

SUBSCRIPTIONS STILL FAR BELOW THE NEED

Committee on Victory Loan Appeals to People to Save the Reputation of the City by Buying Bonds More Liberally and at Once.

There was some progress made yesterday by the Victory loan committee in gathering subscriptions to the loan but the amount of progress was not large. At noon there had been only $283,650 accounted for by the committee and the subscriptions are coming slow and are too small, in the opinion of the committee. One man who works for a salary, after being permitted to look over a few sheets yesterday by the committee, leaned back in his chair as a smile spread over his face. "Why if I were to look on those sheets long, I'd fade away in a dream and imagine I was a modern Croesus," said he. "There's one fellow who has taken a nickel's worth of bonds and he's worth 50 times what I am, but on his basis, I have two-bits invested in the Victory loan."

The case, according to Chairman Harry Jaeger, typifies the condition generally. The people are trying to escape too easily. They want to get away on one bond of $50 or on two bonds when they ought to think of not less than 10 times as much. The people who work for wages are doing that well and those who have ability to buy ought, in the opinion of the committee, show enough interest to buy all they can afford. It simply means, one of the committeemen said, that the committee will have to go over the same territory again and call upon scores and scores of people to raise the amount of their subscription to two or three times what they made it. The railroad employees are not showing the interest they did on former loans and the committee yesterday at noon had received a report of only $14,500 from the railroad committee while on former loans they went up around the $100,000 mark. The railroad employees now are government employees and it is believed the final report will show they will maintain their former record. One thing is true in connection with the railroad forces. There are not as many of them working now as there was when the former loans were called for.

The committee is plugging away conscientiously to get the funds needed and it has not lost faith in Great Falls. It believes there will be a rally and that the people of the city will maintain the reputation by putting the loan over in good shape.

The forces at the B. & M. smelter continue to force their total upward and yesterday it went to $65,600 with a percentage for the entire plant of 69 compared to 65 for the previous day. The standing of departments at the smelter at the close of work yesterday is shown in the accompanying table:

THEY ARE COMING ONCE EACH YEAR

Shorthorn Association Members Vote to Make Great Falls Spring Sale Center.

Great Falls was selected as the permanent place for holding the annual spring sale of the Montana Shorthorn Breeders' association, at the meeting of members of the association following a banquet at the Park hotel last night. The annual fall sale of the association goes to Bozeman during Farmers' week at the Montana state college.

Thirty men and women were seated at the association dinner at which President Carl E. Axtell of Salesville presided. Following the banquet, and the after-dinner talks, the association went into executive session for one of the most important and enthusiastic meetings it has ever held. Decisions were reached including the permanent placing of the association sales, which members confidently predict will make Shorthorn history in Montana.

After-dinner talks were made by Dr. W. J. Butler of Helena, state veterinarian; R. N. Gygendahl, head of the Dakota Farmer livestock service; Dr. E. H. Riley, livestock specialist in the extension service of the agricultural college; Harry L. Summers of Salmon, Ida., former secretary of the association; C. C. Davis, editor of the Montana Farmer; Wayne W. Wheeler, secretary of the Shorthorn Breeders' association; Mrs. Carl E. Axtell, Ben Steele of Great Falls, and Henry J. Plumb, livestock representative of the Montana Farmer. The business session brot out lively discussions.

The Shorthorn Breeders' association last night voted an increase of dues to cover more active operations, and laid plans for a vigorous membership campaign covering the owners of registered Shorthorn breeding stock in the state, numbering 350 men.

It was decided that hereafter no consignors should be permitted to sell stock once entered, at private treaty before the sale. The association voted to duplicate the state fair awards for the boys' and girls' feeding classes where winners show predominance of Shorthorn blood. Wives of members of the association were voted into honorary membership. Plans were discussed for holding only inspected sales in the future, where entries would be subjected to close inspection as to condition, age and general fitness to represent the breed before permitted to go into the sale ring.

This morning at 10, visiting Shorthorn men who are still in the city will accept the invitation of Chief Trodick of the Great Falls fire department to visit the headquarters and witness a drill.

Informal expressions of opinion around the hotels indicated that the Shorthorn men were generally well pleased with their sale, and enthusiastic over the treatment accorded them in Great Falls. It was significant that practically every individual sold at the sale went to head either a range or grade herd, which makes the average attained a satisfactory one, since the breeders themselves were not competing for the stock.

Authentic Reports of Loan Drive in the State Are Lacking

Holter of Helena, state chairman of the Victory Liberty loan drive, was without additional reports tonight of the progress of the subscription in the state but expressed confidence that the quota, $11,000,000 would be reached.
