

Published daily, except on Sundays and public holidays, at the office of the Dispatch, No. 100 North Main Street, Richmond, Va.

Subscription prices: One year, $10.00; Six months, $6.00; Three months, $3.50. Single copies, 10 cents.

Advertisements: One square, one insertion, 50 cents; one square, one month, $1.50; one square, three months, $4.00.

Richmond Dispatch
TUESDAY, AUGUST 3, 1875.

THE WEATHER TODAY.—The probabilities are for a cloudy day, with a shower or two.

THE WEATHER YESTERDAY.—The day was cloudy, with a shower of rain in the afternoon.

A letter from the author of Glendower.

Dear Sir:—I have just received your letter of the 27th inst., and am glad to hear that you are interested in the article on Glendower.

I have already written more than I intended, and I am sure that the present condition of my health will justify me in not still suffering from the ravages of that fell disease, meningitis, which I was prostrated during last session, I should most assuredly reply to some of your criticisms.

I am not physically able to proceed, and I am content with the present state of my health, and I am sure that the present condition of my health will justify me in not still suffering from the ravages of that fell disease, meningitis, which I was prostrated during last session, I should most assuredly reply to some of your criticisms.

The Appeal told us where we could find "Glendower," and the copy we published was the one to which that journal referred us. We do not deem it necessary to reply to Mr. Almond's article.

As it is pronounced as Monticello, or as it is spelled Monticello, any reference to it should be made in the same manner. I have already written more than I intended, and I am sure that the present condition of my health will justify me in not still suffering from the ravages of that fell disease, meningitis, which I was prostrated during last session, I should most assuredly reply to some of your criticisms.

As it is pronounced as Monticello, or as it is spelled Monticello, any reference to it should be made in the same manner. I have already written more than I intended, and I am sure that the present condition of my health will justify me in not still suffering from the ravages of that fell disease, meningitis, which I was prostrated during last session, I should most assuredly reply to some of your criticisms.

As it is pronounced as Monticello, or as it is spelled Monticello, any reference to it should be made in the same manner. I have already written more than I intended, and I am sure that the present condition of my health will justify me in not still suffering from the ravages of that fell disease, meningitis, which I was prostrated during last session, I should most assuredly reply to some of your criticisms.

As it is pronounced as Monticello, or as it is spelled Monticello, any reference to it should be made in the same manner. I have already written more than I intended, and I am sure that the present condition of my health will justify me in not still suffering from the ravages of that fell disease, meningitis, which I was prostrated during last session, I should most assuredly reply to some of your criticisms.

As it is pronounced as Monticello, or as it is spelled Monticello, any reference to it should be made in the same manner. I have already written more than I intended, and I am sure that the present condition of my health will justify me in not still suffering from the ravages of that fell disease, meningitis, which I was prostrated during last session, I should most assuredly reply to some of your criticisms.

As it is pronounced as Monticello, or as it is spelled Monticello, any reference to it should be made in the same manner. I have already written more than I intended, and I am sure that the present condition of my health will justify me in not still suffering from the ravages of that fell disease, meningitis, which I was prostrated during last session, I should most assuredly reply to some of your criticisms.

As it is pronounced as Monticello, or as it is spelled Monticello, any reference to it should be made in the same manner. I have already written more than I intended, and I am sure that the present condition of my health will justify me in not still suffering from the ravages of that fell disease, meningitis, which I was prostrated during last session, I should most assuredly reply to some of your criticisms.

As it is pronounced as Monticello, or as it is spelled Monticello, any reference to it should be made in the same manner. I have already written more than I intended, and I am sure that the present condition of my health will justify me in not still suffering from the ravages of that fell disease, meningitis, which I was prostrated during last session, I should most assuredly reply to some of your criticisms.

As it is pronounced as Monticello, or as it is spelled Monticello, any reference to it should be made in the same manner. I have already written more than I intended, and I am sure that the present condition of my health will justify me in not still suffering from the ravages of that fell disease, meningitis, which I was prostrated during last session, I should most assuredly reply to some of your criticisms.

As it is pronounced as Monticello, or as it is spelled Monticello, any reference to it should be made in the same manner. I have already written more than I intended, and I am sure that the present condition of my health will justify me in not still suffering from the ravages of that fell disease, meningitis, which I was prostrated during last session, I should most assuredly reply to some of your criticisms.

As it is pronounced as Monticello, or as it is spelled Monticello, any reference to it should be made in the same manner. I have already written more than I intended, and I am sure that the present condition of my health will justify me in not still suffering from the ravages of that fell disease, meningitis, which I was prostrated during last session, I should most assuredly reply to some of your criticisms.

As it is pronounced as Monticello, or as it is spelled Monticello, any reference to it should be made in the same manner. I have already written more than I intended, and I am sure that the present condition of my health will justify me in not still suffering from the ravages of that fell disease, meningitis, which I was prostrated during last session, I should most assuredly reply to some of your criticisms.

As it is pronounced as Monticello, or as it is spelled Monticello, any reference to it should be made in the same manner. I have already written more than I intended, and I am sure that the present condition of my health will justify me in not still suffering from the ravages of that fell disease, meningitis, which I was prostrated during last session, I should most assuredly reply to some of your criticisms.

As it is pronounced as Monticello, or as it is spelled Monticello, any reference to it should be made in the same manner. I have already written more than I intended, and I am sure that the present condition of my health will justify me in not still suffering from the ravages of that fell disease, meningitis, which I was prostrated during last session, I should most assuredly reply to some of your criticisms.

As it is pronounced as Monticello, or as it is spelled Monticello, any reference to it should be made in the same manner. I have already written more than I intended, and I am sure that the present condition of my health will justify me in not still suffering from the ravages of that fell disease, meningitis, which I was prostrated during last session, I should most assuredly reply to some of your criticisms.

As it is pronounced as Monticello, or as it is spelled Monticello, any reference to it should be made in the same manner. I have already written more than I intended, and I am sure that the present condition of my health will justify me in not still suffering from the ravages of that fell disease, meningitis, which I was prostrated during last session, I should most assuredly reply to some of your criticisms.

As it is pronounced as Monticello, or as it is spelled Monticello, any reference to it should be made in the same manner. I have already written more than I intended, and I am sure that the present condition of my health will justify me in not still suffering from the ravages of that fell disease, meningitis, which I was prostrated during last session, I should most assuredly reply to some of your criticisms.

LOCAL MATTERS.

RENEWAL ACCIDENTS.—Mr. R. E. Blankenship was painfully injured on Sunday afternoon by being thrown from his buggy. He was driving down Eighth street, when his horse became unmanageable, ran into a wagon and upset the buggy, tearing off one of the front wheels and throwing Mr. Blankenship to the ground, inflicting severe bruises and sprains. Yesterday he was confined to his bed.

A horse ran away with a buggy in which a gentleman and lady were seated yesterday afternoon from near the Free bridge. He was driving down Eighth street, when he was frightened and was not much injured. The gentleman stuck to the buggy until the runaway reached the neighborhood of Shookoe warehouse, where he was thrown out and injured about the back and legs.

UNFORTUNATE ACCIDENT.—Mr. Patrick McKee, who resides in Rockets, and who is a painter by trade, but has for some time been unable to work at that business on account of a paralytic stroke, was yesterday run over by a locomotive of the Chesapeake and Ohio road, near the railroad track near the western end of the trestle which crosses the low-grounds in the vicinity of the Gas-Works, and was unable to get out of the way in time, or perhaps did not hear the whistle of the locomotive as it emerged from the tunnel. He was thrown from the engine, and had good surgical attention, but he died last evening.

FIRE ON SUNDAY.—Late Saturday night a kerosene-oil lamp exploded in the dwelling-house occupied by Mr. J. J. Whitehurst, situated at the corner of Third and Second streets. The fire broke out at about 11 o'clock, and the room took fire. Mr. Whitehurst succeeded, as he thought, in putting out the flames. Just before 2 o'clock Sunday morning he found that the flames had caught the lathing and had run up to the roof. An alarm was turned in at Station 4, Third Police district, and the fire was promptly extinguished. The house and furniture were damaged to an amount not exceeding $200. Mrs. Davis owns the house. The furniture was insured.

CHURCH NOTES.—Right Rev. Thomas J. Dudley, D. D., assistant bishop of Kentucky, officiated at the Monumental on Sunday. At St. John's Rev. Henry Wall, D. D., preached morning and evening. At night his farewell discourse was delivered.

At Centenary Methodist five persons were received on Sunday—Rev. J. M. Edwards, D. D., preached in the morning, and Rev. E. T. Craven, D. D., in the evening.

At the Leigh Street Baptist church three members were received into fellowship of the church at the communion Sunday.

Rev. A. E. Dickson, of South Carolina, preached at the corner of Third and Second streets, Sunday—at the former church in the morning, at the latter in the evening.

Rev. Wm. Brown, D. D., preached at the Third Presbyterian church on Sunday morning. There was no service at night.

Rev. H. R. Dickson, of South Carolina, preached at the corner of Third and Second streets, Sunday—at the former church in the morning, at the latter in the evening.

Rev. Dr. Hoge filed his own pulpit morning and evening, and had large congregations considering the number of people who are out of the city at this time.

THE GOODLAND CAMP-MEETING.—A LARGE CROWD IN ATTENDANCE SUNDAY.—The Methodist camp-meeting now in successful progress about twenty-four miles from this city, in Goodland county, is being held upon the site of the meeting last year. The plan of the meeting was very successful, and the attendance was very large.

The first two days the meeting was well attended; indeed, it is doubtful whether a larger crowd ever assembled in Goodland county on a similar occasion than on Sunday.

It is estimated that there are about six hundred of whom were from Richmond. Some persons are said to have been in attendance who came from beyond the city of Petersburg.

Services were commenced at dawn and continued until a late hour at night, with short intervals for meals. An ample supply of food was provided for the camp.

Although the sun was obscured by clouds during the entire day, and the weather threatening, yet it was late in the evening before it began to rain, and then it did not rain sufficiently to interrupt the exercises. At the noon services Rev. W. W. Bennett, D. D., of Richmond, delivered a most excellent sermon, which was listened to with much interest.

The services on Sunday about 8,000 persons were present in and about the building, and many went away unable to get even within hearing distance.

CHURCH REDEDICATED.—The Fourth Baptist (or Chimboraço) church (colored) was rededicated on Sunday. This church, it will be remembered, is under the pastoral care of Rev. Scott G. W. W. Bennett, D. D., of Richmond. The church is situated on Broad to Thirty-second and P streets.

At the services on Sunday about 8,000 persons were present in and about the building, and many went away unable to get even within hearing distance.

PERSONAL.—Secretary Alfred Moses, of the City School Board, has gone to the White Sulphur Springs, and will be absent several days. Mr. Charles L. Todd, of the Board of Aldermen, leaves the city this morning for a visit to the Cold Sulphur and White Sulphur Springs.

The Committee on Streets are contemplating the widening of the sidewalk on the east side of the city. They will visit Old Point, Hampton, Cape Charles, etc., about the 12th or 15th of August, to enjoy a brief season of fishing, etc., and return to the city after a three days' visit.

Mr. Joseph Downey, of Granite, Chesapeake county, left yesterday on a visit to England for the benefit of his health.

At a meeting held Sunday night by the congregation of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Mr. A. Bloch was elected minister and reader of the scriptures.

RECEIVED A GUEST.—Mr. C. W. Culver, of New York, was a guest of the city on Friday evening. He dragged the hose to the front and put the nozzle on the fence, and then hastened down to the cellar to turn the water on. Just as he disappeared in the young man, appearing around the corner and approached the premises of Mr. Culver. The gentleman was wearing a gold-headed cane and discoursing on the beauty of the evening and the trimness of the cottages they were passing.

"Now that place is opposite the old engine, stopping exactly opposite the nozzle, which none of the party observed, and pointing at Mr. Culver's pretty house, 'is a place which just suits my eye. It is not too large or too small. It has the requisite amount of room inside and out. The yard is a model of order."

And just at that unhappy instant the water was turned on by the unconscious Mr. Culver, and the old gentleman's beaming face being in exact range with the dravidi nozzle, the stream struck him completely off the wall, and he went over backward into the street, his head striking the corner of the street, and he was seen no more.

"The little colored boy charged with striking and killing his companion, Watson Taylor, was brought before the court yesterday morning. The case was continued until tomorrow, important witnesses being absent."

THE SIDNEY HOMICIDE.—Edward Brown, the little colored boy charged with striking and killing his companion, Watson Taylor, was brought before the court yesterday morning. The case was continued until tomorrow, important witnesses being absent.

The census of New York city shows a population of 1,000,000.

GEN. GEORGE E. PICKETT.

HONOR TO HIS MEMORY.
Memorial Meeting at the Opera-House Last Night.

Speeches by General Kemper, Major Scales, Bishop Dudley, Captain Wise, and Rev. Dr. Hoge.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED.

The death of General George E. Pickett, which took place at Norfolk last week, was the occasion of a meeting of the Confederate Veterans of the United States at the Opera House last night to do honor to his memory, and to recall to the public mind his services and virtues, and to express sympathy with his bereaved family and relatives in the loss they have sustained.

Owing to the heavy storm which preceded the meeting, and the threatening clouds crossing the heavens at the hour fixed for its commencement, many ladies and gentlemen who earnestly desired to be present were prevented from attending. As it was, the number there, representing all classes of our people, was sufficient to demonstrate what noble a hero he was, and how much the affections and admiration of our people.

The meeting was called to order by General Dabney H. Manry, on whose motion General James L. Kemper, Governor of the State, was elected chairman.

GENERAL KEMPER'S SPEECH.
General R. Lindsey Walker, P. T. Moore, and J. D. Imboden were appointed to wait upon the Governor, and to bring him to the meeting. The committee have performed that duty introduced the Governor, who in accepting the chair said:

Fellow-citizens.—You have assembled tonight to render the last sad testimonial of honor to the memory of a soldier and a patriot. It is well as those who are called to do so, should do so with a full and noble heart, and in the midst of the excitement and the jostling thrills of the hour. It is a mournful event which now speaks to the stony passions of men and bids them to be still! It is not merely a domestic but a public affliction, wrought by the hand of the Most High, and which has called to the attention of the people, which solemnly summons us to behold the example it has left us, to profit by the lessons it teaches us, and to honor and cherish the deeds and virtues which adorned it.

It is not for me now to recite—it would be premature to do so, for it is the life of a soldier who went down to the coming generations as part of the history of his country. I cannot yet trust myself to describe the qualities and achievements which shed lustre upon his career. The heart feels most when a man's noble life is cut off by a sudden and bloody death. He was my commander, my comrade, and my friend. It is the man, rather than the soldier, that we contemplate now. If I were called upon to name the one quality which shone conspicuously above all others in his private life, as well as in his public life, it would be his generous and overflowing heart, which flowed with a generosity of heart, which preferred the cause of his country to his own, and his friend to himself. In 1861 he held by a secure tenure a life-appointment of honor and emolument, and without a moment of hesitation, on account of any interests or fortunes of his own, he forsook his most cherished hopes and aims; he instantly gave up all at the bidding of Virginia, and taking his life in his hand he threw himself at the critical moment on the side of his country. He was a man of a noble and fearless spirit, and he was a man of a noble and fearless spirit, and he was a man of a noble and fearless spirit.

At the close of the war, when deprived of his profession, stripped of fortune, and pressed by adversity, he provided for his family and for his friends. Although for years he battled sorely against the grim fiend of want, although he writhed under the whip and stings of poverty, yet he abated no jot of heart or hope, but with a genial, cheerful, and courageous spirit, he struggled on to the last, and he was a man of a noble and fearless spirit.

Let those who are striving solely to heap up riches behold the simplicity, the modesty, and the poverty which marked the life of the patriot and hero. The very sacrifices, the hardships, and the privations which he thus endured and endured constitute nobler treasures of wealth—a far richer and more enduring inheritance for his son—than the sum of the gold of California added to the gains of Samarcand. Let the utilitarian spirit of the times stand in the way of the noble and fearless spirit of the patriot and hero.

Let those who are striving solely to heap up riches behold the simplicity, the modesty, and the poverty which marked the life of the patriot and hero. The very sacrifices, the hardships, and the privations which he thus endured and endured constitute nobler treasures of wealth—a far richer and more enduring inheritance for his son—than the sum of the gold of California added to the gains of Samarcand. Let the utilitarian spirit of the times stand in the way of the noble and fearless spirit of the patriot and hero.

Let those who are striving solely to heap up riches behold the simplicity, the modesty, and the poverty which marked the life of the patriot and hero. The very sacrifices, the hardships, and the privations which he thus endured and endured constitute nobler treasures of wealth—a far richer and more enduring inheritance for his son—than the sum of the gold of California added to the gains of Samarcand. Let the utilitarian spirit of the times stand in the way of the noble and fearless spirit of the patriot and hero.

Let those who are striving solely to heap up riches behold the simplicity, the modesty, and the poverty which marked the life of the patriot and hero. The very sacrifices, the hardships, and the privations which he thus endured and endured constitute nobler treasures of wealth—a far richer and more enduring inheritance for his son—than the sum of the gold of California added to the gains of Samarcand. Let the utilitarian spirit of the times stand in the way of the noble and fearless spirit of the patriot and hero.

Let those who are striving solely to heap up riches behold the simplicity, the modesty, and the poverty which marked the life of the patriot and hero. The very sacrifices, the hardships, and the privations which he thus endured and endured constitute nobler treasures of wealth—a far richer and more enduring inheritance for his son—than the sum of the gold of California added to the gains of Samarcand. Let the utilitarian spirit of the times stand in the way of the noble and fearless spirit of the patriot and hero.

Let those who are striving solely to heap up riches behold the simplicity, the modesty, and the poverty which marked the life of the patriot and hero. The very sacrifices, the hardships, and the privations which he thus endured and endured constitute nobler treasures of wealth—a far richer and more enduring inheritance for his son—than the sum of the gold of California added to the gains of Samarcand. Let the utilitarian spirit of the times stand in the way of the noble and fearless spirit of the patriot and hero.

Let those who are striving solely to heap up riches behold the simplicity, the modesty, and the poverty which marked the life of the patriot and hero. The very sacrifices, the hardships, and the privations which he thus endured and endured constitute nobler treasures of wealth—a far richer and more enduring inheritance for his son—than the sum of the gold of California added to the gains of Samarcand. Let the utilitarian spirit of the times stand in the way of the noble and fearless spirit of the patriot and hero.

Let those who are striving solely to heap up riches behold the simplicity, the modesty, and the poverty which marked the life of the patriot and hero. The very sacrifices, the hardships, and the privations which he thus endured and endured constitute nobler treasures of wealth—a far richer and more enduring inheritance for his son—than the sum of the gold of California added to the gains of Samarcand. Let the utilitarian spirit of the times stand in the way of the noble and fearless spirit of the patriot and hero.

Let those who are striving solely to heap up riches behold the simplicity, the modesty, and the poverty which marked the life of the patriot and hero. The very sacrifices, the hardships, and the privations which he thus endured and endured constitute nobler treasures of wealth—a far richer and more enduring inheritance for his son—than the sum of the gold of California added to the gains of Samarcand. Let the utilitarian spirit of the times stand in the way of the noble and fearless spirit of the patriot and hero.

Let those who are striving solely to heap up riches behold the simplicity, the modesty, and the poverty which marked the life of the patriot and hero. The very sacrifices, the hardships, and the privations which he thus endured and endured constitute nobler treasures of wealth—a far richer and more enduring inheritance for his son—than the sum of the gold of California added to the gains of Samarcand. Let the utilitarian spirit of the times stand in the way of the noble and fearless spirit of the patriot and hero.

Let those who are striving solely to heap up riches behold the simplicity, the modesty, and the poverty which marked the life of the patriot and hero. The very sacrifices, the hardships, and the privations which he thus endured and endured constitute nobler treasures of wealth—a far richer and more enduring inheritance for his son—than the sum of the gold of California added to the gains of Samarcand. Let the utilitarian spirit of the times stand in the way of the noble and fearless spirit of the patriot and hero.

Let those who are striving solely to heap up riches behold the simplicity, the modesty, and the poverty which marked the life of the patriot and hero. The very sacrifices, the hardships, and the privations which he thus endured and endured constitute nobler treasures of wealth—a far richer and more enduring inheritance for his son—than the sum of the gold of California added to the gains of Samarcand. Let the utilitarian spirit of the times stand in the way of the noble and fearless spirit of the patriot and hero.

Let those who are striving solely to heap up riches behold the simplicity, the modesty, and the poverty which marked the life of the patriot and hero. The very sacrifices, the hardships, and the privations which he thus endured and endured constitute nobler treasures of wealth—a far richer and more enduring inheritance for his son—than the sum of the gold of California added to the gains of Samarcand. Let the utilitarian spirit of the times stand in the way of the noble and fearless spirit of the patriot and hero.

Let those who are striving solely to heap up riches behold the simplicity, the modesty, and the poverty which marked the life of the patriot and hero. The very sacrifices, the hardships, and the privations which he thus endured and endured constitute nobler treasures of wealth—a far richer and more enduring inheritance for his son—than the sum of the gold of California added to the gains of Samarcand. Let the utilitarian spirit of the times stand in the way of the noble and fearless spirit of the patriot and hero.

Let those who are striving solely to heap up riches behold the simplicity, the modesty, and the poverty which marked the life of the patriot and hero. The very sacrifices, the hardships, and the privations which he thus endured and endured constitute nobler treasures of wealth—a far richer and more enduring inheritance for his son—than the sum of the gold of California added to the gains of Samarcand. Let the utilitarian spirit of the times stand in the way of the noble and fearless spirit of the patriot and hero.

Let those who are striving solely to heap up riches behold the simplicity, the modesty, and the poverty which marked the life of the patriot and hero. The very sacrifices, the hardships, and the privations which he thus endured and endured constitute nobler treasures of wealth—a far richer and more enduring inheritance for his son—than the sum of the gold of California added to the gains of Samarcand. Let the utilitarian spirit of the times stand in the way of the noble and fearless spirit of the patriot and hero.

Let those who are striving solely to heap up riches behold the simplicity, the modesty, and the poverty which marked the life of the patriot and hero. The very sacrifices, the hardships, and the privations which he thus endured and endured constitute nobler treasures of wealth—a far richer and more enduring inheritance for his son—than the sum of the gold of California added to the gains of Samarcand. Let the utilitarian spirit of the times stand in the way of the noble and fearless spirit of the patriot and hero.

Let those who are striving solely to heap up riches behold the simplicity, the modesty, and the poverty which marked the life of the patriot and hero. The very sacrifices, the hardships, and the privations which he thus endured and endured constitute nobler treasures of wealth—a far richer and more enduring inheritance for his son—than the sum of the gold of California added to the gains of Samarcand. Let the utilitarian spirit of the times stand in the way of the noble and fearless spirit of the patriot and hero.

Let those who are striving solely to heap up riches behold the simplicity, the modesty, and the poverty which marked the life of the patriot and hero. The very sacrifices, the hardships, and the privations which he thus endured and endured constitute nobler treasures of wealth—a far richer and more enduring inheritance for his son—than the sum of the gold of California added to the gains of Samarcand. Let the utilitarian spirit of the times stand in the way of the noble and fearless spirit of the patriot and hero.

our grand past we also commend to our own imitation his cheerful and gallant courage, his lofty and delicate personal honor, his genial, generous, and kindly temper; his devotion to his duty and his State; and his unobtrusive yet a certain

Resolved, That we tender to his bereaved family our profoundest sympathy in a grief which we well know is far too deep and overwhelming to be assuaged by any human consolation.

Resolved, That the secretary of this meeting be requested to furnish a copy of these resolutions to the family of the deceased.

MAJOR ROBERT SCALES.
Major Scales in presenting the resolutions spoke of Pickett's great modesty and of him as the leader of a division that deserved to rank with the Terribles of Marshal Victor, or the Tenth Legion of Caesar. He knew the deceased as one who breathed in an atmosphere of personal integrity. As a Christian he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart.

Major Scales spoke with great eloquence and effect of the sacrifices of General Pickett in leaving the United States army, and he desired to record the indebtedness of the southern people to Pickett and his companions of the old army who in resigning gave up all worldly concerns that men could have under a rich and powerful Government to enter our country. He knew of no set of men who had exhibited more manhood or more deserve our gratitude.

Major Scales' speech was one of the best of the evening. His description of Pickett's charge at Gettysburg, the rush up the hill, the crossing of the soldiers' bayonets, the heroic struggle, was a splendid passage, and delivered in his eloquent style, thrilled nearly every one present.

BISHOP DUDLEY.
Governor Kemper introduced Bishop Dudley as the first speaker after Major Scales. The Bishop said it was almost by a strange accident that he was able to be present at the meeting and to bring his offering to the memory of his childhood's friend. He said that he was a Virginian, and thus enter upon eternal life and blessedness.

LETTER FROM DR. MINNIGRODE.
The following letter from Dr. Minnigrode was read:
Richmond, August 2, 1875.

To his Excellency Governor James L. Kemper:
Dear Sir,—In my character as pastor of General Pickett and his wife I feel it my duty and my privilege to bring to you the news of his death, and to express my sympathy to you and to the people of this State.

General Pickett was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart. He was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart.

General Pickett was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart. He was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart.

General Pickett was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart. He was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart.

General Pickett was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart. He was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart.

General Pickett was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart. He was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart.

General Pickett was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart. He was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart.

General Pickett was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart. He was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart.

General Pickett was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart. He was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart.

General Pickett was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart. He was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart.

General Pickett was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart. He was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart.

General Pickett was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart. He was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart.

General Pickett was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart. He was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart.

General Pickett was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart. He was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart.

General Pickett was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart. He was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart.

General Pickett was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart. He was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart.

General Pickett was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart. He was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart.

General Pickett was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart. He was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart.

General Pickett was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart. He was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart, and he was a man of noble and generous heart.