BOND, HELD AS AUTO TRUST THEFT HEAD

Era Bond, at Davenport, Iowa, late today fought to prevent his extradition to Chicago to face charges that he is one of the high "officers" of the syndicate that has dealt in stolen automobiles worth more than $1,000,000 in the last two years.

Chief of Police John Boettscher of Davenport, believing that Bond, known in Minneapolis as an investment broker and realty dealer, would use every possible means to defeat the extradition attempt, telephoned the Chicago police and urged that all evidence at their disposal be sent to Davenport, and used in the hearing late today.

Meanwhile C. A. Smith, head of the Northwestern Detective bureau, 412 Northwestern building, Minneapolis, remained in jail at Davenport, ready, he told Chief Boettscher to go to Chicago without a fight.

"I am confident that as soon as I get to Chicago and the insurance men explain my position to the state's attorney's office I shall be released immediately," said Smith.

Over the telephone today Chief Boettscher, in conversation with L. A. Root, Minneapolis agent of automobile insurance companies, confirmed The Journal's story of yesterday, that Mr. Root and other insurance men had vouched for the truth of Smith's story that the detective was working on the theft syndicate case for the insurance companies, that he had gained Bond's confidence months ago and that he had become a member of the syndicate in order to obtain needed evidence.

In Smith's grip when he was arrested was found a contract with six insurance companies employing him to run down the syndicate members.

"I am convinced Smith is just what he says he is," said Chief Boettscher today, "but it is not my place to let him go. That is up to the Chicago authorities."

A. M. Cary went to Davenport today as Bond's attorney. It is understood he will contend Bond also was a detective working on the case.

A FINE LEGISLATION RECORD

In a presidential campaign the party in power has the advantage of position—if it has a good record. It can "point with pride while the opposition can only "view with alarm;" and when the record is a substantial one, sounding the alarm is not too easy a task.

The record of an administration has two sides, the executive and the legislative. In the present campaign the democratic record of legislative achievement is a notable one. Chairman McCormick, of the democratic national committee, has just issued a summary of it, intended for progressive consumption. It contains a score of items:

1. The rural credits act which permits the farmer the same access to credit facilities that it enjoyed by the other elements of our citizenship.

2. The income tax law.

3. The federal reserve act, which measures up to the progressive requirements for "the issue of currency as a governmental function under a system whose control should be lodged with the government and should be protected from domination or manipulation by Wall street or by any special interest."

4. The good roads law, which extends federal aid to road building.

5. The trade commission law, which fully satisfied the progressive demand for a "strong federal administrative commission of high standing that shall maintain permanent, active supervision over industrial corporations engaged in interstate commerce.

6. An eight hour law applying to work done for the government as well as work done by the government.

7. An eight hour law applying to female employees in the District of Columbia, over which congress has jurisdiction.

8. An eight hour provision for post office clerks and carriers.

9. An eight hour provision applicable to civilians engaged in the manufacture of ordnance and powder for the government.

10. An eight hour provision as to the mining of all coal to be used by the navy.

11. The children's bureau law to promote the welfare of children and to devise means preventive of the necessities of parents retarding development of the child.

12. The federal commission law to investigate the entire subject of industrial relations.

13. The phosphorus match law to protect the health of workers in the match industry.

14. The Clayton anti-trust act embracing the regulations of the issuance of injunctions.

15. The department of labor law, creating a department with a secretary, who shall be a member of the President's cabinet.

16. The Smith-Lever agricultural education law, which responds to the progressive demand that measures be taken to lift "the least load of illiteracy from American youth" by "encouraging agricultural education and domestic schools."

17. The corrupt elections practices act.

18. Measures abolishing the commerce court and authorizing the interstate commerce commissions to make a physical valuation of railroads.

19. The Sherwood pension bill, which must meet the progressive idea of a "wise and just policy of pensioning American soldiers and children."

20. The parcels post law.

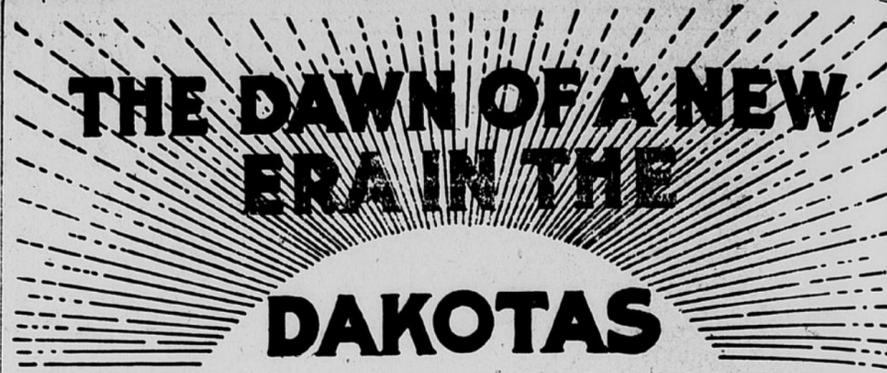

This is impressive. Standing on such a record of accomplishment as this, the democrats are entitled to feel confident. The attack upon their position must be made from another angle. The indications are that it is on the executive acts and policies of the administration that the heavy guns of the republicans will be brought to bear. But that is another story.

This is the Story of a Dakota Farmer whose Revenue is just as Large this year as it was last

The Black Rust or Hot Winds No Longer Have Any Terror For Him

At the present time he is building one of the finest barns in his section of the country. He did not start building until after the wheat fizzled out. The point that we wish to make however, is that the WHEAT FAILURE did not make a particle of difference in his plans.

Let him tell his story in a few words:

"My father was a WHEAT farmer. As far back as I can remember he planted wheat every year. Then he would watch weather conditions and worry. Of course, there were some good years, but it seemed to me as though most of them were poor. At least, we were always hard up and everything was mortgaged for every cent that we could borrow.

Fortunately for me I was sent away to the State Agricultural School and you know what that meant. It didn't take long for me to find out why we had always been so poor. When I got back home I tried to show my father some of these things, but do you suppose I could influence him to let loose of wheat? I couldn't make much headway at it.

Finally he just wore out with worry and the farm was left to me. It was still loaded down with mortgages, but I had long ago made up my mind what I would do when the responsibility rested on my shoulders.

Instead of planting all wheat I put in some barley, oats, rye, speltz, etc. I PLANTED SOME CORN and the second year I PUT UP A SILO. I have had corn in now for eleven seasons and there never has been a year but what it made good ensilage. My cattle are now known nearly all over the state. My sales are always well attended. I can sell more stuff than I can raise. With hogs and alfalfa and ensilage I don't worry any more about BLACK RUST. I am SAFE any year. The land father left me is all clear and I own THREE MORE ADJOINING QUARTERS.

I have never worked as hard nor worried as much as my father did. He had a hard time and when I think of the years of hard work he put in without any comfort of any kind I can't help feeling a tinge of regret. He didn't have the opportunity that I did when he was my age. After the habit of wheat farming was so firmly fixed he couldn't break away.

My land is not better than my neighbors. I have made money only because I DIVERSIFIED and quit betting on the weather. My neighbor was planning on building a small barn this fall but he had to give it up. MY REVENUE is just as big this year as it was last year. It seldom varies. That is why I am building NOW and anybody in the state can do just as well if they will only take the trouble to investigate and then DIVERSIFY.

Any of our Local Managers will gladly supply you with complete information on SILOS and their cost. We also will supply you with a free copy of our Dakota Hog Book or our book on Poultry Huses, Granaries, Machine Sheds or any kind of Farming Building.

BAKERIES TO INCREASE BREAD PRICES

An advance in the price of bread and other bakery goods, or reduce the cost of operation were the alternatives which confronted bakeries of the Twin Cities and brought about the merger of the Purity Baking Company, the Sanitary Bread Company, both of St. Paul and the Chicago bakery of Minneapolis, Timothy Foley, president of the merger organization announced yesterday.

The merger completed Friday involves property valued at more than $1,500,000, for which the new company, which will be known as the Flour State Baking company, is capitalized. The capital stock is all paid up, Mr. Foley said.

The high cost of ingredients compelled the merger if bread prices are to be maintained at the present standard, Mr. Foley said. With wheat at $1.50 a bushel; sugar, lard, milk, butter and everything else used in a bakery at top prices, it is said profits have been eaten up.

Many of the bakeries of the Twin Cities according to Mr. Foley, had been urging for several weeks a boost in the price of the loaf as well as other bakery products, but the larger concerns have opposed it, and it is hoped that economy of production made possible by the merger will obviate the necessity of an increase in prices.

The new combination will have

CORN IS KING

The Commercial Club of Fargo, recognizing the fact that this year of all years "corn is king," and that the promotion of the corn industry in North Dakota is essential to the agricultural interests of the State, has concluded to offer prizes for the first best and second best ten ears of corn exhibited at any and every corn show held in the State of North Dakota. The first prize being $3.00, second prize $2.00. These prizes are offered contingent on the fact that the winners send in their exhibit to the Fargo Commercial Club to be exhibited during the Tri-State Convention in January, the Club agreeing to pay transportation charges on same. Grand sweep stake prizes will be offered at this convention for the first and second best ten ears of the entire group. First prize being $15.00 second prize $10.00.
