Prominent Indiana Farmer Cured of Rheumatism by Taking Number 40 for the Blood

Newburgh, Indiana, April 17, 1919. "I suffered with rheumatism for several years and tried numerous remedies with little or no benefit. Number 40 For the Blood was recommended to me and I have used in all six bottles and am entirely cured, and have had no symptoms of the disease for over two years." Frank Stacer, Number 40 encourages rapid elimination of morbid and unhealthy products used in the treatment of chronic enlargements of glands, in blood troubles, chronic enlargements of the spleen and liver. Encourages the flow of bile and corrects catarrhal conditions. Use with advantage in eczema and skin eruptions of whatever character. Made by J. C. Mendenhall, Evansville, Ind. 40 years a druggist. ### VARIED SUCCESS BY ELK HUNTERS

Two Parties Get Full Quota, One Other Out of Luck; Narrow Escape for Deforest.

Different brands of luck attended different parties of hunters going from Great Falls into the mountains last week after elk. Of the three squads of big game men who returned Sunday and Monday after spending nearly a week in the mountains one registered in without having obtained a single specimen of the big animals while every man in the other parties obtained his quota of one elk.

The men who returned without being able to exhibit a pair of antlers were Fire Chief A. J. Troddick, Dr. C. F. Coulter, Dr. R. Severance, Major Max Sprague and Harry Troddick, who spent five days on Elk creek without getting a fair shot at the animal from which that stream takes its name. This party, however, secured its full quota of deer, one of the latter being shot for every day the men were in the mountains.

Those who have a more cheerful tale to tell are Byron Deforest, Jake Falkenstein and R. K. West, who, with Earl Ogden, Augusta banker, spent six days on Straight creek, 40 miles north-west of Augusta. Each of the men in this party obtained an elk, although Deforest did not get what he went after until the last day of the hunt. Mr. Falkenstein's elk was a splendid bull, but through a peculiar accident he was unable to mount the head. The animal was shot on a rocky cliff and rolled down for a considerable distance, the head and antlers being so badly broken in the fall that they could not be preserved.

According to Falkenstein and West, Mr. Deforest had a narrow escape one day while away from the camp alone. They declare that it was only by virtue of his fortitude and shooting ability that he was brought back intact. As the story goes Deforest was crossing a mass of windfalls and had reached a place where a single log offered the only way out, and as the hunter mounted one end of the log a giant porcupine mounted the other. Man and porcupine were going in opposite directions, and there was not room to pass. Neither intended to yield—the man because he couldn't and the porcupine because he wouldn't. Deforest admits that the porcupine double itself in size while navigating its end of the log.

The situation was bad enough before the brute began to grow so outrageously, but when it hove up in front with its armament in place and with the apparent intention of passing between Mr. Deforest's legs something had to be done. Afterwards his friends were unkind enough to offer impertinent comments on the decision reached by Mr. Deforest, but he declares that he knew, even before he shot, that it wasn't a bear.

SOL ROTHENBERG IN AT THE KILLING

His Party Gets Big Bull Elk and Noon Dinner Club Gets a Big Feed—No Bull.

"We got an elk," said Sol Rothenberg, proprietor of the Crown jewelry store.

"How's that?" inquired Nate Wertheim, the clothier, who happened to hear the remark of the jeweler.

"I remarked," said Mr. Rothenberg, "that we got an elk."

"And you shot it, I suppose," same from Wertheim.

"No such claim," retorted Rothenberg. "You misconstrue my statement. You will remember I said 'we got an elk' and not 'shot an elk.'"

"Well, I'm still from Missouri and the only proof that I can see is the real tangible evidence. Word pictures don't go," came from Mr. Wertheim.

"Since you are so hard to convince, I am authorized by my watchmaker, Mr. Earl A. Wheeler, to say to you that you shall have the evidence in an allowance of choice elk meat that will make a satisfactory dinner for your party of four," returned Mr. Rothenberg, "and I never want to hear of you saying that I said that 'I shot an elk.' Mr. Wheeler killed one of the biggest bull elks that will be brought to Great Falls this season and there is no bull in the statement except bull elk, get that, please. Wheeler saw one elk, fired one shot, killed one bull which, as I figure the percentages, puts him in the 1003 per cent class."

The foregoing little colloquy tells the story of how it will happen that Mr. Wertheim and his lunch club associates, Herman G. Lescher, Fred L. Long and John A. Curry will feast on elk meat, at one of their usual sessions at the Gerald cafe this Tuesday morning at 11:30. No announcement has been made of who will be the toastmaster, but without question the honor will fall to Mr. Wertheim, as he proved to be a good spokesman for the party in getting the elk.

STANFORD SCHOOL DISTRICT HOLDS AN ENTERTAINING RECEPTION FOR TEACHERS. Special to The Daily Tribune. Stanford, Oct. 20.—On Saturday evening, at the Community hall, a reception was given to the teachers of this district. Light refreshments were dispensed and a pleasing part of the entertainment was the welcoming handshake and assurance of the hearty cooperation of the patrons, by representatives from the various schools in the district.

FUR FABRIC MAKES THIS MODISH COAT

By ELOISE.

Every woman is going to feel just a little bit "out of it" this season unless she can claim a fur wrap of some sort as her own. Or, if she does not own a real fur coat, she must have one made of fur fabric or a good imitation fur. The best thing about the coming winter is the fact that these fur fabrics are going to be every bit as fashionable as the genuine article and, much to the sorrow of many women, the fur fabrics will cost every bit as much as a good piece of the more usual peltries. Many of these fur fabrics are trimmed with real fur and the combination is often very striking.

This dress coat, for instance, is a combination of a fabric which represents minkskin so nicely that it can scarcely be distinguished from the real thing. It is trimmed with deep bands of chinchilla on the collar, cuffs and ripple pelum. This ripple pelum is a unique feature, for it gives the effect of a short, loose coat of the sport type with graceful swinging lines. In reality it is a long wrap extending to the hem of the coat and built on rather narrow lines, and it is the more pleasing of the fur trimming which makes the illusion possible.

BERGER TO VISIT BROTHER ON COAST

Ray Berger Goes to California to Join Brother Jack, a War Sufferer.

Going for a visit with his brother, Jack Berger, who has been on the Pacific coast for some time for the benefit of his health, Ray Berger, of the Berger department store, will leave Great Falls today for Santa Barbara, California. Jack Berger has been there most of the time since his return from France where he served for several months with the expeditionary forces, going first to enlist in the French government's transportation service prior to the time that the American government became an ally against Germany. His health broke under the strain of war and he has been unable since to get back to normal in his health.

Before starting for the coast, Mr. Berger shipped his automobile for use there and he leaves here after being certain the car would be at the destination by the time he arrives. The latest word had from Jack was of very encouraging character and his friends hope that he may soon be able to return to this altitude and enjoy his normal health.

DRIVERS OF AUTO DID NOT RUN AWAY

Men Whose Car Struck Culp Boy Carried Him Home and Will Pay Medical Bill.

According to J. A. Culp the owners of the automobile which struck and injured Waverly Culp, the 15-year-old son of Mr. Culp, on Sunday afternoon, were Woods brothers, but he does not know their first names. He says that error was made in saying that the men in the machine did not stop as they did stop and get out of the car which was trailing behind them, to carry the injured boy to his home at the Fair hotel where they urged that he be given every needed attention. Again on Monday, one of the boys came to inquire for the boy's welfare and stated that they proposed to pay for all medical attention. Mr. Culp said the boy was getting along quite satisfactorily yesterday.

STRONACH CARRIED GOOD INSURANCE

Chester Man Dies With Policy for $25,000 in the State Life Company.

As the result of business forethought which was evidenced by a life insurance policy in the State Life Insurance company of this city, the estate of Alex Stronach, who died as the result of being accidentally shot while out hunting a few days ago, will shortly receive a draft for $25,000. The policy was taken out only three years ago and the insured had paid but three premiums upon it when the fatal accident occurred as he was hunting near Chester.

Final details of getting the proof of the claim together were looked after Monday by F. E. Beatty, secretary and manager of the company and in a very short time the check to pay the loss will be handed to the authorized agent of the estate of Mr. Stronach. Incidentally, this is the largest death claim that has ever been presented to the local company and one of the largest carried in this section of the state. Mr. Stronach was comparatively young and the total premiums paid did not amount to $1,000, so that his action three years ago brought to the estate, even after allowing for interest on the premium money, almost $24,000.

Soda Fountain Taxes Are Being Collected

Deputy Collectors F. J. Buscher and T. R. Hazelrigg of the internal revenue office are busy this week checking up on the soda fountains, ice cream parlors and confectionery stores on the taxes due the government from such luxuries. The tax for such articles for the month of September is now due at the local office and all persons who have not yet paid this tax are asked to call at the local office to do so before October 31 and avoid the penalty. The internal revenue department does not collect these taxes.
