

Week in the Churches

"Toward Evening," or Luke's Masterpiece

By Dr. A. G. McVay of Boston, in Sermon Sunday Evening at First Congregational Church.

Dr. McVay is traveling through the United States on a lecture trip and was in Great Falls Sunday for a visit with his brother, John McVay, of the Royal Milling company.

Text: Luke XXIV: 29. "Abide with us: for it is toward evening, and the day is far spent." It is not with a desire to bring you to a new evening, but as year by year pilgrims journey to the Vatican and art galleries of the Orient, and there gaze upon the old masterpieces which are ever new because of the humanity in them, so would I have you look with me at the old masterpieces in the life of our Lord.

Three days have passed since the crucifixion. Two followers of the Man of Galilee are wending their weary way from Jerusalem to Emmaus. But the weariness of the journey is inappreciable to the weariness which they feel at heart. Great disappointment has overwhelmed them. Their hearts have been ruthlessly crushed to earth.

But, once again I would have you look at this picture. The sun is sinking behind the rocky hills of old Palestine or has already found its rest far beyond the great sea. Above the heads of the travelers is the after-glow of the eventide. "Hath not the heart within thee burned, O evening? Tell me, and holy hours, I need not tell you who penned the lines.

"The curfew tolls the knell of parting day, The lowing herd winds slowly o'er the lea; The plowman homeward plods his weary way, And leaves the world to darkness and to me."

It is toward evening: what of the day? Did you ever on Saturday night or on Sunday morning look back over the vanished week with a view of determining the worth of each day? Why not mark them on a scale of one hundred? But if you mark one 75 and another 100 on what ground will you make the difference? Perhaps Monday was a day of hard work; Tuesday a day of pleasure; Thursday you passed a good examination in one of your studies; Sunday may have brought you a new vision of the goodness of God and the love of Jesus. Friday you recall having gone out of your way to do some one a kindness. What then is the true scale upon which to mark these days? No matter how selfish we may have been, viewing the past the good must predominate. We instinctively feel that the day when we realize some growth in character or render some real service should be ranked the highest.

The same is true when we view all our past days. What days mark the high tide? It is those days when we had an awful good time? What a shame it would be to mark such a day 100 simply because from sunrise our own cup of happiness was full and we had no regard as to whether those about us might or might not be weary and sad.

God's ways are not our ways and his thoughts are not our thoughts. Possibly his estimate of the worth of our days and deeds may be very different from ours. He who sees the total outcome of every act may estimate highly things which are apparently trivial to us.

Howard Bridgeman says that God's interest in our record is not unlike that of a Christian mother who keeps a record of her boy's progress away at school. In an early autumn I received a letter from a Christian mother in which she said: "Rob is going away to school this fall. It is hard to have him go but I believe it is for the best." Other letters followed periodically. One said, "Rob is getting along nicely in his studies." Another, "Rob is studying music." And yet another, "The boy is getting to be quite an athlete." But one day a letter came in the same familiar hand-writing which began, "I can hardly write for my tears of joy. Rob has become a Christian." So it seems to me that I have been interested in all that we do, in our business, in our pleasures, in our homes, in our school work, and all. But that which brings joy in Heaven is when the angels echo around the throne, "Rejoice for the Lord brings back his own."

When we think of the doors of our hearts, our homes, and our lives and bid the Savior come in "Abide with us." It is toward evening has that day come in your life? But the day is gone. There is little to be gained by the backward glance. We may be compelled to say with Bret Harte, "O'er the trackless past somewhere, Lie the days of our tropic youth, For with Thyson, "The tender grace of a day that is dead, Will never come back to me."

We may with more profit say, it is toward evening: what of tomorrow? A professor in a certain college said to a band of students one evening: "Young friends, if I were not a Christian, I should become one before I slept." Sometimes the evening of the day is the evening of life. Ah, let us not hurry the mistakes and sins of today into tomorrow. "Today is the day of salvation." And the Master is as willing to accept our invitation tonight as he was the invitation of the two weary travelers at Emmaus one ago.

There is one significant fact seems worthy of mention here. It is this: when these two invited Jesus to remain they did not know that he was the divine Son of God. He had conversed with them, taught them, and in some way brought light and comfort. He had opened to them the scripture and, as is always the case, opened to them a new and brighter world.

Have you ever when under a heavy load unburdened yourself to some larger-hearted man, not sure about the situation perfectly and who gave you the conviction that it would all come out all right? That must have been the feeling of the two travelers at Emmaus that evening. And while they felt your need of one with more than mortal power to whom you might go in your hour of deepest need? He found the two down-hearted and discouraged and gave them just the help which they needed.

But such a tide as moving seems asleep, Too full for sound and foam, When that which drew from out the boundless deep Turns again home.

Twilight and evening star, And after that the dark! And may there be no sadness of farewell, When I embark.

For 'tho' from out our bourne of time and place, The flood may bear me far, I hope to see my pilot face When I have crossed the bar."

WILL INSTRUCT SOCIETY AGENTS

Court of Honor Plans Course of Study for Field Men, State Manager Announces.

State Manager F. W. Farmer of the Court of Honor for Montana has called a meeting of the Montana Fieldmen's association to organize a school of instruction. The drive for new members is very satisfactory, and Montana will loom up at the end of this Silver Jubilee campaign one of the producing states of the society. Great Falls district court is leading all other courts in the state in writing new business. District Manager F. J. Liesenfeld has as his assistant Special Deputy Alex Brown, who is making a splendid record this month in writing new members. Special Deputy Rudolph J. Joseph has just signed up a contract and is the latest member to "get into harness" in the field department.

Manager Liesenfeld wants to thank the deputy forces and members for the loyal support they have given him during the last three months. Sixty-seven was the total increase of new members for that time. Neighbor Farmer is giving a list of prizes for the members who secure applications for the deputies. Don't fail to see him and learn what you can win in this membership campaign.

WOODMEN SELECT CAMPAIGN TEAMS

Membership Drive Starts With Fourteen New Members in First Initiation.

The Woodmen membership campaign started off with flying colors Tuesday night, when fourteen members were added to the camp and instructed in the campaign. The attendance at this meeting was the largest of any held yet this year and was full of pep all the way through.

Six teams of twenty-eight men each, have been selected to take charge of the campaign from now until January 1st. Each man has pledged himself to get a new member or forfeit one dollar.

District Manager Pater is now in the campaign and has declared himself ready either day or night to co-operate with any neighbor in securing a new recruit for the local camps. At present (Great Falls camp is the fourth lodge in the state in point of membership and it only requires 150 new members to make it the second lodge in the state. If every neighbor will co-operate with Manager Pater this goal will be reached by 1920.

Neighbor Pater can be reached by calling phone 9703 or 7201. Call him up and give him the name of a friend who should be a member of the W. O. W. A large class will be ready for initiation at the regular meeting and all neighbors are urged to be present and have a part in the campaign.

The new Woodmen drill team on Tuesday night and added very much to the initiatory service. They received many compliments on their good work. The team is planning to give a dance in the near future, the funds from which will be used to aid in purchasing new uniforms.

Neighbor Paul Hogen was at the piano and his music added life to the drill team work.

RAILROAD WOMEN ENJOY BANQUET

To celebrate their third anniversary the ladies society of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers gave a banquet on Friday evening, October 10, at their local hall.

Mrs. Matilda Lyberger, instructor from the grand lodge of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, was the honor guest.

A most enjoyable time was spent by all present at an excellent dinner which was served. Credit for the success of the affair is due to Mrs. Luella Dumont and Mrs. Fern Bruce, members of the social committee. After the banquet the evening was spent in dancing.

Equal credit for the progress of the society since its organization is due to the following ladies who have at some time been at the helm, Mrs. Ruth Mutz, Mrs. Grace Sutz and Mrs. Ida Tanner.
