Mount Angela Notes

The appearance here, in recital, of the great Swiss pianist, Rudolph Ganz, was an important event in the lives of the pupils who were fortunate enough to hear him. About forty pupils all told, were in attendance.

The director of the School of Music, Louise Valverde Kelley, having known Mr. Ganz very well during her student days in Berlin was able to obtain the evening's program of the great artist and so prepare her students by a previous reading of much of the music that Mr. Ganz was to play.

Some of the students were delighted to hear from this wonderful artist a finished rendering of music they themselves are studying.

The monthly student play meetings have begun again in the music department. The first meeting was held Saturday forenoon. Some of the students taking part played very well, others showed that they were beginning to understand how to study their sonatas.

Among those playing particularly well were Lucy Bowman, who has had one year's work and her little six-year-old sister, Mildred, who after two months lessons played her little pieces very intelligently without notes. Some of the older girls who played well were Rose Hutcheson, Katherine Merkle and Margaret Pimperston.

Rev. Father Mills gave an interesting illustrated lecture in the auditorium, Sunday evening upon the historic and scenic spots of the British Isles, calling attention especially to those of his native land, Ireland.

Miss Kemper, assistant county superintendent of schools spent the afternoon of Armistice day in visiting the classes throughout the building.

The high school classes spent the sewing periods drafting patterns on Friday. The classes throughout the school appointed their committees to arrange and prepare the Thanksgiving program.

A tour of the shops and careful questioning of the managers as to what women are buying these days reveals the fact that the great demand is for coats. It seems that no matter what the earlier tendencies were, coats, as winter advances, become the leading topic of apparel conversation. This great demand for coats may be explained in part by the fact that women desire a change from the suit which has reigned so long. However, probably the most logical explanation is that the price of suits has mounted to the point where it is almost prohibitive and economy enters in as a factor in choosing the winter's wardrobe. Whatever the reason the new coats are being shown in some of the smartest styles. Some of the coats featured are developed from frosted chinchilla, chamelon cord, duvetyne, tinseltone and other soft wintry fabrics. Semi-bell shape cuffs and long graceful folds hung to a yoke back are the innovations. A type of coat that is popular this season is the wrap-coat which is a continuation of the Dolman style popular in the summer. In this garment is combined economy, utility and beauty. A particularly striking model of this coat is developed in soft brown davytyn with a deep collar of fur in a dark brown. A strip of the fur trims the bottom of the coat at the back and adds the final touch to the garment.
