea, Summer Complaints of children, Sour Stomach, Loes of Appetite, Indigestion, and other diseases arising from impure blood, debility and disorders of the digestive organs, these Bitters have no equal. The Proprietor, living in this immediate neighborhood, where he is well known to al, would not have the presumption to recommend his Bitters as a reliever of the above diseases, had he not thoroughly tested their remarkable curative powers; but being satisfied that they are just the medicine needed at all times and by both sexés, he feels that it would be doing a public injustice, did be not take the necessary steps to enable all to profit by the use of them.

new building a public nuisance. The next day Mr Smith caused to be printed in the Dispatch, the following:

"The gentleman of the small quill of the Times, who details with such profound tact and taste the Billingsgate news of the city, has been quite prolific with his comments on the accidents that have happened at the corner of 12th and Main strets. We would submit the question: Which is the greatest nuisance, a man who is good only at wearing out the seat of his chair, (to say nothing of his pantaloons) and doing the dirty work of gratifying a depraved taste by finding fault with otners; or handsome and substantial brick buildings, which beautify and add wealth to theletity—though accidents do sometimes occur in the erection of them.

The Man what let the Plank fall."

This nettled the little man se much that he could

This nettled the little man se much that he could hardly attend to his office work all day. We can imagine him fussing around the room, not exactly knowing what he was after, and every time he would get out of that chair, his eyes would instinctively look at its seat to see whether it was really worsted, and in spite of himseif, his hands would keep feeling whether there was any worn place in his pants about the place most used; and for fear some one in the street would discover that there was a slick place on his trowsers, he would, as he went out, pull down his coattails and spread them as wide as possible. But soon he determined to fall ouch again on his sense of duty to the public, and after procuring the largest kind of a pen, for fear the boys in the office would see him write with his small quill, he seated himself again and wrote the following, which was duly published next morning:

"We are really afraid that our sense of duty to This nettled the little man se much that he could with his small quill, he seated himself again and wrote the following, which was duly published next morning:

"We are really afraid that our sense of duty to the public will compel us to subject the constructor of the Catacombs on the corner of Main and 12th streets, to a skinning. The operation will be an unpleasant one, to be sure; but as the safety of the public seems to demand it, we shall apply the scalpel."

Now we will ask, what was it that made this daily watcher over the public good, wake up all at once to a sense of duty to the public? Some one has suggested that a triend of his had informed him that the question propounded by the man, (what let the Plank fall) had been pretty generally decided against him, and that made him think at once, of his sense of duty to the public. Now for his skinning; we will wait until morning to see it. We are excessively disappointed this morning; the scalpel must be dull; or perhaps we are to be invited to Washington beforehand, to save annoying the dear public; in that event, as the public would suffer by his absence, we would suggest that we go down to Hudson's Pistol Gallery and take each a fire at his iron man, and the one that makes the worstshot, shall acknowledge himself wounded.—Places for reporters to be provided by the proprietor of the Gallery.

ber of lots, on Tuesday, the 15th June, at 12 o'clock, M.

Many of these lots lie between the western line of Manchester and the Richmond and Petersburg Railroad, where the sale will begin.

These lots afford most beautiful building sites, and have a very fertile surface for gardems, reating on a body of clay well adapted to making bricks.

I will also sell at private sale, on most reasonable terms, a large, well built lumber house, now used as a tobacco factory, fronting 70 feet on the Richmond Dock and 60 feet on the causeway of Mayo's bridge. This location is very valuable, and as soon as the connection between the Basin and the Dock is effected, the work being at this time in progress of rapid execution, the trade from Buchanan and all the tributaries to the James River Canal will concentrate in the Dock to the great appreciation of dock property.
