REVENUE BILL WILL PROBABLY BE VOTED THROUGH THE HOUSE

All Debate On Measure Finished And Passage Comes Today—Republicans Are Showing Opposition Strongly In House

WASHINGTON, Sept. 24.—Debate on the administration war revenue bill was in full swing when the house adjourned tonight with passage tomorrow by an overwhelming majority fully assured.

The measure was taken up under special rule limiting debate to seven hours and barring amendment, over vigorous opposition from Republicans and Progressives and supported by thirty Democrats. Democratic Leader Underwood and Representative Payne of New York ranking Republican members of the ways and means committee opened the discussion after a fight over the rule.

Underwood said the country is facing a world-wide disturbance of business conditions and "suffering in a business way more than it ever suffered since the war between the states," he said the pending bill is necessary to meet the exigency over which the government had no control—the European war. Payne said the Democratic tariff is responsible for financial troubles.

Women Worth While

MRS MITCHELL PALMER

(By Selene Armstrong Harmon.)

What woman, given her choice between an automobile and a garden would choose the garden? Not one. In this day of woman's unrest, unless she is either born to unworldliness or had rebelled! Yet that is what Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer, wife of Representative Palmer of Pennsylvania, did. She chose the garden. Just to let this tale point a moral, and to prove that virtue is not always its only reward, it may be mentioned in passing that she got the automobile later!

But back to the garden. If Mrs. Palmer, who is one of the most prominent women of the present Democratic administration, has a hobby besides her husband, her child and her home, it is that garden. And if Representative Palmer has a hobby besides the Democratic party, it is also the old-fashioned garden that blooms nearly the year around at their home on the outskirts of Stroudsburg, Pennsylvania.

"I wish," says Mrs. Palmer, "that more women these days could know the healthful, joyous occupation of gardening. A few years ago, my husband offered me a choice between a garden and an automobile, and I knew at once which I wanted most. The Western windows of our home at Stroudsburg overlooked a dirt heap. We had a landscape gardener come and advise with us about it. This sounds expensive, I know, but it did not prove to be so. A garden is a luxury which need not be beyond the woman of average means, and she and her children will be repaid a hundred fold in health and enjoyment for what money and time she may expend upon it.

"Well, that landscape gardener, my husband and I put our heads together. You should see that dirt heap now! We decided that it would be both instructive and picturesque to make an old-fashioned garden. We planted it so that flowers would be blooming there throughout as much of the year as the climate would permit, only the fragrant, half forgotten blossoms that our grandmothers loved."

Before her marriage, Mrs. Palmer was Miss Roberta Bartlett Dixon, of Maryland. Her girlhood days were spent in a beautiful old colonial house on the eastern shore of the state, the place having been in the Dixon family for over two hundred years. Representative and Mrs. Palmer, and their little daughter, Mary Dixon, usually spent Christmas at the Dixon homestead on the shore, where twenty-two other members of the immediate family gather for an annual celebration.
