REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

What Madge Did to Bring Dicky to Terms.

As the door of the hotel bedroom closed after us I wondered uneasily just what attitude Dicky meant to assume.

Despite his apparent nonchalance, I knew that he must be inwardly angry at my triumph in the matter of going north against his wishes. That the anger he would ordinarily have felt against Major Grantland for being anywhere within speaking distance of me had been banished by the officer's action in sending word of my whereabouts to him, I knew by his cordiality toward the army officer in the hotel restaurant. But I could not help but feel that my good-humored enough to keep from some caustic comment on the whole episode, and I nerved myself to take without retort whatever he might have to say.

He said nothing for several seconds, during which I took a sweater from my suitcase, placed it beside my heavy coat, and began to fold my traveling suit so that it might not be creased during the drive to Cedar Crest.

"Want your suitcase strapped again?" he asked curtly.

"If you please," I returned, equally laconic.

He strapped it, and I put the last things into my bag, then prowled around the room, as is always my custom when leaving a place, to see that I have packed everything. As I came back to the bag, preparatory to locking it, I saw that Dicky was gazing at me, the dancing, impish look still in his eyes, but I fancied that it was malicious instead of mischievous, and I knew it when he spoke.

"Well, Faithful Fido has his uses, after all!" he drawled.

"Dicky by the Ears."

I took all of my resolution to keep the promise I had just made myself. But though I was able to keep my words back, I could not help the resentful flush which spread over my face. Still, without a word, I locked my suitcase, put the key in the beaded purse I carried, and taking my suit, over my arm, my heavy coat over the other, I started for the door.

"Does it hurt its little feelings to have dratted big man called names?" Dicky tantalized, and I noticed that his voice was a trifle sharper than before. "Well, we won't do anything like that again. We'll only knock his block off if he butts in many more times around these diggings."

There was a distinct edge to his voice, now, and I recalled that my silence was infuriating him more than caustic words could have done, so cast about for the quickest way of placating him. I felt very much the doorman wife as I pondered, but it wasn't exactly a Patient Griselda method which I finally used.

With a quick movement I put my cloak and suit down on a chair, flew to the door, locked it, and thrust the key in my dress. Then, marching up to my husband, I grasped him by both ears, and bent his head toward mine so that I looked him squarely in the eyes.

"Madge Wins."

"What the dev—" Dicky began.

"The devil, indeed," I said. "I warn you that I'm a desperate woman. If you don't stop this persiflage, railway whatever you think it is—it isn't funny. I can tell you that—I'm going to—I don't know just what—I think my best plan would be to scream until the house detectives come and break down the door. Then I'll think up some story to tell 'em."

I knew that if I could get Dicky to laugh, everything would be all right. But for a long minute, while his eyes held mine, I trembled for the outcome of my silly ruse. Finally, however, after black anger had succeeded astonishment, I saw the sternness relax and the im-ish smile come back, and I knew that I had triumphed.

"You little devil!" he said, pulling my hands down from his ears, and roughly clasping me in his arms. "I've a notion to shake you until your hair comes down. What you deserve couldn't be told in three volumes. But I haven't time now to chastise you properly, so I'll keep the rod in pickle over your head until we get back home. Give me the key and let's get out of here."

I produced it, and he set the bags outside in the hall. He had not offered to kiss me, and I knew that though I had succeeded in bringing him to his senses concerning his boorish behavior, he had not entirely forgiven me for the way I had thwarted his authority.

"Have you forgotten something?" I asked for an instant I hesitated, my pride battling with the instinct that told me I ought to concede something also, even though I was not conscious of doing anything that did not lie within my right to do. Then I shut the door once again.

"Haven't you forgotten something?" I asked saucily, then I ran to him and put my arms around his neck. "If you think you're going to leave this room without kissing me you're very much mistaken," I murmured.

And he didn't.

FEAST OF EPIPHANY CELEBRATED TODAY

Burning of Christmas Greens Is Customary Observance of "Twelfth Night."

The feast of the Epiphany or "Little Christmas" will be celebrated this (Thursday) morning at the Episcopal church of the Incarnation with the distribution of the holy communion at 10:30 o'clock. January 6, sometimes known as "Twelfth Night," the twelfth night after Christmas, and the "Feast of the Magi" is celebrated in many parishes by the burning of the Christmas greens that the parish may have a prosperous year. A large Epiphany cake is also baked with a ring in it. He who finds the ring in his slice of cake is the Epiphany king. He should make a cross on the ceiling that all the more good fortune may come to his parish. The setting of all festivities should be by candlelight as the day is known also as the "Feast of the Candles." In England in the old days the celebration of the "Feast of Epiphany" rivaled that of Christmas. Plays and masques were often given then, hence the name of Shakespeare's play, "Twelfth Night."

CHURCH DEBT PAID, CONGREGATION TOLD

Annual Business Meeting of First Congregational Church Is Held.

At the annual business meeting of the First Congregational church held Wednesday evening at the church the building committee reported that the church was now free from debt and that the improvements made about a year ago to the church basement amounting to $4,000 had all been paid for. Reports were made by the various committees and routine business matters cared for.

More than 200 members and contributors of the church attended the dinner served in the sub-auditorium at 6:30 o'clock p. m. After the dinner a social hour was enjoyed for an hour and a half when the meeting was called to order and resolutions of appreciation for the services rendered the church and community by the Rev. R. K. MacIntosh during his residence here were read by J. C. Dow and adopted. The resolutions were drawn up by Scott Leavitt, B. P. McNair and John McKenzie. After the resolutions had been read and adopted, Dr. MacIntosh was presented with a copy of the latest edition of the Holy Bible bound in Morocco leather.

Shoe Fitting Topic of Lecture Tonight

A lecture on correct shoe fitting, illustrated with stereopticon views, will be given this (Thursday) evening in the Pfister-Pierce Bootery, 409 Central avenue by a shoe specialist from Chicago. A canvas screen will be hung across the rear of the store on which the pictures will be thrown. The public has been invited.

Firm of A. Nathan Now Nathan and Sons

The firm of A. Nathan, clothier, at 222 Central avenue, has become A. Nathan & Sons. Robert A. Nathan and Herbert A. Nathan, the two sons, have had a part in the management of the store for several years and now are given a place in the firm. The Nathan store was established in 1879 at Fort Benton, and later removed to Great Falls.

CLUB TO NAME NEW DIRECTORS ON JANUARY 14

Date Changed to Avoid Conflict With Pavlowa; New Election Method Adopted.

The annual meeting of the Great Falls Commercial club will be held in the main room of the Rainbow hotel Friday evening, January 14. The change of date from January 13 to 14 was made by the directors Wednesday afternoon so as not to conflict with the appearance of Pavlowa at the Grand opera house on the first mentioned date.

A new method will be used this year in the election of directors, corresponding to what is known in a general way as the American city method.

This method was outlined by speakers at the annual meeting of Commercial Club Secretaries held in Great Falls early in last year. It has been discussed informally by the directors on several occasions since that time. It was explained and recommended at the meeting Wednesday by President O. S. Wardner. After a discussion of details it was adopted by a unanimous vote of the directors.

The procedure outlined will be as follows: A committee of seven members of the Commercial club, all outside of the present board of directors, is named to select and place in nomination from the club membership 38 candidates for directors to be voted upon at the annual meeting. There will be an opportunity at the meeting for such other nominations as may be desired from the floor. The vote will then be taken for the choice of 19 directors from all of the candidates that have been named by the committee and from the floor. Printed ballots will be provided with blanks for the writing in of the names, if any, that may be placed in nomination from the floor of the meeting.

The 19 candidates receiving the highest number of votes will constitute the board of directors for 1921.

Nominations to Be Published.

The committee to select 38 candidates is asked to have the nominations prepared so that they may be published in The Leader of January 10 and The Tribune of January 11. This is done so that all members may know in advance the names that are proposed by the nominating committee and to decide whether or not further nominations are desired from the floor on the night of choosing a board of directors.

The nominating committee consists of H. A. Templeton, E. A. Newton, K. B. McIvor, J. H. Reid, Dr. C. J. Brasce, Charles R. Hansen and Fred Perra.

The directors Wednesday gave some time to a discussion of whether it would be possible and desirable to secure a reduced freight rate on hay shipments from Montana to Washington to enable the farmers of this state to dispose of their surplus of timothy and alfalfa for this season. Enough information did not appear to be at hand for definite action.

Shippers and farm organizations were asked to place further facts regarding tonnage that would move and possible markets in the hands of the traffic committee of the Commercial club so that this matter may be handled effectively if at all.

Unemployment Is Discussed.

Some attention was given to the subject of unemployment in the city. The conclusion was reached that it would not be wise or useful at this time to establish any new employment agency, but that everything possible should be done through existing agencies such as the Salvation Army and the American Legion, which have taken an interest in the matter to find as much employment as can be arranged for those who are out of work.

SOLDIER AID PLEA COMES TO ROTARY

Assistance in Securing Help for Disabled Ex-Servicemen Is Asked.

A communication from the National Disabled Soldiers' league calling attention to the fact that there were 24,000 American soldiers disabled by injury in the war and that so far, only 45,000 of them have received assistance in vocational training and otherwise to help them back into useful citizenship, was read at the meeting of the Rotary club Wednesday noon. The letter invited the assistance and co-operation of the club in this regard and was referred to the directors.

At the next Rotarian luncheon the wives and ladies of Rotarians will be invited and entertainment will be furnished by a committee of the wives of Rotarians who have volunteered to furnish the program.

Girls' Forum Debates; Candidate Is Admitted

Miss Iris Evans was voted into the high school girls' forum Wednesday night. Her entry brings the roll to 32. One of the two debates that were staged was whether "Fanciful" Should Be Allowed After Basketball Games" or not. The affirmative won. Those on the affirmative were Glenrose Honey and Sarah Haight and the negative consisted of Opal Stone and Julia Arthur. "Girls of the High School Should Wear Uniform Dresses" was the second subject. Mable Anderson and Myra Wiederman on the affirmative were victors. Helen Swanson and Lillian Carlson constituted the negative.

Miss Ruth Gosner gave a reading "Entertaining Big Sister's Beau."

H. S. Senate Debates; to Elect Next Week

"Ireland Should Be Made An Independent Republic" was the subject for debate at the regular meeting of the high school boys' senate Wednesday night. The affirmative consisted of Terrence Slattery and John Harris and Gordon Meisel and Albert Bronson constituted the negative. The affirmative won.

The members of the senate voted to elect officers for the next semester at the next meeting and because of examination the following week, there will be no meeting then.

The debate of next week will be "The English Cause of Lord's Ship and Be Abolished," according to W. Cummings Charteris, chairman of the executive committee. On the affirmative will be Ernest Igans and Russell Cox and the negative will consist of Maurice Clarke and Floyd Wergeland.

COASTING ACCIDENT DAMAGES SOUGHT

Father Named Guardian of Boy as Preliminary to Money Settlement.

William J. Tretheway was appointed guardian of his 13-year-old son in district court Wednesday as a step preliminary to a settlement with the Great Falls Dairy Products company for injuries received by the son November 13, while he was riding on a sled attached to the company's truck.

In the father's petition for appointment, it is stated that the boy had attached his sled to the truck with the driver's knowledge and that in rounding a turn he was thrown in the path of a passing automobile and injured about the head and face. Without assuming any liability, the company has agreed to pay the boy $300 for his injuries, according to the petition.

12 DISEASE CASES REPORTED IN DAY

Whooping Cough, Mumps, Measles and Tuberculosis Constituted Ailments.

Twelve cases of communicable diseases were reported to the public health department Wednesday and were placed on the list of ailments. Four of these were whooping cough, five mumps and three measles. One other case was reported and that was of a twelve months' old baby afflicted with tuberculosis.

Dr. Ayollus Dolan, county health officer, was called to Lim Wednesday afternoon to examine a case of suspected smallpox. Dr. Dolan stated that if it is a case of smallpox it is a very mild one and that until further developments he is undecided whether it is smallpox or chicken pox.

BANKS OF CITY ALL TO ELECT NEXT TUESDAY

Re-election of Officers and Directorates Expected at All Institutions.

Every bank in Great Falls will hold its annual meeting of stockholders and directors next Tuesday. Re-election of officers and, with one or two possible exceptions, re-election of the entire directorates, are expected.

Stockholders of the American Bank and Trust company will be guests at a dinner at the Park hotel Tuesday night at 6 o'clock, at which time its elections will be held. All the other financial institutions of the city have called their meetings to be held "between 10 in the morning and 4 o'clock in the afternoon" and will probably take their official action immediately after the close of the business day.

Swedish Baptists Hold Prayer Week

Special services in observance of the week of prayer have been held each evening this week and will continue to be held on Thursday and Friday evenings at the Swedish Baptist church at the corner of Second avenue and Seventh street north. Arrangements have been made to have a different speaker at each evening's service and a good musical program. There will be no service on Saturday night.
