DRESS AND A CAP FROM SERGE SUIT

Garment Clinic, Vaughn, Shows Ladies How to Save Used Garments.

The Community Home Economics club at Vaughn held a most interesting day's session at the ranch home of Mrs. Fred Couch yesterday both morning and afternoon. The ladies numbering 16 arrived early, each bringing some garment to the remodeling clinic for suggestions and assistance. The problems were interesting because they were so varied.

One of the most clever achievements was demonstrated in the making of a good-looking school dress for a 16-year-old from a man's serge suit. The man in the case was presented with a cap made from the remaining fragments by the same nimble fingers. "This cap," he declared, "suits right. I'll always have mine made to order after this."

SNOW HELD THEM BACK MANY HOURS

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Sipe who have been visiting relatives at St. Joseph, Mo., since the Christmas holidays seemed to be rather unfortunate in choosing the day upon which to start their return journey to Great Falls. They left St. Joseph on the thirteenth and Mr. Sipe thinks that this, in a measure, had something to do with their trip.

Everything went lovely until they reached Lincoln, Nebraska, when a big snow storm was encountered causing them to be delayed there from 2:20 a. m. to 8:45 a. m. of the 14th and they did not reach Radaw, just 64 miles west of Lincoln, until 11:45 p. m. At Radaw they were snowbound at 7:30 the morning of the 16th. The drift across the track at Radaw was an enormous one. Three men attempted to tunnel thru the drift to make a way for the train. An engine and a box car tried to get thru and a snow plow from Lincoln tried to get thru but they all got stuck and the train was unable to get past until the rotary snow plow

A STRIPED BLOUSE FOR THE NEW SUIT

By ELOISE.

In the olden war days of 1917-18, when the whole cry was conserve I should have introduced this blouse as the very thing to make your last season's suit look new. Now, however, with the war getting farther and farther away there will be new suits instead of made-over ones and so I must find another way to tell of the smartness of such a stunning shirtwaist.

But feally when a blouse with broad navy and white stripes in handkerchief linen is pictured there is scarcely any need to tell anyone that it is smart. Striped blouses have always been smart. But they have not always been made of washable linen. Silk has always been the most accepted collar blouse. This one has a two-in-one collar which may be worn high or low with a sailor tie to finish it when worn low. It will make an effective finishing touch for the new spring suit or it may be kept for sports wear in the summer and then milady can indulge in the whim of having a parasol of the same material.

AMERICA

America was the first country in the world to give formal, official recognition to women in the construction of its war machine, and to recognize immediately upon the declaration of war, its woman power as one of its assets. The women rallied at once to the call, and the gathering together of the woman forces of the country argued an amazing sense of nationality. Could it have happened if here had not already been a growing consciousness everywhere that this great enterprise for democracy was a national effort and, if an individual or a society of a state, is going to do its best, it must act with and under the government.

One of the great lessons of the war—women—has been the value of training. It is in the industrial and economic field that the world war will mark the most far-reaching transformation in the condition of women. From casual to permanent, from unskilled and unimportant, to trained and essential factors in the economic life of the world, this will be the effect of the war.
