Tree-Bark Blankets.
They have trees for blankets in Ecuador, and they like them, too. They are fond of the firm touch of the bark against them as they sleep.
We would probably think they were "zero in covering," and we would doubtless wake up in a much bestiffened condition if we slept under a wood covering.
But the native Indians are most enthusiastic, according to J. Jameson, a traveler and lecturer, who has recently returned from those parts.
The blankets are made from the bark of a tree which is cut particularly thin. It is pounded and moistened and then pounded some more and put out into the sun to dry. And a most desirable and economical blanket it is, lasting anywhere from two to five years.

"Baby Mine," the success of two continents, direct from its record-breaking eight weeks' engagement at the Majestic Theatre Boston, will have its first local presentation at the Wahpeton Opera House on Tuesday, Sept. 9 under the direction of William A. Brady, Ltd. Laughter holding both sides but ill expresses the condition of an audience witnessing "Baby Mine." A young wife, in order to win back the affection of her husband, is persuaded by her friends to adopt heroic measures to bring about the return of the wanderer. Then comes a series of absurd mistakes and complications, which make the audience roar with delight. Go to the opera house and see how Mr. and Mrs. Jimmy Jinks, aided and abetted by the young wife, accomplishes the return of her husband, and if you simply don't scream at the spectacle consult a doctor. "Baby Mine" cannot be dealt with adequately in cold print, it is too funny.

Nickel in Soap-Making.
It will probably be news to the average abolitionist that the metal nickel is used in making his soap. And further, perhaps, he will be glad to learn that although the nickel, finely ground, is mixed with the other soap ingredients, the finished product contains none of it. This is so because the nickel acts as what the chemists call a catalyst; that is, its presence causes certain desirable changes to occur, although it takes no part in the chemical reaction. Offensive oils and those too thin for satisfactory use, when mixed with finely divided nickel and subjected to the action of a current of hydrogen, become deodorized and harder and suitable for the soapmaker's use. Cottonseed oil, for example, after the nickel-hydrogen treatment, makes a satisfactory soap.
