She Charges Husband Married to Escape Military Service

Special to The Daily Tribune.
 Roundup, May 20.—Alleging that Mark Mikovich, of Klein, married her solely in order to escape military duty and that her married life was made unbearable by his actions, his 16-year-old wife has started suit for divorce in the district court. She states that she was given $350 to furnish a home with in June, 1918, when the couple were married and has received nothing since the husband beating her and accusing her falsely on several occasions since. She says she was also induced to sign a paper waiving any claims for support, and that the husband finding that his marriage did not exempt him from the draft decided his property to others to keep her from getting it.
 George Lite, also a resident of Klein was haled into court to show reason why he should not pay costs of a suit instituted by his wife. It having been shown that he had paid no attention to the court's orders, he was given a five day jail sentence to impress on him the necessity of obeying the instructions of the district judge in the matter.

Plentywood, May 19.—At the May meeting of the board of county commissioners a bridge across the Poplar creek at Seips was decided upon. This bridge has been badly needed for the last five years by farmers who wanted to save a long haul to their nearest town. Soon after he took office county Surveyor Scott Hart investigated the needs of the north country and finally recommended that the board allow the bridge at once.

LINCOLN COUNTY TO VOTE ON TAX LEVY FOR ROAD BUILDING

Progressive Action Taken at Request of Good Roads Association

Special to The Daily Tribune.
 Libby, May 20.—A representative gathering of Libby businessmen and property owners met recently in the Libby hotel lobby and organized the Kootenai Valley Good Roads Association. E. N. Alley, was elected president of the organization, W. M. Cady, vice president and J. B. Farris, secretary treasurer. The dues were placed at $1 per month and plans were made for launching an active membership campaign among good roads enthusiasts, to secure 250 members in Libby.

The most important matter taken up at the meeting was the proposal that the county commission be petitioned by resolution to call a special election to authorize a special levy for road building. In response to this resolution and also to one from the Tobacco Valley Good Roads Association of Eureka, the commissioners called a special election, which will take place August 4, to vote on the question of adding five mills to the 1919 and 1920 taxes. It is understood that all the money thus raised will be expended on building a thru road from the Flathead county line at Stryker touching Eureka, Rexford and connecting with Warland and thence down the Kootenai river thru Libby, Troy and going out at Leonia, on the Idaho state boundary. This will make a stretch of 150 miles of road, and the need every property owner in Lincoln county has felt since the county was organized for a road to connect the two ends of the county has now resulted in a practical, concrete plan for building the river highway. The new law permitting a special levy on vote of the people solved the problem. Although Lincoln county cannot legally borrow any more money to build roads, or any other purpose, the people are permitted to reach down into their pockets and pay for new roads.
 The five mill levy will raise about $35,000 a year, or $70,000 in two years. If the county secures federal aid, dollar for dollar, it will be able to make $140,000 to build the road and connect with Warland by a bridge probably at Yarpell, where the narrow canyon of the Kootenai river can be bridged at comparatively small cost.

BELGIAN WOMEN WAITED YEARS FOR LIBERTY ONLY TO DIE IN RELIEF ATTACK

Special to The Daily Tribune.
 Plentywood, May 20.—Helena looks good "us" were the greetings which Sergeants Ralph Paske, Pasku Popesku, Musician Fred Kranzer and Corporal Spike O'Donnell, extended to their many friends who met them upon their return after serving 20 months in the army. I traveled all thru France and Belgium on foot," spoke up Popesku, which also better than riding in box cars, got to be rather monotonous after a bit, and let me say right here, that should they offer me a colonelcy in Gay army today, with headquarters in the Ypres, they could tempt me not."
 Paske, who before entering the army was deputy clerk and recorder here, tells of many interesting things which he had seen and taken part in while fighting in the Yps Schelde sector in Flanders one of the objectives of the 91st was a little Belgian town which had been in the hands of the Germans for four years. The Americans shelled the town causing the Boche to evacuate, and which the Americans immediately proceeded to move into. The troops were stationed in the town, and as Paske tells it: "Sergeant Smith of C. company and myself were out scouting for a good place to sleep when we came upon a home displaying a large placard written in English, requesting that we as Americans not molest the property or enter the building. We complied with the request and went out to the barn, but upon trying the door found that it, too, was locked, being under the impression that the feet belonged to some German snipers who were either playing possum or else oversleeping their furlough.
 "Smith took a kick at the first pair of feet but there was no response. We waited about five seconds, and I then reached down and jerked the covers off. We found five dead Belgian women. Their bodies were in a horrible condition, two of them having no heads and the breasts of one being entirely torn off. I covered them up as soon as I could and we moved up into the hay loft, all the while cursing the Boche, for the inhuman treatment which they had caused these women to undergo, firm in our conviction that German Kultur was the cause.
 "Next morning we encountered a native who lived in the vicinity, and as Smith talked a little German and I still less French, we finally managed to find out how they met their fate.
 "For four long years they had undergone all the cruelties and sufferings which only a German knows how to inflict, and on the day that we started our bombardment of the town, they had gone to the attic of the house, where we found them. The pathetic part of it all is that they had suffered and toiled for four years, looking forward to the time when they should once more be free—and then to meet death at the hands of their liberators."

Special to The Daily Tribune.

He was among the first soldiers to go across and served his time as a driver of an ammunition wagon hauling the ammunition up to the guns at night. He had some very thrilling experiences during the big drive against the Huns and received a severe wound in his leg from shrapnel. He was hit in three places, but after spending some time in the hospitals he is now as good as over. Mr. Toole spent a few days here looking after his farm interests and then left Saturday for North Dakota where he will join his wife and visit with relatives before getting back to civilian routine again.

MONTANA SEDITION LAW IS UPHELD BY THE SUPREME COURT

Gives Unanimous Opinion in Case of Ben Kahn—May Apply to W. F. Dunn Case

Helena, May 20.—The constitutionality of the Montana sedition law is upheld in an opinion handed down by the state supreme court today in the case of the state against Ben Kahn, who was convicted of sedition in the district court of Carbon county and who appealed from the judgment and from an order denying his motion for a new trial. Both the judgment and the order are affirmed by the supreme court opinion, which was prepared by Associate Justice W. L. Holloway and concurred in by Chief Justice Theodore Brantly and Associate Justice H. Cooper. While the opinion of the court handed down today applies only in the Kahn case, it is the belief of many local lawyers that the conclusions of the court in this instance will also apply in other sedition cases wherein appeals are on file and in which the constitutionality of the law is attacked, among them being that of William F. Dunn, editor of the Butte Bulletin.

C., as one of the five delegates from Montana to the republican women's national convention having been selected to represent northern Montana by the national committee of the republican party in Montana. Mrs. Jennie is a cousin of Senator Philander S. Knox and has another cousin who is a captain in the U. S. navy. She expects to meet the other delegates from Montana upon her arrival in Washington. While Mrs. Jennie has always been a republican, she was, nevertheless, bitterly opposed to Jeannette Rankin and took occasion to remark as she boarded the train here for Washington, "Well, Jeannette has nothing on me now."
