RICHMOND, VA.: Saturday Morning, December II, 1852.

THE ANTWERP LINE.

A writer in the Times of Thursday, says "several ships came to James River this and last year. They could not obtain freights to Europe. Some were put in ballast to the South and some even to New Brunswick!" Now we confess we have not paid to this subject the attention which it deserves, and, therefore, ask for information. Does this writer really mean to say that there is actually not enough produce in Virginia to freight " several" (four or five we suppose) "ships for Europe?" We are aware of the wonderfully elastic character of figures. We know, too, that they never lie, though they happen every now and then to be considerably mistaken. Yet we should not conceive such a conclusion to be within the reach even of figures, if the writer has reached it by that easy and ready ascent. Figures have proved that every thing ever yet undertaken in Virginia must fail. They remind us of the exclamation of "poor Peter Peebles of the great suit of Peebles versus Plain stans, et per contra." When asked whether he would swear to something, he replied "I will swear to any thing in reason. Odd! a plea is a gained plea if it depends on my oath.' They can prove any thing, though they never tie. But we think they would find it difficult to show that there is not produce enough in Virginia to furnish a cargo for any port in Eu-

Ferhaps, however, the writer only means to say that trade has decayed to such as to be dependent entirely on New York. That we knew before. New York has become the regular channel through which we trade with Europe, and shippers sending their goods there, and having their arrangements made on the spot, will not alter them without difficulty .-They must be offered inducements. It is a hard thing, we know, to divert trade from a channel into which it has been once forced. But it may be done, and that is the very thing we are attempting to do now. So if, after all, the writer only meant to say that trade had deserted us, we answer, it is a melancholy fact, of which we have been aware for many years, a fact which we wish to see such no longer, a fact which we wish to annihilate by means of this very steam line.

In one word, the argument of this writer amounts to this: we do all our European trade brough New York, paying annually therefore a bounty which might, at least, assist in establishing steam communication, and because we do it now, we must always do it. We must not attempt to escape from our vassalage-we must lie flat on our backs, and hug our chains because it has been our custom to do so here tofore.

It is the nature of all great improvements railroad, steamboat and steamship, to increase travel and production. By the report of the Central Railroad Company which lies before us, it appears that the receipts for travel last year, were upwards of $70,000. Does any man suppose that the travel by the old stages would have amounted to one fifth part of that indicated by these figures? A statement which we published the other day relative to the affairs of the Danville Railroad shows the enor mous number of 34,200 passengers upon that road within twelve months. We are not aware to what extent production has been stimulated along these two lines, but we have no doubt that it has been in proportion. Now, if such be the effect of internal means of communication, why should not the same thing happen with regard to ocean navigation? Has not the establishment of the steam line from New York added enormously to the trade of that city? During the month of April ten years ago, the exports to Liverpool from New York, did not greatly exceed $250,000, and her whole exportation, for the same month, was only $509,000. What it was during the same month of the present year, we have no means of ascertaining at present, but we should suppose it was at least five times this amount.

It seems to be a part of a system to sneer at the trade of Antwerp, yet during the month of April last, the shipments from New York to that port were $97,200, that is to say conside rably more than one-third of the whole amount shipped to Liverpool in April, 1842. Of this sum the products peculiar to the South, cotton, tobacco, rice, logwood and mahogany, brought $63,296, or about two-thirds of the whole. The rest, with the exception of ashes (pot and pearl,) are all produced in this State. First flour, 2,200 barrels, $8,910. Our crops come in before those of the Northern States, and this is one great advantage. Second. naval stores, 450 barrels, $646. We can supply these. Third, lard. Fourth, rye 21,356 bushels, $17,086. We have also wool, which can be supplied even now by Virginia to the extent here indicated (114 bales.)

We are told that these are heavy goods, and that steamships cannot carry heavy goods because of the expense, &c. It is certain, however, that the exportation of heavy goods from New York has enormously increased since the steamers came into full operation, and that if they have not carried them, they have stimulated the transfer in some way or other. At the same time, the English line has received enormous profits. Now, if the Antwerp line can do the same thing-that is, can stimulate direct transportation, and make money at the same time-that is all that can be desired .-Why can it not? We are pointed to the Colline line to show, we suppose, that though the British steamers may make money, ours cannot, and that we ought to give the ocean up to them, for that is about the amount of the argument. But the answer of Mr. Thompson to this objection is perfectly simple, and altogether impregnable. No provision was made by this line for the transportation of emigrant passengers, and they are not made to carry heavy fleights. Their chief object has been to make the quickest time, and thereby to secure the carriage of the mail. The steamers beween New York and Chagres, and between Panama and San Francisco, made no money know that since that time their profits have been enormous. We are well aware that all we can say will e little avail. The Dryasdusts will cling to their ancient notions, and the mousers over little schemes of their own, will not be convinc ed because it is not their interests to be so. But we cannot see this last hope of getting steam line lost forever, without entering our

ARTILLERY FOR THE MILLION. In the course of an article upon the subject of teaching our population the drill, &c., of oldiers, the New York Express takes occasion to allude to the very meagre representation which the artillery service has among our volunteer corps. It presses the propriety of having our people instructed in this branch of military tactics, as well as in those of infantry and cavalry. We entirely agree with the Ex press. In our military drills this thing ought to be attended to. We should have the proper proportion of artillery in all military arrays, just as if we were going into war. There is no occasion to teach our people the use of fireerms. They know it by instinct. Their fire can never be rivalled by European troops .-Even at Bladensburg, the militie, though just about to run, delivered a fire, which, General Ross told Mr. Skinner, if repeated twice, would have sent any troops in the world to the rightabout. Where they have practiced with cannon, they fire equally as well. They ought to have an opportunity to practice it, for just at this time things look so squally that we cannot tell when we may have a war. Our regular army is too small for any other purpose than to furnish officers and afford a nucleus for the yeomanry. It is upon these last that the issue of any great struggle must depend .-They should be trained, as citizen soldiery, in time of peace, so that a very little additional drilling might make them ready for the field in the event of war. We hope this matter will be looked into by our Legislature, when they have the militia laws up before them again. Napoleon says that battles bereafter must be decided by couns de canons, (blows of cannons,) as they were in the primitive ages, before the use of other weapons, by coups de poignes, (blows of the fist.) He himself made great use of, and improvements in artillery. At the battle of Boroding, in seven hours, the French fired 91,000 cannon shot, (13,000 an hour,) and at Leipsic; during the three days' battle, 150,000. So highly did he think of this arm, that he said there should be at least four pieces to every thousand men of an army; that is to say, an army of 10,000 should have 40 pieces, an army of 100,000, 400 pieces, &c.

Great as were the improvements made i his time, they have been far exceeded in the present day. General Taylor owed all his victories to the perfection of this arm. In the great battle of Grochow, between the Poles and Russians, the former, with 97 pieces and 47,000 men, defeated the latter, 180,000 strong, with 400 pieces of artillery. The victory was owing, in a great measure, to the admirable management of the flying artillery. It made itself fully the equal of the enormous batteries of the enemy. It flew about the field at full gallop, and was always ready to deliver its fire wherever it was needed.

There are no such gunners in the world as the Americans, as the naval battles of the last war, and their defence of positions prove .-Give them the chance to practice, we say.

RETRIBUTION.

The Petersburg Intelligencer, noticing the accession of Louis Napoleon to the throne of the French Empire, takes occasion to observe, that the Great Emperor himself, who divorced Josephine because she bore him no children, would have some strange feelings, could he rise from the dead and see his throne filled by the grand-son of the divorced wife, while his own son by his second marriage sleeps far from France, in the tomb of the Hapsburgs. The reflection is indeed singular, and it proves that there is a "divinity which shapes our ends, rough-hew them as we may."

The case of the descendants of Mary, Queen of Scots, is even more wonderful than this .-Her bloody rival-far more bloody than her sister, the cruel and bigoted Mary-who kept a grim array of three hundred heads, stricker off for treason during her reign, on London Bridge, including those of her near relation, the Duke of Norfolk, and her lover, Essex, and was accustomed to exhibit them to foreign ambassadors in order that they might see "how we serve traitors in England"-never dreamed perhaps, that nearly three hundred years after her death those descendants would be seated on half the thrones of Europe. Yet such is at this day the fact. We had just finished the perusal of a very interesting review of Miss Strickland's life of the Queen of Scots, in Blackwood for November, when we came across this editorial, and were immediately struck with the resemblance, in this particular. in the fate of the two.

The New York Express announces the death of Mr. Augustus Schell, chairman of the Democratic General Committee, who was brutally assaulted by ruffians at Tammany Hall a short time since. The attention of tie Grand Jury of New York has been called to this case.

Richard Wayne, democrat, has been elected mayor of Savannah.

STEAMBOAT EXPLOSION .- We mentioned on Monacy that the Keokuck packet steamer had burst her boiler near St. Louis, killing and wounding several persons. Capt. Johnson and Mr. Johnson, the clerk, were instantly killed. The two engineers and the mate were severely injured. Captain Dean, whose death was mentioned on Monday, was of the firm of Carson & Dean. He was conversing with the clerk when the accident occurred. The boat took fire and burned to the water's edge.

THE SECRETARY OF STATE.-We learn that the nomination of Hon. Edward Everett as Secretary of State was yesterday commu-nicated to the Senate; and that the nomination was unanimously confirmed, at the instance of distinguished gentlemen of both parties, without the usual formality of a day's delay and a reference to a committee.

President's Report .- The committee to whom was referred the President's Report, reported that they did not find any thing which required to be brought to the special notice of the meeting, but took pleasure in saying that the action of the President and Directors of the company during the past year, which had been one of peculiar trial and embarrassment, called for the expression of the thanks of the stockholders, and that the result of their labors had been most propitious to the interests of the company, and afforded just cause of congratulation to every friend of the great work, to whose prosecution their energies had been so faithfully and judiciously directed.

The exhibit of receipts and disbursements within the year, from October 1, 1851, to September 30, 1852, show a total of receipts of $380,981 14, to which add the amount in hand October 1, 1851, of debts due to the company and money, of $13,597 66, makes a total of funds from all sources of $394,578 80; disbursements for the same period, including advances to contractors and debts due to the company, of $390,759 13, leaving a balance of money in hand $3,819 67.

Statement C, of the Treasurer's report, is synopsis of A and B, exhibiting in a con densed form the anticipated available resources of the company on 30th September, 1852, of $413.526 22, based upon the expected private subscriptions to the remaining amount of the new capital, to be subscribed by individuals and the State. The report was adopted.

Books and Accounts .- A report from the committee on Books and Accounts endorsing their correctness, was then submitted and adopted.

Duty on Iron .- On motion Dr. Atkinson, a resolution providing that the President and Directors of the Richmond and Danville Railroad Company petition the Congress of the United States, at the present session, in behalf of the company, to admit, free of duty, the railroad iron that might be imported by the company, or others, for them, for the use of said road, was next adopted.

By-Laws .- The committee on By-Laws reported that no amendments were required. Appropriation.-Mr. Giles offered the folwing resolution: Resolved. That the President and Director e and they are hereby authorized, should the Legislature of the State make any loan of mo to this company, or make any other ion by law for contributing means for completion of its works, to accept such law or proposition, and to give to the State a lien on the property and income of this company, or on either, or on any part thereof, to secure the payment of the principal and interest of such loan; or to comply with any other condi-tions, terms or stipulations which may be re-quired; provided the President and Directors hould deem it advisable to do so. Adopted.

Loan .- Mr. Giles also offered a resolution authorizing the President and Directors, if they thought it necessary, to borrow $100,000, to be appropriated to the completion of the works of the company and the procurement of rolling stock and other furniture of the road, said amount to be legally provided for. The resolution was adopted.

Salary .- On motion, the 16th by-law was so amended as to give the clerk $1800 instead of $1400 salary per annum.

Thanks -On motion of Mr. W. H. Clarke, the thanks of the stockholders were tendered to he President and Directors for their ability and fidelity in the discharge of their respective duties.

Dividends .- Mr. Stovall offered a resolution authorizing the President and Directors of the company to ascertain the amount of the annual profits of the shares of the company-declare a dividend upon them, and issue to the stockholders obligations for the same, to be payable at such time and in such manner as the President and Directors might prescribe. Adopted.

Petition .- A petition was presented for the extension of the track of the road across Belle Isle to the North side of James River at the Tredegar Iron Works-signed by Anderson & Souther, and others.

On motion, the memorial was referred to the Board of Directors, without instructions, leaving it wholly to their discretion to carry out the object of the petition or not, as they may

On motion, the following officers were elect ed for the ensuing year: President-W. P. Tunstall.

Vice President-A. F. D. Gifford. Messrs. Gifford and James C. Crane were unanimously elected Directors.

The meeting then adjourned.

DISMISSED .- A charge of assault, preferred by Edward New against John Quill, alias Phelan, was, at the request of the complainant, yesterday, dismissed by his Honor.

A few days since, C. C. Burton engaged to haul a quantity of pig iron from Rocketts, for Joseph R. Anderson. A portion of the iron was removed soon after the fresh, and some bars became scattered and covered up in the mud. Captain Peyton G. Williams, of the schooner George Washington, purchased a lot of loose iron from some negroes who were engaged in cleaning the dock, and which had been given them by Mr. Lewis, a dock-master. This iron Capt. W. placed on board his vessel. Mr. Burton called to see it, claimed it as Mr. Anderson's iron lost in the mud, and failing to get what he thought was his due, in the absence of the captain, procured a warrant for his arrest on the charge of receiving, unlawfully, 1500 lbs. of iron, the property of Mr.

Anderson. A second warrant was awarded, and executed on Thursday by officer Page .-Iron was found in the vessel, which Mr. Burton claimed; and vesterday the Mayor heard the testimony in the case. 'The testimony proved that Mr. Burton had acted very hastily in bringing his charge against Captain Williams-that the captain had purchased the iron lawfolly-that the iron was not lying, when found by the negroes, where Mr. Anderson's had been and might not be Mr. A.'s-and the Mayor, of course, dismissed the case, the captain having been entirely exonerated.

Persons should be careful how they make harges, even impliedly, of receiving stolen goods; and Mr. Burton stated yesterday, in Court, that he had acted on a misunder standing, and did not wish to injure the captain, but to procure the iron.

Mr. Lewis also stated that the iron which he gave the negroes for their labor, had be en lyng about the wharves for 12 months, not claimed, and in the way, covered with, mud and defaced.
