THE DAILY DISPATCH

ADDITIONAL PARTICULARS OF THE LOSS OF THE AMERICAN SHIP MOBILE.

[From the Liverpool Courier, Oct. 6.] The American ship Mobile, Captain J. H. Tarbox, together with about sixty seven persons, including passengers and crew, sailed from this port on Tuesday last having been ascertained, fifty three passengers, and a crew numbering twenty-three men, including officers. She proceeded safely until she was overtaken by a heavy sea on Wednesday morning, when she struck on the Arklow Bank, on the Irish coast, and shortly afterwards commenced to break up. At the time she struck the wind was blowing a perfect hurricane from E. N. E., with a very heavy sea running; the only sails carried at the time being the fore and main top sails close reefed. Efforts were made to launch the boats shortly after she struck, but owing to the heavy sea running, this could not be accomplished. The scene on board the ill-fated ship, a few minutes after striking, baffles all description, the poor passengers running about in all directions, crying out piteously for help; and at every succeeding sea, one or more of their number were washed off the wreck, until, in a very short time, all had disappeared, with the exception of eight seamen and one passenger, who had been able to lash themselves to the channels.

In a few hours after the vessel struck, the weather moderated, and continued so until Thursday morning, when about 11 o'clock two schooners were in sight, and immediately proceeded to the wreck. One of the schooners, which was bound to Glasgow, took four of the sailors and a passenger on board, and conveyed them to Glasgow; the other took the remaining four and landed them at Wexford. When rescued, they were in a very exhausted state from cold and exposure. They were forwarded to this port in the Wexford on Friday, and arrived on Saturday evening, despondent and ill. It is supposed that the vessel had been able to lash themselves to the channels.

It is stated that after the vessel struck, none of those on board considered there was any chance of being saved.

Captain Tarbox, the commander of the ill-fated ship, together with all his officers, perished. He was well known, and much respected in this port. It is supposed the ship went to pieces on Friday, at great quarters of the wreck, cargo, &c., several water casks, and portions of a vessel, were passed on Friday and Saturday. The Mobile was a fine vessel, of one thousand tons burthen, nearly new, and only making her second voyage. The four seamen brought to this port were taken in charge by the American consul, who provided for their temporary necessities, and placed them in a comfortable boarding house.

TRAGICAL EVENT IN PARIS. The Journal des Debats of October 4, contains the following account of a recent tragedy in Paris:

Yesterday, about nine o'clock in the evening, the quarter of the Madeleine was thrown into a state of excitement by the knowledge of a crime which had been just committed there, and which has produced the most painful impression. Mr. Bower, aged thirty-eight years, an Englishman, and the Paris correspondent of the Morning Advertiser, resided with his wife and children in the Rue de Seze, No. 2. Some months since one of his countrymen, Mr. Morton, aged about thirty-five years, correspondent of the Daily News, and who resided in the neighborhood, on the Boulevard des Capucines, 23, became intimate with him, and paid him frequent visits. Subsequently his assistances having excited some suspicions and jealousy in the mind of Mr. Bower, the latter interdicted him from visiting at his house in future. It would appear, however, that a reconciliation took place between them, and that Mr. Morton continued his visits. Unfortunately, a circumstance of a particular kind occurred to revive the suspicions of Mr. Bower. His wife, the mother of four children, was confined about a month ago, and the suffering she underwent was such as to be frequently followed by intervals of mental derangement.

In the course of last evening, and during one of her attacks, she told her husband that she did not wish to see him again, that he was the devil, that she did not love him, and had never loved him, and she added that the child to which she had just given birth was the child of Mr. Morton. This extraordinary disclosure produced a terrible impression on Mr. Bower; yet he restrained himself, and sat down about 8 o'clock to supper. Scarcely had he commenced his repast, when Mr. Morton entered. He instantly quit, and as Mr. Morton did not seem to obey as quickly as the other desired, he got up from the table, holding his knife in his hand, and pursued him on the stairs to the floor beneath, where, after an exchange of some words, he struck him a violent blow with the knife on the left side of the head near the ear, bathed in blood, which flowed in abundance from the wound. Death was instantaneous. The knife was afterwards picked up. It is a table knife rounded at the end; the blade was bent in the middle by the violence of the blow.

The Commissary of Police of the section of the Madeleine, being informed of the crime, proceeded immediately to the spot, and was soon after joined by the agents on duty, who searched, but unsuccessfully, the house, from the cellar to the garret, to discover the perpetrator, who escaped, no one knows how.

INTERESTING NEWS FROM HAVANA. By the steamship Black Warrior, at New York from Havana, whence she sailed on the 12th inst., we learn that the Island of Cuba continues in a state of great excitement. Arrests, outrages and suspicion seem to increase day by day.

Another conspiracy had been discovered in Matanzas, and the Military Tribunal had left Havana for that town. Still another conspiracy was discovered at Pinar del Rio, for which place Jose Rives, son of the convict Rives who discovered the conspiracy of Juan Gonzalez, left immediately.

Captain Brooks, of the American ship Elizabeth Jane, being suspected of having some filibuster correspondence concealed in his cabin, was waited upon by the police, who searched his vessel and all his papers. We do not learn that the search brought to light anything of the character expected.

The officers and passengers of the Black Warrior were treated with studied civility while in port, but the vessel was escorted to Havana by the police.

A grand military parade took place in Havana on Sunday, the 10th inst. The troops were reviewed by Captain-General Canedo, in the presence of an immense number of spectators. The government paper says that the whole New World cannot present such a splendid military spectacle as this, which was celebrated in honor of the adored Queen.

Galano, the Governor's Secretary, and the individual who is well understood to have been the adviser of Captain-General Canedo, in all his measures of outrage and oppression, is said to be very anxious to resign. The Captain-General, however, will not let him, telling him
