

WELCOME TO SOLDIERS

H. Thomas of 21st Engineers Relates How East Greeted Returned Heroes.

Royal welcomes to the U. S. A. are returned overseas soldiers by the east, according to a letter received by E. Lamere from H. H. Thomas, a former railroad man in Great Falls, who served in the 21st engineers and has done much service in France.

The letter was written from Camp Evans and dated June 9. Extracts from it are as follows:

"We arrived at Boston last evening and did not dock until 10 a. m. today. They sure showed us a good time. Two ferry boat loads of men, women and children, between 200 and 300 on each came out to meet us. They cruised around us for about 30 minutes, throwing fruit, candy, gum and doughnuts around to us.

"We walked off the gang plank into a big warehouse here. The Red Cross gave us hot coffee and cinnamon rolls; Salvation army gave us telegrams and sent our messages free; the wish welfare board gave us picture cards of the President Grant (the ship went over on and returned on) and at them free; the Knights of Columbus Y. M. C. A. gave us one package each, cigarettes, gum and candy and a morning paper.

"A big crowd greeted us when we reached one-half block to a real train coaches, the first we have seen in months. As we passed thru the railroad yards they tied down the whistles about 100 engines, people could hardly hear anything. It was that way all along the line, people within one block of the track would wave at us and when the train stopped they came up and shook hands with us. It was one continuous round of pleasure for us from 11:30 to 11:30, when we arrived at the camp.

"We do not know how long we will be camp here, as we are broken up here and sent to every cantonment in the United States. Jack Harley goes to Camp Grant. I go to Camp Russell, Vermont.

"You cannot realize how good it seems for us to set foot on good old U. S. soil once more. This regiment was the first to leave. Left Brest at 5 p. m., May 28, only two days of rough sea and no weather on the ocean."

State Which Lynched Leo Frank Cannot Protest Massacres

Chicago Tribune Service. Atlanta, Ga., June 16.—Addressing a mass meeting here, called to protest against the alleged massacre of Jews in Poland and of the East European countries, Hooper Alexander, United States district attorney declared that the lynching of Leo Frank after his death sentence for the murder of Mary Hagen deprived Georgians of the right to protest against the alleged acts of the Poles. Mr. Alexander told the audience the people of Georgia could not voice a protest against Poland without the possibility of a reply that "we no longer have any right to protest against a murder, since the slaying here some recent years ago of a man of the Jewish race for a crime of which he probably was innocent. Not until the actual murderer has been impeached, not until the man who actually committed the crime for which one man was taken and killed by his brothers, has been convicted, can the people of Georgia protest against Poland's crimes without a reply of what have we done right wrong."

BUSINESS SHOWS HINT OF REVIVAL

Hamerstrom Says People Who Wait to Build Will Lose; Gas Company to Expand.

There is a distinct evidence of an up-trend in business over the country. People have become convinced that the level of prices now prevailing will continue for a considerable period and building is beginning to start up; the purchase of materials, even in the limited quantities, is proving a stimulant and all thru the cycle of business affairs, there is coming a new life, in the opinion of A. Burt Hamerstrom, president of the Great Falls Gas company and one of the well known consulting engineers of Chicago. Mr. Hamerstrom came to Great Falls to look over the Great Falls property for Mr. Baehr left for his home Monday morning.

"Waiting for lower prices in materials for those who want to build is a losing game," said Mr. Hamerstrom. "At least, that is the view which Mr. Baehr and his associates take of the matter and we propose to not be among the losers from that cause. Just before I started west, I talked with Mr. Baehr on that particular point and in brief, he said that the companies in which he is interested will this year be just as busy in building and expansion work as possible and they will be limited only when the needs have been met or by any situation that might arise because of credit conditions. In other words, public utilities, as all know, do much of their building and expansion work on borrowed capital and when the money market is prohibitive as to rates, or money is scarce, good business methods suggest that utilities do not unduly expand and load themselves with debt, because in the ultimate analysis every cent must be paid by collecting it as charges for service by the utility making the expansion. So the people are best served when company management keeps that fact squarely before its eyes and is guided by that policy."

"With Mr. W. A. Berke, manager of the gas company in your own city, I have been going over the local situation with the view of reporting to Mr. Baehr and after the report has been received, the extensions which commenced themselves here certainly will be ordered in Great Falls. It may be accepted as a general statement of our policy that we are anxious to keep just a little ahead of the building development of the city and anyone who visits Great Falls just now and notes the tendency toward the building development in the residential section will fully realize that our reports must bring orders for considerable extension work if we live up to that policy."

"This being my first visit to Great Falls, I no doubt would be considered remiss in my duty if I did not tell how the city impresses me. And on that point, I am sure if I did state fully my views, I would be accused of exuberant enthusiasm by some and probably would incur the jealousy of some other cities. But without attempt to be flattering, to me Great Falls presents one of the most promising cities that it has been my pleasure to meet. You have laid the foundation along proper lines and there need be no worry about the future. The city will grow and as it grows, the Great Falls Gas company wants to grow and meet the demand that is bound to come for gas."

"With our company as with all other companies, the requirements in laying the basis for success the element of service is the big fact and we not only want to keep that as our guide but we want to live it in our every day work. We have tried in the past to give Great Falls good gas service, for example, but if we cannot improve the service from year to year, then we haven't gotten our organization properly adjusted. And so in passing, I may say as we grow with your city, we expect to grow not only in the good graces of the people but also to grow in ability to give them service that satisfies."

Fire Destroys Hotel and Barn at Malta

Special to The Daily Tribune. Malta, June 16.—The greater part of Malta experienced a narrow escape from destruction by fire last evening when the Malta hotel and the North Side livery barn were burned. The fire started in the barn and spread to the hotel which had been partially destroyed by a former fire. A strong wind made control of the flames difficult and it proved a difficult task to confine it to these buildings. The Great Northern depot force greatly assisted in subduing the flames by use of the company's pump and hose. The loss upon the livery stable is estimated at $9,000 with no insurance. Neither was there any insurance upon the hotel.

ARMY LIFE OF VAST BENEFIT TO YOUNG MEN OF AMERICA

Men Have Returned With More Initiative, Responsibility and Sense of Loyalty.

Chicago Tribune Service. Chicago, June 16.—No one can estimate the advantages the young manhood of America has gained from service in the army, the navy or the marines. If any man is in a position to know this, it is Major Reynolds, who has general supervision of the work of finding jobs for the discharged fighters of the central district.

"I have been traveling all thru the middle western states and getting reports from all the large cities," Major Reynolds said in Chicago today, "and its the same story everywhere. Military training has been an incalculable blessing to our men."

"Employers everywhere tell the same story. The man comes from the army or the navy with a trained initiative, responsibility and a sense of loyalty that are going to bear fruit in the way of business success."

"This fact is so marked among the officers, Major Reynolds says, that it has been found necessary to establish a branch at Washington especially to find jobs suitable for their increased abilities."

"Our army was full of men who had got more personal development out of their two years in the service than they could have gotten out of six years in civil life," he went on.

"Many of these men held poor jobs before the war. They hadn't really got started. Now they come back to us, magnificently developed physically and mentally, fit for high class executive positions. You can't ask a man like that to go back to his job or anything like it."

"But the problem is to find him the sort of position his added powers fit him for. This can be done, Colonel Woods decided, by a branch at Washington which will act as a clearing house for high class positions for officers all over the country. It's just been started but we expect big things from it soon."
