Alarmed at the Wires. PHILADELPHIA COUNCILMEN SAY THEY CAN'T STAY UP—WIRES NOT INSULATED SAID TO EXPLAIN THE TROUBLE.

The recent accident in Philadelphia, caused by contact between the electric-light and telephone wires, has stirred up the commission and officials of that city, and steps are to be taken at once for the purpose of compelling at least the electric-light company to put its wires underground.

The Record, in explaining the trouble, says: destruction by a current of electricity, on Friday last, of a telephone instrument and switch-board in the office of the Local Telegraph Company, southeast corner of Third and Chestnut streets.

At the moment when the crossed wires of the telephone company and the Brush Company at Thirteenth and Market streets, the electric wire supplied a business house, was erected two years ago, and was not insulated. It was removed yesterday and properly-protected wire substituted.

At the moment when the crossed wires of the telephone company and the Brush Company at Thirteenth and Market streets, the electric wire supplied a business house, was erected two years ago, and was not insulated.

Information relative to the dangers of electricity is obtained with difficulty. The telephone and lighting companies have forbidden their employes to speak on the subject, and there is a general desire to hush up all mention of the recent specimen brick.

An investigation proceeding. The following is taken from the Philadelphia Times of yesterday: With a view of ascertaining the causes leading to the fire at Third and Chestnut streets, the fire department has inspected the electric light wires.

The Board of Fire Underwriters has given notice to owners and occupants of buildings desirous of introducing electricity to their premises that they must first make application to the companies in which they are insured for permission to do so, with a statement of the number and kinds of lamps to be used, to be subject to the approval of the inspector of the Board.

At the meeting of the Common Council yesterday, Mr. Morris, of the Eighth ward, presented a resolution instructing the Committee on Police and Fire-Alarm Telegraph to inquire into the dangers attendant upon the present system of electric lighting and to report the nature of such dangers, together with the best plans for removing or averting them as soon as practicable.

LOCAL MATTERS.

The West Point Disaster. THREE BODIES RECOVERED—THEORIES ABOUT THE CAUSE OF THE EXPLOSION—PERSONAL.

Many rumors are afloat as to the cause of the West Point explosion. Some think that the boiler which was running the donkey exploded, but this is not true, as it is known that it was working when the vessel drifted from the wharf.

Nothing is left of the vessel but the hull, which is an absolute wreck, and of no value except as iron.

The steamer Sue, from Baltimore, arrived at West Point yesterday morning. General-Manager Reuben Foster, of the York River Line, and a number of people who had friends or relatives on the vessel.
