FRIDAY, MAY 9, 1884.

Chas. Ford, the assassin of Jesse James, shot himself through the heart at Richmond, Mo., Tuesday of this week. No cause was assigned for the act.

Hugh Southard, of Winnipeg, is soon to start for London, England, to secure a loan for the construction of the Hudson's Bay railroad. He feels confident of success.

Appomattox Herald: We caught the following address from a letter that was hurrying through the mail on Tuesday:

To Chas. Rodgers I am bound; Carry me through safe and sound; To Arthurke P. O. early or late, To Dakota Ter. until it's a state.

Fred Douglass was punished at Pittsburg last week for marrying a white woman. The Colored Men's conference refused to make him even temporary chairman. And yet there is not among them a man of Douglass' force and ability.

Delegat Raymond has succeeded in having presented to the house a bill providing for double the present number of legislative representatives, and it is thought the same will become a law about the 13th inst. This is the right thing done; will give Ransom a member.

The office of the Herald published at Appomattox, Potter county, was partially destroyed by fire last week. The edges of the copy of the Herald received at this office were badly scorched, showing it had a narrow escape from the fiery element.

James R. Keene, the California millionaire, who went into Chicago, a few years since and raised a commotion among the wheat men, and finally drifted on to New York to overcome the railroad men, has just been kicked out of Wall street a "busted community." It is said that in the commencement Jay Gould predicted that Keene's $5,000,000 would be gone in ten years and that he would return to California in a box car! In this as in all other forms of gambling, it's a mere matter of time as to how soon the big fish will absorb the smaller ones.

Ella Wheeler the Wisconsin poetess, was, May-day, married in Milwaukee to one Mr. R. M. Wilcox, a Connecticut manufacturer of silver wear. It seems that Miss Wheeler has been a contributor to the St. Paul Dispatch, which paper closes a very pretty mention of the wedding, as follows: "Miss Wheeler is about thirty-three years of age, but has the youthful appearance of a girl of 18. She has always lived with her parents at Windsor, Wis., near Madison. She has written several volumes of poems, including "Shells," "Maurine and other Poems," and "Poems of Passion," and has been a voluminous magazine writer."

Gen. C. C. Howell of Belknap, Montana, an experienced miner, and a man who has visited the Coeur d'Alene mining region, familiarizing himself with the prospects there, was in St. Paul the other day and says that the mines are the most promising of any that have yet been opened, but that the rush was made there in the winter when there was no possible chance to do anything, and that experienced and interested miners are industriously starting desparing stories, in order to gain better feelings before sharp competition sets in. However, we think it a poor place for a man to go to at the present time. There are hundreds of men out of work there, and hungry.

Reform Temporarily Defeated.

The Morrison bill has been defeated in congress, and it may be presumed that Randall considers himself revenged for the defeat he sustained in the election of speaker and the organization of the house, even though he had to withdraw from his party and join with the Republicans to do it. The vote stood 159 to 155. Thirty-nine Democrats out of California, Connecticut, Illinois, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, New Jersey, West Virginia and Louisiana, (there being twelve members from Pennsylvania in the count including Randall, of course), voted with the Republicans. Thus, the result of three weeks discussion of the tariff question terminates, simply, in a disgraceful piece of jobbery between jealous Randall and the Republicans. There was certainly no chance for the measure to become a law under the circumstances, but had it passed the house it would have shown to the country that the majority of that body were in favor of reform on the question, but it would, perhaps, have been an open advantage to the Democratic party in the coming election, besides the augmenting of public sentiment in behalf of the measure itself. We believe that this matter of tariff reform is an inevitable issue before the people and will carry in the end, and think further that the Republican party and the Randall-rump are the gentlemen who are making the blunder, and not the leading Democrats. The fight will be carried into the Democratic convention which meets subsequent to the Republican convention and will be watched with exceeding interest, especially if Blaine is not put in nomination by the Republicans. Blaine, as president would, perhaps, heed the lessons now being taught and urge reform, but we do not think of any other Republican possessed of the integrity and force of character to take such a stand—against the money sharks of the east—if made president. Hence, he is then the best possible man to put up,—and if he is not nominated and the Democrats put up a good man and work the tariff question judiciously, they will get a tremendous large independent vote. In all honor be it said that Minnesota's acknowledged representatives, Messrs. Nelson, Strait, Wakefield and White voted for the bill, while Washburn, representing pine-land rings and other forms of monopoly and money interests, voted with his crowd—these gentlemen with the brass hats. The people must learn to take care of their best interests now and not be led about like a lot of foolish sheep. Let every voter consider that clarity begins at home, and down this needless and absurd taxation. Just think of it, the consumers of the country are paying all the way from 30 to 50 per cent. extra for the necessities of life and for clothing, while the agricultural class, the real producer, is forced to take whatever he can get for his goods as well as to pay these enormous rates. Under a different arrangement of affairs he would produce just as much and realize more from its return.

For The Ladies.

Few women know how to shed tears gracefully. When well managed they are effective. Aside from adding to the mute eloquence of the eyes, tears enhance a woman's beauty and overpower the giants whom pugilists can only master with difficulty. They should be brief, not too wet, and by no means bitter. They must rush to the eyelids, linger like dewdrops, and when they do fall the precipitation must be speedy. To be effective they must be premeditated. A whiff of the pungent smelling salts, a few grains of pepper or a slight irritation of the outer corners of the eyes with a match or toothpick will suffice for a copious flow, and if the lower, husband or father can be cornered, the shower will have the desired effect. But avoid a frown or a scowl. Manufacture a feeling of sadness, hold the breath to get up color, put judiciously, incline the head to one side, droop the body but not the shoulders, use a small soft-finish cambric handkerchief with both hands, taking care to rub the eyeball down and out. The object in rubbing out is to have the tears roll over the cheek. There is too much of the deer sentiment when they course down the innocent nose in piteous chase.

A correspondent relates that he saw a lovely woman of thirty-five come out of a store in the face and bearing of an ideal duchess. Her costume was of the richest and least showy materials. Her whole aspect proved her profession of refined taste. She got into a carriage in which sat two children and their nurse—a coarse featured woman of middle age, wearing the prescribed cap and apron of her employment. "Take a good look at that establishment," said the writer's companion; "the young lady came to this country about twelve years ago. She was poor and friendless. She got employment at housework, and then was made a nurse maid. She soon made up her mind that she could make a living at making the kind of infant's clothes that her duties familiarized her with. She began by getting work in a shop, but in a year had a flourishing business of her own. She married a man for love alone, but he also proved a good business partner, too. Together they built up a big trade, and are now very wealthy. It was her own carriage that you saw her in. The strange fact about the establishment, however, was that the nurse was the mistress's first employer. Never educated or bright, impoverishment has reduced her to the cap and apron her present mistress used to wear. Is the latter a shoddyite? Not a bit of it. She is a lady every way."

Stray Brick. Orange Judd, editor of the American Agriculturist for some thirty years, but unconnected with its business management for a year or two past, has lately retired from its editorial department and located in the west. He desires to gather a complete "Postal Card Album" of his old readers and friends, and requests them all to send him a postal giving him their present location and address, naming also, when convenient, the years in which they were his subscribers. Mr. Judd's address is Chicago, Illinois.

Fergus Journal: Michael Anderson, ex-sheriff and ex-member of the legislature from this county but now a boomer from Washington territory, called on us today. He will return to Whatcom, on Puget sound, in about six week, accompanied by Mrs. Anderson. Whatcom is a thriving place on the sound with big prospects, and Mr. Anderson has some fine property some miles inland, where he has just had a postoffice established named "Edwards"—for the possible next president. Alex Anderson is working at printing at Whatcom, and Ed. Lessick, the builder so well known to old settlers in Fergus, is there and has some good contracts.

Fargo Republican: A gentleman met Captain George Egbert last Friday, and taking a small silver watch charm from his pocket, asked if it belonged to him. The captain examined it, and when he saw the inscription on one side, "George Egbert, City Marshal, Hastings, Minn.," a look of astonishment spread over his countenance, and he asked the gentleman where he got it from. The gentleman replied that he had found it the evening before on Front street. The captain stated that the article had been taken from him over fourteen years ago in Hastings, which he has never seen since, and how it should happen to turn up in Fargo is one of these queer coincidents that can never be explained. Custer's wife is reported to have Brockenridge.

Wm. Slichter was sick with diphtheria last week, but is able to be out again. L. B. Smith has got most of his goods in place this week, and he has a fine stock on hand—all fresh and new. Go look them over. Attorney Walsh, of Milnor, is at present caring for his brother, R. T. Walsh, who was burned in the fire, but whom, we are glad to say is recovering under Dr. Ar buckle's treatment. Record: Since the fire Everdell & Valentine have their office in the small building next door to C. F. Wien's shoe shop. Todd's hardware store, is one door north of Wien's shop. The record office in C. M. Kaiser's building. F. J. Allstatt's shop at his residence opposite Parkin's livery. Dr. Fally's office will be at the court house. Dr. Ar buckle has moved into the house recently vacated by A. B. Matthews. O. B. Todd's family have moved out on his farm, and Tom O'Leary will occupy the Denny Hayes house. Bouticetta & Roberts are erecting a building, and will have it done in a few days.

From Butte Daily Review.

Miss Nellie Boyd is deservedly popular, and a favorite with Butte people. The lady ranks among the first of emotional actresses upon the American stage and is always supported by a strong company. This is the third company she has brought to Butte, and it is no disparagement to the others to say it is the strongest one. Last night was presented for the first time in Butte the four-act comedy-drama entitled "Solomon Isaacs," in which Miss Boyd appeared as Kate Medland, the greatly wronged but ever loving and devoted wife of an insanely jealous husband. The play affords but a limited scope for a display of Miss Boyd's extraordinary powers as an emotional actress, the interest in it being happily divided with others, among whom Solomon Isaacs, Mr. Hatch, and the villain Matthew Thirton, Frank Ellerslie, were central figures. Mr. Roberts, as Gilbert Medland, the husband of the unfortunate Kate, made a fine impression upon the audience as a careful, painstaking actor. Mr. Felton, as Sir Frederick Sidney, Mr. Norris as Winford, the magistrate, Miss Wilder as Laura Sidney, and Miss Rainford as Adah, all acquitted themselves creditably and showed the superior strength of the company. The orchestra, under the leadership of Mr. Clark, is an excellent one, and adds no little to the entertainment of the evening. The house was crowded, every seat being occupied, the audience appreciative, and the applause frequent and prolonged.

The company will appear at the opera house Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, 13th and 14th instant, in Solomon Isaacs and the great emotional drama, East Lynne.

The editor of Frank Leslie's Sunday magazine begs to call attention to the exceedingly valuable and interesting articles in the June number, to be published on May 10th. The article on "Crossing the Nuba Desert," by Alvan S. Southworth, details a personal experience, very interesting at this time. The already famous "Fading of the Twelve Apostles" is given in a translation from the Greek, made expressly for the magazine, by a well known classical scholar. The article on "The Apocrypha" was written at the request of several correspondents, and gives much information on a too late understood matter. The paper on the "Church of Old South" by the Rev. Geo. T. Rider, is from authoritative statements by the pastor of the movement, and a complete history of the work from its beginning to the present season. A carefully written historical and descriptive paper on "Some Representative Churches in Boston," by the Rev. Geo. T. Rider, is accompanied by illustrations of the new "Old South" church, Trinity (Episcopal) church, the Roman Catholic church, and the Sacred Music series, Francis Lenormant, in the Eminent Authors series; and Thomas J. Tinsley, in the Sunday school superintendent's series give a rich biographical character to this number.
