THE GREAT BATTLE.

TERRIBLE FIGHTS OF MONDAY AND TUESDAY.

HEROISM OF OUR TROOPS—THEIR SPIRITS BUOYANT.

Critical Situation of the Yankee Forces.

Since the issue of our paper yesterday no information has reached us of the transactions of our own, and the enemy's forces calculated to discourage the hope that the grand army of McClellan is completely discomfited. The determined stands made by the Federal forces on Monday and Tuesday were only the last desperate struggle against ignominious capture or utter annihilation. Their condition is one of desperation, and it is but natural that they should struggle with energy to avert the fate that awaits them.

MONDAY AFTERNOON'S FIGHT.

We have already laid before our readers such accounts of the desperate and determined fight of Monday evening as were enabled to gather from the most authentic sources. An active participant in that memorable engagement has furnished a detailed account of the part borne by the division of Gen. A. P. Hill in this struggle. This division went into the fight about half past 5 o'clock P. M., and was actively engaged from that time until its close, after 3 o'clock at night.

THE 9th VIRGINIA REGIMENT, FIELD'S BRIGADE, COL. BOCKENBROUGH COMMANDING.

The 9th Virginia Regiment, Field's Brigade, Col. Bockenbrough commanding, was deployed as skirmishers, three hundred yards to the right, separate from the balance of the brigade, which was ordered forward. The regiment was then withdrawn a skilful manner, and placed in the rear of the division, which was rapidly reformed to the right in regular line of battle. After advancing in this order for some distance, they were thrown upon the left, through a heavy tract of woods—emerging from which they encountered a strong force of the enemy, who threw themselves upon the ground and awaited the approach of the regiment. When within one hundred yards of the enemy, the 9th Virginia, who were partly composed of the 37th N. Y. regiment, a most numerous and destructive force, was opened upon them, and it is believed that not less than seventy-five of our men fell from the first volley. This, as might have been expected, produced some confusion in the regiment, and they fell back to the woods north of the 9th Virginia. Many of the regiment, it is believed, were captured in this woods, as at full call none of their names but they were present to respond to their names out of 450 that went into the fight.

ON A HILL, OBVIOUSLY TO THE RIGHT OF GEN. HILL'S ADVANCE.

On a hill, obviously to the right of Gen. Hill's advance, was posted a battery of some twelve pieces, which had been taken from the 9th Virginia, and were by our force under Gen. Longstreet, but recaptured by the enemy. This battery, the brigade of Gen. Fields—reduced in numbers and worn out with fatigue from their participation in every general engagement since Thursday—was ordered to charge. With spirit and alacrity they responded to the call, and advanced in steady step, and they moved forward to its position. In their approach to the battery, they fired three or four rounds, and then engaged the enemy with the bayonet. Here the struggle was bloody and determined, but after a most obstinate resistance, the enemy was driven from his pieces, and pressed back some hundred yards to the woods north of the 9th Virginia. This charge was made by three regiments—the 47th, 53d and 60th Virginia.

THE OTHER BRIGADES OF THE DIVISION COMING UP TO THE SUPPORT OF FIELDS, FINDING THE ENEMY ROUTED, COMMENCED CHARGING VIOLENTLY.

The other brigades of the division coming up to the support of Fields, finding the enemy routed, commenced charging violently. The Federal columns, which were in the line, were taken into the line, and they moved forward to its position. In their approach to the battery, they fired three or four rounds, and then engaged the enemy with the bayonet. Here the struggle was bloody and determined, but after a most obstinate resistance, the enemy was driven from his pieces, and pressed back some hundred yards to the woods north of the 9th Virginia. This charge was made by three regiments—the 47th, 53d and 60th Virginia.

THE ENEMY'S POSITION.

The enemy's position was in a line of battle, extending from the woods north of the 9th Virginia to the woods south of the 9th Virginia. The enemy's position was in a line of battle, extending from the woods north of the 9th Virginia to the woods south of the 9th Virginia.

TUESDAY'S OPERATIONS.

During the forenoon of Tuesday there was no regular engagement, but much desultory firing along the whole extent of the retreating and retreating line. The fighting commenced on the right of the wing of our army, Jackson's corps, then situated coming to Dr. Pendleton's farm, on the Williamsburg road, and directly opposite Turkey Island creek. The character of the country here is slightly undulating, the intervening ground between the retreating and retreating line, and the woods on the right, which the extremes are dense woods of heavy timber and thick undergrowth. From the situation occupied by our troops, the enemy was discovered in large force deploying their troops, and placing their artillery in position. Bodies of skirmishers were thrown out from our column with a view to test the disposition of the enemy. This regiment had been sent forward to occupy a strong position on the right of the line, and was ordered to advance. The enemy's position was in a line of battle, extending from the woods north of the 9th Virginia to the woods south of the 9th Virginia.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT FROM EUROPE.

FOREIGN INTERVENTION.

Speeches in Parliament.

BUTLER'S PROCLAMATION.

THE BRITISH PRESS ON INTERVENTION.

The New York papers to the 27th (one day later) contain the details of the foreign news by the Arriva from London, June 14th. They are very important, and much more detailed than the telegraphic summary before published would have led to believe. In following editorial in the Herald will show with what solicitude our paper regards the present attitude of foreign powers relative to intervention.

BRITISH INSOLENCE AND AMERICAN POWER.

[From the New York Herald, June 27.]

The details of the news by the Arriva are of a much more detailed character than the telegraphic summary which we published on Wednesday. Our Paris correspondence, too, throws great additional light upon the movements now going on in France and England. It appears that the programme is that France will take the lead in the "intervention," and that England will follow. The French Government has already taken steps to the settlement of the civil war, in America, while England secretly plots her moral, and not her military, support.
