His Love Song Sensation Of Army Officer's Case

Mrs. Bessie Merriam and Colonel Clarence Murphy.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 9.—(Special)—One of the biggest sensations of the Merriam divorce case, which is stirring army circles here, is the song introduced by the attorneys for Captain Merriam, the complainant, to show that Colonel Clarence Murphy, the author of the song, was on intimate terms with Mrs. Merriam while the Merriams were stationed at Jackson Barracks, near New Orleans. Colonel Murphy whose name has been linked with that of Mrs. Merriam by the complainant, traveled all the way from Paris to testify in the wife's behalf. He had declared emphatically that he was only a friend of Mrs. Merriam when he was shown the song and asked to read it. The colonel then read "At the Grindin' of the Cane," to the accompaniment of titters from a hundred amused spectators.

Gifted with a low musical voice, with just a hint of the delightful accent of the southern, the colonel was at his best when he read the chorus: An' 'twas drip, drip, drip, Oh! the juice was sweet to sip, But nothin' to the sweetness of a roay leanin' lip. An' 'twas drip, drip, drip, Oh! the juice was sweet to sip, But nothin' to the sweetness of a roay leanin' lip.

CLOSING UP RANKS IN THE CURRENCY MEASURE CONTEST

Assaults from Boston Bankers Have Served to Bring the Democrats Together.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 9.—Concerted defense by administration forces against criticisms of the currency reform bill by bankers in the Boston convention, and against what is alleged to be organized effort to hinder its consideration and passage, served to clear the air today and inspire new confidence in democratic circles.

The president let it be known to callers that he did not think the Boston views as they bore on the currency bill in the senate, represented public sentiment in the country. In his view, the attacks from Boston are from men who are acting sincerely, but who, as individuals, refuse to yield control of the country's financial system.

The day developed the following facts: That no effort will be made to make the currency bill a party measure unless it is impossible to get it through any other way; that the criticism of the bankers has tended to solidify democratic support of the bill.

CLOSELY MATCHED

KENOSHA, Oct. 9.—Mike Gibbons of St. Paul, and Spike Kelly, of Chicago boxed ten rounds tonight. It was about an even thing between the aspirants for the welterweight title.

"At the Grindin' of the Cane" was composed by Colonel Murphy and dedicated to Mrs. Bessie Merriam while he was showering attentions on the army woman at Jackson Barracks near New Orleans, according to Attorney Walter H. Linforth.

Colonel Murphy denied that Mrs. Merriam was the "Essie" referred to in the dedication, but failed to name a substitute. Nor did the colonel explain away the French inscription on the face of the love song, which translated, means "For thee, my sweetheart," and followed by the word "Bessie" and the colonel's initial "C." In a sub-dedication leaf is printed, "To B. who lives where the sugar cane grows."

The words of the song are couched in tenderness. The music is ravishing, dreamy and surcharged with the romance of the southland.

The attorneys for Captain Merriam expected to prove by linking Colonel Murphy and Mrs. Merriam together in this song that Murphy had a lasting affection for her.

Mrs. Merriam also emphatically denied that the song was dedicated to her. A handwriting expert testified that the words written on the face of the song were in the handwriting of Mrs. Merriam.

BUSH PUTS SENSATIONAL GAME OVER FOR PHILLIES --NEW STAR NOT TWENTY

Giants Were Unable to Negotiate Boy—His Pitching Not Phenomenal, But Speed and Break Could Not Be Solved on Short Acquaintance—Manager to Get But Five Runs from Delivery.

Team Mates Put Over Splendid Support, But with Fans Accord the Big End of Victory in the Third Game of the World Series, Score 8 to 2, to the Brilliant Work of the Young Pitcher.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—A new star blazed forth in the World Series of the baseball firmament today, when Leslie Bush pitched the Philadelphia Athletics to victory over the New York Giants in the third game for the championship.

The score was 8 to 2. Bush materially aided his rush to the pedestal of baseball fame by the savage rattling of his teammates, but the major portion of the glory accorded, by both fans and players, is to the youngster who started diamond yesterday with his speed and control.

While his pitching was not as spectacular as that of the veterans Mathewson and Plank yesterday, his box work was of a caliber that entitled him to a niche alongside Hugh Bennett, of the Boston Red Sox, and "Rube" Adams of the Pittsburgh Pirates; who performed similar feats of twirling valor in past World Series.

So effective was Bush's pitching that the Giants secured but five hits, three of these being of the scratch variety. Only three of twenty-seven putouts are credited to the Athletics made out of a stretch when the Giants did not drive the ball out of the diamond.

Bush made a leap into the line light under most favorable circumstances for his hand hitting teammates tore into Tesreau with a fusillade of raps in the first two innings which netted five runs and relieved the youngster in his pitching with a margin of safety.

This was particularly true with the first four Athletics of Mack's batting list.

Murphy, Oldring, Collins and Baker, between them, made nine of twelve hits recorded for Philadelphia. These nine hits scored seven of the eight runs. The eighth run was a terrific home-run drive by Cateher Schang.

In contrast to this vigorous assault on offerings of Tesreau and Crandall, five hits, scattered throughout nine innings, marked the Giants' efforts with the ash.

Not a single National League secured two hits, and Schafar's two batters was the only wallop good for more than one base.

The Athletics' latest twirling star, who will not be 20 years old until November 27, did not pitch phenomenal ball, but his delivery had entirely too much speed and break for the Giants to grow familiar with during the introduction of the Brainard, Minn., pitcher.

Bush was just wild enough to keep the New York batters guessing. His quick changes of pace and delivery added handicaps to the Giants when at the plate. Bush walked four batters and hit a fifth, and each time faltered. His nerve and the brilliant fielding of his teammates soon lifted him back to safety.

Connie Mack had both Bush and Schwakey warming up before the game, but it was not hard to detect that Bush was the first choice of the Philadelphia manager.

A vast crowd gave big Jeff Tesreau cheers as he went into the box. Eddie Murphy, the first batter up for the Athletics, drove the third ball pitched at Fletcher, who threw him out by an eyelash. Oldring leaped a single into center. Collins hit to center, jutting Oldring on third. Then came Baker.

Tesreau's first two pitches were strikes near Baker's knees; the next ball just suited the home-run hitter, who smashed a hard single to left, scoring Oldring for the first run of the game. Collins and Baker worked a double steal, McLean in his anxiety dropping the ball at the plate. McLean struck out.

Then the game was practically won.

HICKEY SAYS CRITICISM IS UNDESERVED

Declares Road Work Being Done by Supervisors to Best Possible Advantage—Permanent Results Object

Find Cost Maybe More, but Cheapest in End—System as Planned Will Serve all of County—Critics Jealous

Between the people of Douglas and the board of supervisors, the Forrest Ranch to Gleeson road has become a bone of contention. While the two Douglas papers disagree on some points, one charging offenses and the other denying, nevertheless both papers claim that the road fund has not been used to the best advantage in this road construction.

The Daily International Wednesday evening published an editorial finding fault with the methods being pursued by the board of supervisors and generally criticizing methods of road building being employed by the board. Chairman Hickey of the board of supervisors believes that an answer is due to the statements made in the editorial and yesterday gave an interview on the subject to a representative of the Review.

"The Douglas International editorially criticizes the board of supervisors for building the road from Forest Ranch to Gleeson by day labor. When we saw what a failure contract work was on the Douglas state highway, what were we to do?" asked Mr. Hickey. "That road cost $67,000 for about 25 miles, and will cost $28,000 more to make it a real highway. We believed we could do better by day labor and we are trying it. Even if it should cost $65,000 to build this road from Forest Ranch through Gleeson to Wilcox, it would be cheaper than was the Douglas highway, and I do not expect it to cost that much."

"If any one will look over the road work that has been done, continued Mr. Hickey, they will see where the cost comes in. The Douglas road was not properly planned, and drainage is what we have looked after in the new road work. Every engineer who has visited the work has said that this is the best piece of road in Arizona. The culverts, street bridges, concrete work and masonry have cost $15,000. If that had been done with the Douglas road it would not be necessary to spend $28,000 more to make it a road. We are trying to build a permanent road. That should be recognized at the outset."

"In the past, road making in this county has merely consisted of grubbing out and working over and putting in a few culverts and a very occasional bridge. The result has been that it has cost as much after each rainy season to put them in shape as it did to make them. Hundreds of thousands of dollars have been spent on the roads of this county, with mighty little to show for it. We want to give them some roads that will be good next year and the year after and the year after that."

"In the east and in California and Oregon they think nothing of spending $10,000 to $15,000 per mile in building roads. Here in Arizona we have never had any really good roads. The people want them but they do not know how much they cost. We are spending much less per mile in this construction than they spend in the old states and we are building a road that will be as good or better. It will be 20 feet wide in built up and then rolled down, will be crowned with crushed rock and more rolling and finally covered with screenings and thoroughly rolled. That will give it a water proof surface and as it is ditched at the sides, built high over low places, drained and bridged and has a number of culverts, the waters will not run across and wash it away. That is where it differs from the Douglas road."

Mr. Gates says it could be built cheaper by contract. We refer him again to the Douglas road. During the year we will try some contract
